PREFACE.

The inscriptions here collected are of great interest, being entirely Jaina; and such is their literary merit that the study of them may be pronounced an education in itself, for poets of repute, among whom are named Sujanôttamsa, Arhad-dâsa and Manga Râja, have taken part in their composition. They cover a very extended period, even from the remote time of Chandra Gupta, the earliest authenticated date in Indian history, down to the modern year 1830. Next to the unique inscription No. 1, which introduces us to Bhadrabâhu and Chandra Gupta, and relates the story of the first settlement of the Jains at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa, there is none of higher interest, whether from its style or from the fullness and novelty of its contents, than No. 54. And the information therein contained regarding the Jaina hierarchy and literature is well supplemented by Nos. 105, 108 and others. For purposes of history we have inscriptions giving us fresh details of great importance relating to the rise and growth in power of the Ganga kings, the death of the last of the Râshṭrakûṭas, the establishment and expansion of the Hoysaḷa kingdom, the supremacy of the Vijayanagar empire, and lastly the reign of the Mysore royal house.

The work has given far more trouble and been much longer in hand than I anticipated when first undertaking it in 1885. But owing to the untrustworthy nature of the copies supplied to me, which were made for the local District authorities in 1872, everything had to be done afresh. With very few exceptions the inscriptions are in Haḷe Kannaḍa characters, and are engraved either on the rough horizontal face of the rock, where they remain exposed to every vicissitude, or on prepared slabs or pillars of black hornblende, protected from the weather by maṇḍapas erected over them. As usual the inscriptions run on with few breaks or indications of stops from end to end in one unbroken expanse of type. To facilitate reading, the verses and half verses have been marked in the copies, and in those in Roman characters the contents have been arranged so as to show the style. In combined letters the anusvâra and nasals are used indiscriminately without any rule in the originals. The Kannaḍa copies show them as they are, but in the Roman characters the nasal has been uniformly employed, as otherwise ambiguous or strange looking words result, such as niṃna for ninna, Gaṃga for Ganga, &c., which are apt to mislead.

My sincere thanks are due for assistance received from Brahma Sûri S'âstri, distinguished as the most learned Jain in the South; also to Sahukâr Barmmana, ever ready to help strangers. The drawings are by Namassivâyam Pillai, and the photo-lithographs by J. D. P. Chinnappa, both of my office.

INTRODUCTION.

The eye of the traveller who is passing along the trunk road leading from Bangalore to the Western Coast through the Manjarâbâd ghât, is arrested on approaching Channarâyapaṭṇa by a conspicuous hill a few miles to the south, bearing on its summit what appears at first be a column, but which on drawing nearer proves to be a colossal statue in the human form. This striking and unusual object, which is visible for miles around, marks the site of one of the most interesting spots in the south of India, and one whose epigraphic records carry us back to the very earliest authentic period of Indian history, anterior in fact even to the famous edicts of Asôka, the oldest inscriptions in the country. This noted place is moreover the chief seat of a religious sect at one time foremost in power and influence, whose origin is of higher antiquity than that of Buddhism.

S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa, or Beḷgoḷa of the Jains[1], the place in question, derives its name from Haḷe Kannaḍa beḷ, white, and koḷa (by euphony goḷa), pond, in allusion to the splendid large tank in the middle of the place. The name also appears in the forms Beḷguḷa, Beḷuguḷa and Beḷuguḷa, which are merely variants of the same. The Sanskrit equivalents are Dhavaḷa-sarôvara (as in No. 108), Dhavaḷa-sarasa and Svêta-sarôvara (as in No 54). The tank is also said (in No. 141) to be called Bhû-dêvî-maṅgalâdarśa-kalyâṇi, the mirror of good fortune to the Earth goddess. The place is further designated Suranagara or Surapura, city of the gods, (No. 105)[2]; and Gommaṭapura, the city of Gommaṭa (No. 137). It is also called a tirtha, or holy place (No. 136).

It is a large village situated in 12°51′ north latitude and 76°33′ east longitude[3], in the Channarâyapaṭṇa Taluq of the Hassan District of the Mysore State. The village lies, towards their eastern bases, between two prominent rocky hills, on the highest or southern of which, 3,347 feet above the level of the sea and about 470 feet above the plain at its foot, stands the colossal image of Gommaṭêśvara, besides many sacred buildings. On the lower or northern hill, 3,052 feet above the level of the sea, are the most ancient inscriptions and the most numerous bastis. The maṭha or monastery of the Jaina guru and several more bastis are in the town below.

The two hills are commonly spoken of as the doḍḍa beṭṭa, or big hill, and the chikka beṭṭa, or little hill, but they have the names Vindhya-giri and Chandra-giri (see No. 141) Through some popular misconception the former is called Indra-giri, due, it is said, to a rhyme about an Indragiri and a Chandragiri with a shining lake between, which applies to a place in the neighbourhood of Gerasoppe but was supposed to indicate Beḷgoḷa. The smaller hill derives its name of Chandra from the fact that Chandra Gupta was the first of the ṛishis who lived and performed penance there[4]. The name Vindhya given to the larger hill is said to be derived from viṃ, spirit, and dhyâ, meditation, as being the spot consecrated by ṛishis absorbed in meditation on the Supreme Spirit.

On the evidence of inscriptions the original occupation of the place was due to Bhadrabâhu, who, while leading a migration of Jains to the south, became conscious that his end was approaching and remained here (on the smaller hill) to die, ministered to in his last moments by one single disciple,

1 S'ravaṇa=S'ramaṇa, a Bauddha or Jaina ascetic. Probably the same as the Sarmanas of the Greek writers. This name prefixed to Beḷgoḷa distinguishes it from two other Beḷgoḷas in the same neighbourhood, namely Haḷe Beḷgoḷa and Kôḍi Beḷgoḷa.

Chandra Gupta. As Bhadrabâhu is alleged to have been the last of the śruta-kêvalis and Chandra Gupta no other than the celebrated Maurya emperor—the Sandrokottos of the Greek historians—who reigned from 315 to 291 B. C., these events must be assigned to a date somewhere about 290 B. C.

The earliest record of occurrences so interesting from their connection with that most important period when India first came into contact with Europe is found in inscription No. 1[5], and is supported by the statements in Nos. 17, 40, 54 and 108, as well as by tradition and by inscriptions elsewhere[6]. A cave on the same hill, called Bhadrabâhu's cave, is also pointed out as the place in which he died, and his footprints therein are an object of reverence (see No. 71). It is further evident that the small and centrally situated Chandra Gupta basti, which fronts straight to the Bhadrabâhu inscription (No. 1), is the most ancient of the various temples and buildings on the hill, and that towards it as to the sole object of attraction there at that time were directed the eyes of those holy men and women the memorials of whose penance form the series of early rock inscriptions Nos. 2 to 21, 23 and 26 to 35, all of which require to be read with the face directed towards it. They are in short the links connecting the remote antiquity of Bhadrabâhu and Chandragupta with the 10th century A. D. when Sravaṇa Belgoḷa under the Gaṅga kings emerged into that greater publicity and distinction it thereafter enjoyed under the Hoysaḷa and succeeding dynasties.

In proceeding to give an account of the history and antiquities of the place as derived from its monuments and epigraphical records the most convenient plan will be to follow the inscriptions, taking them as nearly as possible in their chronological order.

The oldest, as already stated, are the rock inscriptions which have been grouped together as Nos. 1 to 35.[7] All these are in Pûrvada Haḷe Kannaḍa characters from a few inches to a foot or more long. Nos. 1, 15 and 29 are in the Sanskrit language, the remainder in Haḷe Kannaḍa. They are scored about in all directions on the surface of the rock, but chiefly in a rough semi-circle at various distances from the south-west to the north-east of the Chandra Gupta basti, facing which they must be read. From their contents it is evident that with two or three exceptions they mark the spots where Jaina devotees procured death by fasting, in performance of a vow for that purpose called by the singular name of sallêkhana

Before these inscriptions were deciphered by me no one had succeeded in reading them nor was even the object with which they were engraved known, so completely had all knowledge of the ancient alphabets been lost, although the Jains to this day write in what would be called an old form of character. The first I managed to decipher was No. 26, and this gave the key from which some of the shorter ones among Nos. 4 to 16 were made out[8]. Of No. 1 no copy had been attempted[9] and several of the others were so jumbled up into one another that a visit to the place was necessary in order to inspect the originals. Then it was that I discovered No. 1 and no little excitement, I remember, was occasioned as the contents began to slowly unfold themselves.

[9] The copies I had of others were made in 1872, under the direction of the local authorities. With well-intentioned (but barbarous) zeal the numbers of the groups copied were cut into the rock in English figures. For the benefit of visitors who may be misled or puzzled by these figures the corresponding numbers of the actual inscriptions as now deciphered are here given.

This inscription No. 1, being the oldest and relating to the origin of the settlement, we may now first proceed to consider. It states that Bhadrabâhu svâmi, descended in the line of the gaṇadhara Gautama in common with thirteen others named, having foretold in Ujjayinî, also called Śrî-Viśâlâ, the approach of a dreadful famine which would last for twelve years, the whole saṅgha or Jaina religious brotherhood forsook the northern regions and under his leadership migrated to the south. They had reached a populous and prosperous region, evidently the north-western districts of the present Mysore country, when on approaching a wild mountain named Kaṭavapra[10] (the smaller hill) the rishi felt his end drawing nigh. He therefore sent on all his followers and, remaining behind with only one disciple, performed the last rites of a sannyâsi and there died.

This seems a very circumstantial account and Bhadrabâhu is an illustrious name in the Jaina annals. The following traditions regarding him, which throw light on the events mentioned in this inscription, are taken from the Râjâvaḷi-kathe, a compendium of Jaina history, legends and chronology, drawn up early in the present century for Dêviramma, a lady of the Mysore royal family, by Dêvachandra, of the Jaina establishment at Maleyûr. The work is in the Kannaḍa language[1] and written on palmyra leaves.

The birth and education of Bhadrabâhu were on this wise:—While Padmaratha was reigning in the city of Kôṭikapura, in Pundra Varddhana[2] in Bharata Khaṇḍa, his queen Padmaśrî had for her purôhita a Brahman named Sôma S'armma, whose wife, named Sômaśrî, bore a son. His father, from an inspection of the child's horoscope, perceiving that he would become a great upholder of the Jaina faith, named him Bhadrabâhu, and performed the initiatory ceremonies of chaula and upanayana according to the Jaina ritual. One day when Bhadrabâhu, being then seven years of age, was at play with other children, Gôvarddhana Mahâmuni—who, accompanied by Vishṇu, Nandimitra and Aparâjita, all four being śruta-kêvalis, and with five hundred disciples, had come to Kôṭikapura in order to do reverence at the tomb of Jambusvâmi—passed by. Looking on Bhadrabâhu, the muni discerned from his lucky marks that he was destined to be the last of the śruta-kêvalis. He therefore took the boy by the hand and conducting him to his father, offered to take charge of him and bring him up in all wisdom. Sôma S'armma, prostrating himself, consented, relating how he had perceived at the boy's birth that he would become a distinguished Jaina. But his mother Sômaśrî begged that before the dîkshe was performed she might see her son again. To this Gôvarddhana-svâmi agreeing, took Bhadrabâhu with him, and made arrangements for his board and lodging in the house of Aksha S'ravaka.

[10] Having its sides matted with grass. The name appears in Haḷe Kannaḍa as Kaḷbappu and Kaḷbappira (see Nos. 3, 23, 34 and 35).

[1] The author at the beginning of his work states that he will write in Hosa Kannaḍa. But at the end of the work he has the following verse:—

Haḷe-Gannaḍa beḷu-Gannaḍa |
vaḷa-Gannaḍav achcha-Gannaḍam purat-embudu |
teḷu-Gannaḍa mis'radin ile- |
n ileyoḷa sat-purushar ôdi kêḷvudu satatam |

'This, in which old Kannaḍa, white Kannaḍa, local Kannaḍa, pure Kannaḍa, and that called new are mingled into clear Kannaḍa,—may good men in the world ever read and listen to.'

Haḷe-Gannaḍa or Haḷe Kannaḍa is the ancient and early form of the language. Beḷu-Gannaḍa or white Kannaḍa seems to refer to a belief of the Jains who attribute colour to sound and say that it is white. (See Kêśi Râja's S'abdamaṇidarpaṇa, v. 9—S'abda-dravyam jaminiganga s'vêtam, v. 34—S'abdam janyiengum dhavaḷa-varnam akshara-rûpam.) Vaḷa-Gannaḍa or oḷa-dêśa Kannaḍa refers to the words called dêśyas or to local peculiarities and dialects. Achcha-Gannaḍa is the well-known term for pure Kannaḍa: the well of Kannaḍa undefiled. Posa-Gannaḍa or Hosa Kannaḍa is the new or modern Kannaḍa. Teḷu-Gannaḍa, clear, transparent Kannaḍa (conf. derivation of the name Telugu from the same root tel).

Since the above was written an old work named Subhâshita or Nîti kanda has been obtained, which gives a somewhat similar account of the composition of Kannaḍa.

oḷu-Gannaḍa beḷu-Gannaḍa |
teḷu-Gannaḍav achcha-Gannaḍam Sakkajanmam |
ele-Gannaḍa haḷe-Gannaḍa |
sale dêśiyak eṇey ad unte Kannaḍak ileyoḷ ||

'Local (or, home) Kannaḍa, white Kannaḍa, clear Kannaḍa, pure Kannaḍa, and the derivatives from Sanskrit, young (or, new) Kannaḍa, old Kannaḍa, being included in the language of the country, is there any equal to Kannaḍa in the world?'

[2] Identified by General Cunningham originally with Pubna in Bengal, Anc. Geog. Ind., 480; but subsequently with Mahâsthân, to the north of Bôgra in the same country. Arch. Surv. Rep. XV., p., 104 and 110.

Through the svâmi's instruction he acquired a knowledge of the four great branches of learning—yôgini, saṅgini, prajñâni and prajñapti—of the vêda of the four anuyôga,[3] of grammar and the fourteen pûrvas. Then, feeling a strong desire for renunciation of family, body and pleasure, he begged for dîkshe, on which the svâmi sent him first to see his father and mother. While he was at the court, the king showed him a writing which no one could understand and he at once interpreted it[4], thus giving a satisfactory proof of his learning and discernment. Having obtained the consent of his parents, he took dîkshe and by the practice of jñâna, dhyâna, tapas and samyama became an âchârya. And Gôvarddhana S'ruta-Kêvali went to the world of gods./

The next appearance of Bhadrabâhu in the history brings us to the events mentioned in the inscription :—And Chandra-Gupta, the king of Pâṭaliputra, on the night of full moon in the month Kârttika, had sixteen dreams. He dreamed that he saw :—1. The sun setting. 2. A branch of the kalpa-vṛiksha break off and fall. 3. A divine car descending in the sky and returning. 4. The disk of the moon sundered. 5. Black elephants fighting. 6. Fireflies shining in the twilight. 7. A dried up lake. 8. Smoke filling all the air. 9. An ape sitting on a throne. 10. A dog eating the pâyasa out of a golden bowl. 11. Young bulls labouring. 12. Kshattriya boys riding on donkeys. 13. Monkeys scaring away swans. 14. Calves jumping over the sea. 15. Foxes pursuing old oxen. 16. A twelve-headed serpent approaching.

The king arose next day much troubled in mind on account of these visions. After performing the morning ceremonies, he entered the council-hall, when the keeper of the royal garden appeared with the intelligence that Bhadrabâhu Muni, travelling over many countries, had arrived there. The king with all his councillors immediately went forth to do him reverence, and after receiving religious instruction, informed him of the dreams.

Bhadrabâhu's interpretation of them was, in short, as follows :—1. All knowledge will be darkened. 2. The Jaina religion will decline, and your successors on the throne will not take dîkshe. 3. The heavenly beings will not henceforth visit the Bharata kshêtra. 4. The Jainas will be split into sects. 5. The clouds will not give seasonable rain and the crops will be poor. 6. True knowledge being lost, a few sparks will glimmer with a feeble light. 7. Âryakhaṇḍa will be destitute of Jaina doctrine and falsehood increase. 8. The evil will prevail and goodness be hidden. 9. The vile, the low-born and the wicked will acquire power. 10. Kings, not content with a sixth share, will introduce land-rent and, demanding twice and thrice the amount, oppress their subjects. 11. The young will form religious purposes, but forsake them when old. 12. Kings of high descent will associate with the base. 13. The low will torment the noble and try to reduce them to the same level. 14. Kings will assist in oppressing the people by levying customs-duties and other unlawful taxes. 15. The low, with hollow compliments, will get rid of the noble, the good and the wise. 16. Twelve years of dearth and famine will come upon this land.

[3] The literature of the Digambaras is divided into four Vêdas, viz —

(1.) The Prathamânuyôga, which comprises all works on their Itihâsa, their legends and history; to this division belong the twenty four Purâṇas, which give the lives of the twenty four Tîrthaṅkaras, the Uttara purâṇa, Harivams'a-purâṇa, &c.

(2.) The Karaṇânuyôga, which includes the works describing the origin and the order of the universe, e. g. Trilôkasâra, Trilôka-bhâshaṇa, Jôtisha-sâra, Bija-gaṇita, Chandraprajñapti, Sûrya-prajñapti, &c.

(3.) The Darsyânuyôga, which treats of their doctrine or philosophy. Some of the chief works belonging to it are the Gômaṭasâra, Pravachanasâra, Ashṭasahasri, Pramêyakamala-Mârtaṇḍa, Râjavarttika, &c.

(4.) The Charaṇânuyôga, which treats of the âchâra, customs, worship, &c. To this subdivision belong the Trivarṇâchâra, Mûlâchâra, Jôgamâla, Ashṭapâhuḍa, Padmânanda-pachchisi, &c. (DR. BUHLER, Ind. Ant. VII, 28.)

[4] Râja bhavanadoḷu patrâlambanamam mâḍidud adan âryyaṃ bhêdisal nereyadd iral adaṃ Bhadrabâhu nôḍe tiḷid uvurâdoḍe ....

One day soon after, when Bhadrabâhu had despatched his disciples in various directions to beg for alms, himself went and stood before a house where was an infant crying in its cradle. So loud were its cries that although he called out twelve times no one heeded. From this sign he knew that the twelve years' famine had commenced. And the king's ministers offered many sacrifices to avert the calamity, but Chandra-Gupta, to atone for their sin in taking life, abdicated in favour of his son Simha Sêna and taking dîkshe, joined himself to Bhadrabâhu.

Simha Sêna's ministers advised him to send for Nammâlva Bhantika and to perform a great yajña. But the Mûla (Jaina) Brahmans were called and a long discussion ensued regarding the innocence or sinfulness of animal sacrifices, when the advocates of the latter doctrine prevailed.

On the other hand, Bhadrabâhu, predicting that all rain and cultivation would cease from the Vindhya mountains as far as the Nîlagiris; that the people would die of starvation; and that those who remained there would have their faith corrupted—collected a body of twelve thousand disciples and went southwards.

On coming to a certain hill he perceived that his end was approaching. He therefore gave upadêśa to Viśâkha muni, and committing all the disciples to his care, sent them on under his guidance to the Chôḷa and Pâṇḍya countries. Chandra-Gupta alone received permission to remain, who, on his master's death, performed the funeral rites in a cave and there abode, worshipping his footprints.

Meanwhile Viśâkhâchârya, taking with him all the people, worshipping the Jaina bimba (or images) of the various Jinâlayas in the villages and towns on the way, and milking the nectar of dharmma to the Jainas in those places, dwelt in vihâras in the Chôḷa maṇḍala.

The narrative then returns to the scene of the famine and describes the sufferings of the Jainas who had remained behind under Sthûlabhadra muni and others. Religious observances were neglected and scruples about food disregarded. All the grain was consumed; no leaves, flowers, fruit, berries, roots, bulbs, or seeds were left; and the people, wandering here and there in search of food, perished.

And when the twelve years of famine were ended, Viśâkhâchâri, with the twelve thousand disciples, turned northwards, and entering the Karṇâṭaka country, journeyed to the cave in which his guru Bhadrabâhu had expired. There he found Chandra-Gupta muni engaged in the worship of the footprints, his hair grown into a great mass. The latter, on seeing Viśâkha muni, rose and coming forward did obeisance, which he did not return, considering that Chandra-Gupta was corrupted by feeding on roots and berries during the famine. But accepting the obeisance, he learned from him the particulars regarding Bhadrabâhu's end. Fasting that day, they prepared next morning for a long journey, as they could not get food in that uninhabited country. But Chandra-Gupta offered to conduct them to a town in the forest close by. They wondering followed, and were entertained with the best of food by the S'ravakas there. But on their way back to the cave a Brahmachâri, discovering that he had left his pot behind in the town, returned to fetch it. What was his surprise to find the town vanished and his pot hanging on the branch of a tree! Viśâkhâchâri then perceived that Chandra-Gupta had resorted to magic to supply them with food; so, after extracting the hairs of Chandra-Gupta's matted locks, he gave him absolution (prâyaśchitta). And absolving himself and his disciples for partaking of that magical food, all went their ways.[5]

And after a time a king named Bhâskara, the son of Simha Sêna, came with all his forces for the purpose of worshipping at the place of Bhadrabâhu's decease, and doing obeisance to Chandra-Gupta, his guru and grandfather. There he set up some chaityâlayas and, remaining for many days, built near the hill a city, which was named Beḷgoḷa.

[5] A similar narrative of all the events relating to Bhadrabâhu and Chandra-Gupta is given in a well written Sanskrit work called Bhadrabâhu Charitam, by Ratnanandi, whose guru was Lalita-kîrtti. If, as seems likely, the latter was the same as is mentioned in connection with the image at Kârkala (see farther on), this book would belong to about 1450 A.D.

The death of Chandra-Gupta at the same spot is subsequently related.

Such is the tradition as regards Bhadrabâhu and his connection with Beḷgoḷa. It appears therefore that he was the last of the S'ruta-Kêvalis, and No. 108 asserts the same. This statement is supported by several authorities.

Wilson says—"The succession of Jaina teachers is always deduced from Mahâvîra, through his disciple Sudharma. Of the rest, all but Gautama died before their master, and Gautama survived him but a month, which he spent in penance and fasting. Sudharma, therefore, was the only one who remained competent to impart instruction. His pupil was Jambusvâmi, the last of the Kêvalis, or possessors of true wisdom: six teachers follow, termed S'ruta-Kêvalis, or hearers of the first masters, and then seven others, Dasapûrvis, from having been taught the works so named. These are common to all the lists when correct."[6] In a note to the above extract is given a list of the six S'ruta-Kêvalis, the last two being Bhadrabâhu and Sthûlabhadra. It is evident that the S'ruta-Kêvalis were contemporary; slight variations may therefore be expected in the order of naming them. Now we learn from the narrative of the Râjâvaḷi-kathe that Gôvarddhana, Vishṇu, Nandi-mitra and Aparâjita were the names of four of them who visited in company the tomb of Jambusvâmi. Also that Sthûlabhadra, whom we will suppose to be a fifth, stayed out the famine in the north. Bhadrabâhu is therefore consistently called the last, that is, the sixth. The names occur in the same order in the inscription, but Sthûlabhadra is there omitted, the reason for which may be that those who remained in the famine-stricken districts were considered to have fallen from orthodoxy through forced neglect of religious observances.[7]

Professor Jacobi says—"According to the Thêrâvalîs, Bhadrabâhu was the sixth thêra (or sthâvira in Sanskrit) after Mahâvîra.... In the Rishimaṇḍaḷa-sûtra only one verse is devoted to Bhadrabâhu, whilst his successor Sthûlabhadra is praised in a score of stanzas. It runs thus:—

dasa-kappa-vvavahârâ
nijjûḍhâ jêṇa navama-puvvâo |
vandâmi Bhaddabâhuṃ
taṃ apacchima-sayala-suya-nâṇi ||

'I adore Bhadrabâhu, the last of those who were possessed of the whole sacred lore, who extracted the ten kalpas and vyavahâra from the ninth pûrva.' Apacchima might be translated 'not the last', but as it has usually the sense of 'the very last' I have thus rendered it in our verse, though the common tradition makes Bhadrabâhu the last but one of the S'ruta-Kêvalins, Sthûlabhadra being the last who knew all the fourteen pûrvas..... But this interpretation is rather laboured, and I should therefore prefer to believe that the older tradition made Bhadrabâhu the last S'ruta-Kêvalin, and that in later times Sthûlabhadra, of whom so many stories are told, was included in the number of those privileged sages."[8]

To return to our inscription. The occurrence of the twelve years of famine we may perhaps admit as real. There is nothing improbable moreover about the emigration to the South arising out of the famine, for there is evidence that Jainas were settled in great numbers throughout Southern India in the earliest times of which historical records exist. That Bhadrabâhu was the leader of the pilgrims

[6] Works, Vol. I, p. 336.

[7] From No. 105 it would appear that only five S'ruta-Kêvalis are admitted by the Jainas here, Sthûlabhadra being omitted altogether. Bhadrabâhu would therefore in any case be the last.

Ratnanandi states that the disciples of Sthûlabhadra were so incensed at the strictness of his doctrines that they put him to death by burying him alive, and formed themselves into the Ardhapâla or Ardhasphâlaka sect, from whom eventually the S'vêtâmbaras arose.

[8] Introduction to Kalpa-sûtra, p. 11.

In the verse devoted to Bhadrabâhu in inscription No. 108 there is a play upon these very words pas'chima and apas'chima.

and that he died at S'ravaṇa Belgoḷa there seems no reason to call in question. For, apart from the existence of the inscription there, the cave in which he expired is still pointed out. That he was attended to the last by a disciple named Chandra-Gupta may also be allowed, on the evidence, first of inscription No. 17, and then on that of the two inscriptions at the Gautama kshêtra near Seringapatam, already quoted (p. 2, n. 6), which speak of 'the broad summit of Kaḷbappu-giri, marked with the foot-prints of the great munis Bhadrabâhu and Chandra-Gupta.' But it is further confirmed by No. 108, which says that 'the greatness of his penance caused his fame to be spread into other worlds (or lands),' and by No. 54, which says that 'through the merit obtained from his discipleship (to Bhadrabâhu) that (i. e. the famous) Chandra-Gupta was for a long time served by the forest deities,' the notice of him in No. 40 being to the same effect. According to No. 1 he appears to have taken the clerical name of Prabhâchandra on retiring from the world, and it was the usual custom so to change the name on such an occasion.[9] But his original designation of Chandra-Gupta was too distinguished to be set aside and therefore he continued to be so called in spite of the requirements of orthodoxy.

We have now to consider the tradition that this Chandra-Gupta was the celebrated king of Pâṭaliputra, the Sandrakottos of the Greek historians. Of the religious sects existing among the Hindus at that period, Wilson remarks :—"It has been supposed that we have notices of the Jaina sect as far back as the time of the Macedonian invasion of India, or at least at the period at which Megasthenes was sent ambassador to Sandracoptus, and that these notices are recorded by Strabo and Arrian."[10] Colebrooke, who examined the passages referred to, thus states the conclusion at which he arrived :—"The followers of Buddha are clearly distinguished from the Brachmanes and Sarmanes. The latter, called Germanes by Strabo and Samanæans by Porphyrius, are the ascetics of a different religion, and may have belonged to the sect of Jina, or to another."[1]

Mr. Thomas says :—"That Chandra-Gupta was a member of the Jaina community is taken by their writers as a matter of course and treated as a known fact, which needed neither argument nor demonstration. The documentary evidence to this effect is of comparatively early date and apparently absolved from suspicion .... The testimony of Megasthenes would likewise seem to imply that Chandra-Gupta submitted to the devotional teaching of the S'ramaṇas as opposed to the doctrines of the Brahmans."[2]

The same writer goes on to prove that the successors of Chandra Gupta were also Jains. That the celebrated Aśôka was a Jaina at first and afterwards became a Bauddha or Buddhist, he deduces from the statements of that monarch's well-known edicts inscribed on rocks and pillars in various parts of India ; and also from the statement by Akbar's minister, Abul Fazl, in the Ain-i-Akbarî that Aśôka introduced Jainism into Kashmir. This is confirmed by the Râja-taraṅgiṇî or Brahmanical history of Kashmir, which states that Aśôka 'brought in the Jina śâsana.' In the earlier edicts, dating from the 10th and 12th years after his anointing to the throne, he styles himself Dêvânampiya Piyadasi, 'king Piyadasi beloved of the gods', but in the Bhâbra edict, which is the latest, dating from the 27th year of his reign, and which contains a positive profession of Buddhism, the epithet Dêvânampiya is dropped, for not only was this inconsistent with Buddhist belief but it appears to have been a specially Jaina title.

Professor Kern, after an elaborate examination of the edicts of Aśôka, also makes the following admission :—"At fitting time and place (Aśoka) makes mention, in a modest and becoming manner, of the doctrine he had embraced ; but nothing of a Buddhist spirit can be discovered in his State policy.

[9] An instance of this occurs in No. 41, where Bîgâra Râja's name was changed to S'ubhachandra [illegible]. On the other hand, the Guṇa Râja, mentioned in No. 40 and several other inscriptions, retained his designation, as Guṇâchârya.

From the very beginning of his reign he was a good prince. His ordinances concerning the sparing of animal life agree much more closely with the ideas of the heretical Jainas than those of the Buddhists."[3]

As regards the relative priority of Jainism and Buddhism we may here incidentally state the conclusion arrived at by some of the latest authorities. Jacobi shows that Buddha and Mahâvira were two distinct persons but contemporaries. In conjunction with Bühler, he has discovered that Mahâvira is mentioned in Buddhist and Jaina writings as Nigaṇṭha-nâtha or Nigaṇṭha Nâtaputta or Nâyaputta, that is, the Nirgrantha (a common name for the Jains) Jñâti-putra, a name given to him, as stated in Jaina works, because his father was a Jñâti Kshattriya or belonged to the Rajput tribe called Jñâta or Jñâti. He further inclines to the opinion, mooted by Colebrooke,[4] that Mahâvira was not the founder but only the reformer of the sect, and that the origin of the Jaina faith may be traced back to Pârśvanâtha, the tîrthankara who preceded him,[5] if not farther.[6]

Thomas adds :—"The juxtaposition of the last representative of the one faith (Jainism) with the first exponent of the other (Buddhism) which took over so many traditions that it retained in common .... is a point of marked importance. Eclipsed for a time by the energy of the reformers, whose missionaries carried the Buddhist doctrines over so large a section of the globe, non-proselytizing Jainism has survived in its simplicity—as the natural outcome of the ideas and aspirations of a primitive race—still undisturbed in the land of their common birth ; while Buddhism, with its fantastic elaborations, retains scant honour, and no place within the limits of its nidus in India proper."[7]

Sir Monier Williams, speaking a few months ago at a meeting of the Royal Asiatic Society, said : "Most scholars in the present day are of opinion that the Jain Teacher Vardhamâna Mahâvira Nâtaputta and Gautama Buddha were contemporaries, and that the Jainas were an independent sceptical sect, probably a little antecedent to the Bauddhas. At any rate it seems certain that Nigaṇṭhas or Digambara Jains, that is, a sect of naked ascetics, existed before the Buddha's time, and that the Tripiṭaka (besides the inscriptions) alludes to them."[8]

The history of Chandra-Gupta's accession to the throne of the Nandas has been dramatized in the Sanskrit play named Mudrâ-Râkshasa by Viśâkha-datta,[9] which has been translated by Professor Wilson.[10] In his introduction to the work the latter has included an exhaustive statement of the accounts of Chandra-Gupta contained in Hindu literature, such as those given in the Bhâgavata and Vishṇu Purâṇas, and by Vararuchi in the Vrihat-kathâ[1], as well as of the accounts of Sandrocottus[2] (identified with Chandra-Gupta) in the classical writers—Diodorus Siculus, Strabo, Quintus Curtius, Arrian, Justin and Plutarch.

For our purpose we may resort to the Râjâvaḷi-kathe, already quoted, for the story as here current, which except in some minor details is substantially the same as other Hindu versions. It proceeds as follows :—"There was a king called Nanda in Pâṭaliputra who had four ministers—Bandhu, Subandhu, Kubêra and Sakaṭâla—of whom the last named was the most skilled in the arts of government. On one occasion, when the Mlêchchas had invaded the country, S'akaṭâla, being consulted by the king, advised that they should be bought off, as being too powerful to withstand. The king thereupon empowered S'akaṭâla to conclude a treaty with them, giving him an open order on the treasury. The minister accordingly distributed a large sum of money among the invaders and thus restored peace to the country.

Some time after, the king, on visiting the treasury, discovered that it had been emptied by S'akaṭâla in purchasing peace. Being much incensed thereat, he ordered the minister and all his family to be at once cast into a subterranean dungeon, only a handful of grain and a measure of water being let down to them daily through an air-hole. As this would barely suffice to keep even one person alive, S'akaṭâla put it to his family that whichever of them felt confident of ability and destiny to work the overthrow of Nanda should take the nourishment and live. They unanimously replied that he was the only one qualified for the task, and leaving the food for him, all the others starved to death.

Meanwhile, the foreign kings, hearing that Nanda no longer had the aid of his powerful minister, again invaded the country. The king, at a loss what to do, bethought him of his old minister, and having released him from the dungeon, expressed regret for his treatment and requested him to free the country from the invaders. This the minister accomplished by stratagem, and on his return the king offered to restore him to his former position in the State. But S'akaṭâla declined, and engaged himself as the agent of a chatram or inn, where he remained meditating the ruin of Nanda. One day he noticed a Brahman named Châṇakya, who, because a spike of grass had pricked his foot, rooted up the clump, burnt it and scattered the ashes to the wind. A man so irascible and vindictive seemed to him a proper agent to carry out his schemes of revenge. He therefore invited him to the chatram and showed him great courtesy, but suddenly changing his behaviour, insulted and treated him with gross contempt. Châṇakya, under the impression that this had all been done at the instigation of the king, vowed to be revenged, and conspiring with the foreign princes, succeeded in dethroning Nanda and setting up the aged (vriddha) Chandra-Gupta in his place.

This monarch, after reigning some time, appointed his son Bindusâgara as his successor, and retired to the forest with Châṇakya to do penance. Bindusâgara, after a short reign, made over the throne to his son Asôka and went to do penance.

Asôka had a son Kunâḷa, whom, when the country was invaded by foreign powers and the king went forth to oppose them, he left under the tuition of a master (upâdhyâya), having appointed the minister Kapila to conduct the government in his absence. The war having continued a long time, the king sent a message to the minister as follows :—upâdhyâyâya kûraṃ datvâ kumâra mandam adhyayatâṃ. (Having given a feast to the tutor, let the prince be taught gradually.) But the minister misread the latter part, as kumâram andham adhyayatâṃ, 'let the prince be blinded', and accordingly had his eyes put out.[3] On the king's eventually returning home triumphant, he discovered what had been done and immediately ordered the minister's eyes to be put out and his banishment from the kingdom.

The prince Kunâḷa was subsequently married to a princess named Chandânane, who gave birth to a son Chandra-Gupta. When this boy had attained his majority he was put on the throne, Asôka and Kunâḷa receiving dîkshe and retiring to do penance.

Then follows the account already given of the 16 dreams that Chandra-Gupta had, the visit of Bhadrabâhu and the prediction of the twelve years' famine.

[3] The Buddhist accounts of As'ôka (see Burnouf's Int. à l' Hist. Buddhisme Ind., p. 407) also contain the story of the blinding of Kunâḷa, but assign a different reason for it, namely, revenge for the slighted advances of one of the king's wives. The order for the deed is said to have been sealed with an ivory seal. But the Rev. S. Beal (Oriental, Oct. 1875; Ind. Ant. IX, 86) has pointed out that it was probably sealed with the tooth, and quotes some interesting lines, proving a parallel use in England, which occur in the gift of lands by William III to the Rawdon family (Marquis of Hastings.) The two lines specially referring to the seal are—

And in token that this thing is sooth,
I bit the whyt wax with my tooth.

The only point to be noticed is the introduction of two Chandra-Guptas, which seems to be due to some confusion in the traditions and is an unnecessary variation: perhaps intended to conceal the defection of Aśôka.

Having examined the accounts of Bhadrabâhu and Chandra-Gupta, we may now consider the period fixed for the death of the former, and ascertain how far it synchronises with the close of the latter's reign.

The Râjâvaḷi-kathe supplies the following chronology :—Vira Vardhamâna, after a ministry of 30 years, obtained Nirvâṇa in the pleasure garden of Pâvâpura, on the 30th of the month Âśvija, in the year Kâlayukti, 2,438 years of the Kali yuga having passed.

After the death of Vardhamâna, Gautama and the other Kêvalis occupied the priestly throne for 62 years.

Then Nandi-mitra and the other S'ruta-Kêvalis for 100 years.

Then Viśâkha and the other Daśapûrvis for 183 years.

Then Nakshatra and the other Ekadaśâṅgadharas for 223 years.

Then was born Vikramâditya in Ujjayinî ; and he, by his knowledge of astronomy, having made an almanack, established his own era from the year Rudhirôdgâri, the 605th year after the death of Vardhamâna.

All Jaina chronology turns upon the disputed period of the death of Vardhamâna. From the first and last of the above statements we obtain for that event the date 662 B.C., and for the death of the last S'ruta-Kêvali 499 B.C.

Jacobi says, " The traditional date of Mahâvira's nirvâṇa is 470 years before Vikrama according to the Svêtâmbaras and 605 according to the Digambaras.[4] The interval of 135 years between the dates of the nirvâṇa as recorded by the two sects, being equal to that between the Saṃvat and S'aka eras, makes it probable that the Vikrama of the Digambaras is intended for S'âlivâhana, who is always con-

[4] The Svêtâmbaras, 'clad in white,' and the Digambaras, 'clad with space,' i.e. nude, are the two great divisions of the Jainas, the former being in the north of India and the latter in the south.

The following remarks by Sir Monier Williams on these two sects may here be quoted:—The Jainas, like many other ascetics, were impressed with the idea that it was necessary to maintain a defensive warfare against the assault of evil passions, by keeping under the body and subduing it. They had a notion that a sense of shame implied sin, so that if there were no sin in the world there would be no shame. Hence they argued rather illogically that to get rid of clothes was to get rid of sin; and every ascetic who aimed at sinlessness was enjoined to walk about with the air or sky (dik) as his sole covering. In the Kalpasûtra of the Jains we read that Mahâvîra himself began his career by wearing clothes for one year and one month, and after that he walked about naked......

In process of time a party seems to have arisen, even among the Digambara Jains, opposed to strict asceticism in this particular. This party ultimately formed themselves into a separate sect, calling themselves Svêtâmbaras, that is, 'clothed in white garments'......It appears probable that the strict Digambaras preceded the more lax Svêtâmbaras, though each sect claims to be the oldest. The two Jain sects have remained separate to the present day, and do not intermarry or I believe eat together, though in all essential points of doctrine and discipline they agree. (R. A. S. '. XX, 278.)

In older times the Digambara ascetics used to go naked, and from this custom they derive the names Digambara, 'sky-clad', Nirgranthas, 'without a knot', Nagnâtas 'naked mendicants.' Now they make a compromise with the spirit of the times and the British law. They maintain, as formerly, in theory that a man can only attain salvation when he is perfectly nirmama, free from all possessions and all desire to possess, and that hence clothes ought not to be worn by a true ascetic. But the pandits (or common ascetics) wear the usual dress of the country, and even the Bhaṭṭârakas (or high priests) cover themselves with a chaddar, which they put off when eating. At their meals they sit perfectly naked, and a pupil rings a bell to keep off all strangers. (DR. BÜHLER, Ind. Ant. VII, 28.)

Ratnanandi, in the work already referred to (p. 5), written, as he says, specially to explain the origin of the Svêtâmbaras, gives the date 836 after Vikrama for the rise of the sect, in the following verse:—

mṛitê Vikrama-bhûpâ'ê shaṭ-triṃs'ad-adhikê s'atê |
gatê 'shṭânâm abhût lôkê matam Svêtâmbarâbhidham ||

According to him, Lôkapâ'a, king of Vallabhî-pura in Saurâshṭra, at the request of his wife Prajâvati, who was a daughter of the king of Ujjayinî, sent for her gurus from Kânyakubja. And as they drew nigh to the city, headed by Jinachandra, he went forth with his retinue to meet them and receive them with all respect. But seeing them from a distance, he was disgusted at their nudity, and returned saying they were not fit to appear at court. The queen therefore sent them some white cloths, which they put on before they could enter the city. From that time began the S'vêtâmbara sect, at the date above given, being composed of the Ardhaphâlas or Ardhaphâlakas, (regarding whom see p. 8 above.)

founded with the older Vikrama . . . . That the Svêtâmbaras date from 57 B.C. will be proved in the sequel. The tradition that 470 years elapsed between the Nirvâṇa and the beginning of Vikramâditya's era is embodied in many books of the Svêtâmbaras. The oldest evidence for it are those versus memoriales which form the basis of Merutuṅga's Vichâraśrêṇi, and specify the interval between Vikramâditya and the Nirvâṇa by the number of years which are allotted to the intervening dynasties. I subjoin them here, and add the remarks of Dr. Buhler who first published them. (Ind. Ant. II, 362.)

(1.) Pâlaka, the lord of Avantî, was anointed in that night in which the Arhat and Tîrthaṅkara Mahâvira entered nirvâṇa. (2.) Sixty are (the years) of king Pâlaka, but one hundred and fifty-five are (the years) of the Nandas; one hundred and eight those of the Mauryas, and thirty those of Pûsamitta (Pushyamitra). (3.) Sixty (years) ruled Balamitra and Bhânumitra, forty Nabhôvâhana. Thirteen years likewise lasted the rule of Gardabhilla, and four are the years of S'aka.

'These verses, which are quoted in a very large number of commentaries and chronological works, but the origin of which is by no means clear, give the adjustment between the eras of Vira and Vikrama, and form the basis of the earlier Jaina chronology.'

"The sum of years elapsed between the commencement of the era of Vikrama and the reign of the Mauryas, as stated in the verses just quoted, is 255=4+13+40+60+30+108. By adding 57, the number of years expired between the commencement of the Saṃvat and Christian eras, we arrive at 312 B.C. as the date of Chandragupta's abhishêka. The near coincidence of this date with the date derived from Greek sources proves that the Vikrama of the third verse is intended for the founder of the Saṃvat era (57 B.C.) and not for the founder of the S'aka era (78 A.D.), because on the latter premiss Chandragupta's abhishêka would date 177 B.C. The reigns of Pâlaka (60) and of the nine Nandas (155), in sum 215 years, make up the interval between Chandragupta and the Nirvâṇa; adding 215 to 312 B.C. we arrive at 527 B.C. as the epoch of Mahâvîra's nirvâṇa.

"There is also a different statement of the interval between the Nirvâṇa and Chandragupta's coronation. For Hêmachandra says in the Pariśishṭa-parvan,— êvaṃ cha śrî Mahâvîrê muktô varsha-śatê gatê |

pañcha-pañchâśad-adhikê Chandraguptô 'bhavan nṛipaḥ ||

And thus, 155 years after the liberation of Mahâvîra, Chandragupta became king.

"Adding 155 to 312 B.C. we find that the Nirvâṇa of Mahâvîra would fall 467 B.C."[5]

For various reasons, stated at length, he considers the latter to be the correct adjusted date. Accepting this, and deducting 162 for the number of years after the nirvâṇa to which the śruta-kêvalis continued[6], we obtain 305 B.C. as the date of the death of Bhadrabâhu, the last of them.

[5] Introduction to Kalpa-sûtra, pp. 8 ff.

[6] The same period is given in a supplementary note by Jacobi from a Gurvâvali obtained by Dr. Bühler in Jeypur. ib. p. 30.

On the other hand, Jacobi says "The date of Bhadrabâhu's death is placed identically by all Jaina authors, from Hêmachandra down to the most modern scholiast, in the year 170 A.V." Hêmachandra is quoted as follows :—

Vîra-môkshâd varsha-śatê saptaty-agrê gatê sati |
Bhadrabâhur api svâmî yayau svargam samâdhinâ ||

'After a hundred and seventy years from the liberation of Mahâvîra had elapsed, Bhadrabâhu svâmi also reached svarga by profound meditation.' This latter calculation would give us 297 B.C. at the exact date of Bhadrabâhu's death.

We have already seen that 312 or 315 B.C. are given as the dates of Chandra-Gupta's accession. But according to other statements it fell in 316[7] or in 318 B.C.[8] He reigned 24 years, and thus might have joined Bhadrabâhu in some year between 288 and 294 B.C. There is a difference of only three years between the latter period and the death of Bhadrabâhu as above given, and this cannot but be regarded as a remarkably near coincidence for events which occurred at a time so remote and regarding which there are so many varying authorities.

But, whatever may be the case as regards Bhadrabâhu, are there any grounds, it may very naturally be asked, for supposing that the celebrated Chandra Gupta, the Maurya emperor ruling in Pâṭaliputra or Patna on the Ganges, ever had any connection with the south of India. The following evidence therefore is of special interest.

We have first to notice the line of Gupta kings who ruled in the north. The latest information regarding them is contained in Mr. Vincent A. Smith's article on their coinage.[9] His historical introduction is based on the researches of Mr. Fleet[10], who has determined, a question so long in dispute, that the Gupta kâla or era, in which their coins and inscriptions are dated, began in 319 A.D.[1] as stated by Albirûnî.

The conclusion now arrived at is that Northern India was governed during the first three centuries of the Christian era by Indo-Scythian dynasties, which were displaced in the fourth century by the Guptas, except in the Panjab, where the former continued. The seven kings who so ruled, the crown passing from father to son, were the following, with their capital city at Pâṭaliputra

Gupta	..	Dates A.D.

Samudra Gupta	..
Chandra Gupta II	..	401—413
Kumâra Gupta	..	414—451

The first two, styled Mahârâjâs, probably ruled in Magadha (or Bihâr) under Indo-Scythian suzerainty. Chandra Gupta I married Kumâra Dêvi of the Lichchavi family ruling in Nepâl, and assumed the title of Mahârâjâdhirâjâ, significant of independence. Samudra Gupta extended his authority over the greater part of Northern India, and the extent of his dominions appears from the inscription on the pillar of Aśôka in the Fort at Allâhâbâd. His queen was Datta Dêvi. Chandra Gupta II extended his empire westward to Gujarat and Kathiawâd and, in addition to the previous gold coinage, struck silver coins based on those of the Satraps of Saurâshtra in imitation of Greco-Bactrian hemi-drachms. It is with his reign that the dated records begin. His queen was Dhruva Dêvî.

Kumâra Gupta had a long reign and was succeeded by Skanda Gupta, whose dominions extended from the borders of Eastern Nepâl to the shores of the Gulf of Kachchh. But he was disturbed by the inroads of a tribe of foreigners named Hûnas, which eventually broke up the Gupta empire. Skanda Gupta was succeeded in a portion of his western dominions by Budha Gupta, probably his son, who was ruling in the Sâgar District of the Central Provinces down to 500 A.D., but appears to have been succeeded in the west by the Hûna chiefs Toramâṇa and Mihirakula.

In Eastern Magadha the successor of Skanda Gupta was Krishṇa Gupta, no doubt a son or near relative. Ten princes of this line followed, ending with Jîvita Gupta, who came to the throne about 720 A.D. During the same period Western Magadha was governed by the rival, and often hostile, dynasty of the Maukharî or Mukhara kings, whose names generally ended in Varmâ. Traces of other minor Gupta dynasties are met with in Orissa, in Mahâ Kôsala and Western Gauḍa of the Central Provinces, and elsewhere. During the reign of the great king Harshavardhana of Kanauj (A.D. 606—648) all Northern India including Magadha with its local chiefs was subject to his suzerainty.

But, to come further South and nearer to our object, there is the following testimony of Gupta connection with Mysore itself. "The Mauryas are mentioned in connection with (the Chalukya king) Kîrttivarmmâ[2], who was the father of Pulikêśi II and whose reign terminated in S'aka 489 (A.D. 567).. They were a reigning family in the Koṅkaṇa. It is not at all improbable that their capital was the Puri, or 'the city, the goddess of the fortunes of the western ocean,' which is mentioned in the verse immediately following that in which their subjugation is recorded, and that this is the same town as the Puri which in the eleventh century A.D. was the capital of the Silâhâras of the Koṅkaṇa.[3] These Mauryas were perhaps descendants of the Maurya dynasty of Pâṭaliputra, which was founded by Chandragupta, the Sandrocoptus of the Greeks, in the fourth century B.C. and of descendants of which we seem to have some still more recent traces in the twelfth and thirteenth centuries A.D. in the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvaras or great feudatory nobles of the Gutta family, or the lineage of Chandragupta, whose inscriptions are found at Chaudadâmpur in the Dharwad district, and at Haḷêbîd in Mysore, and who were feudatories of the Western Chalukya kings and their successors."

"The family is called sometimes the Gutta-kula, and sometimes the Chandragupta-vaṃśa, Chandraguptânvaya, or Chandragupta-mahârâjâdhirâja-kula; and it is deduced from, or through, the great Vikramâditya, king of Ujjayini in Mâlava, whom one of the inscriptions appears to represent as a descendant of Chandragupta. The family is also attributed to the Sôma-vaṃśa or lineage of the moon. The members of it all had the family-title of Ujjani-puravarâdhîśvara, or Ujjeni-puravarâdhîśvara, 'supreme lord of Ujjayini, the best of cities,'—and in one instance also of Pâṭalipuravarâdhîśvara, or 'supreme lord of Pâṭali, the best of cities,' which was the city of Chandragupta. They also had the title of Pannirbara-gaṇḍa, or 'the punisher of the Twelve'; but the meaning of this is not quite clear, though it appears to refer to the conquest of twelve Maṇḍalikas or Maṇḍalêśvaras who attacked them. And they carried the banners of a sacred fig-tree and of Garuḍa, and used the mark or signet of a lion. Their family god was S'iva under the name of Mahâkâla of Ujjayini."[4]

[2] The references are—in inscriptions at Yêvûr and Miraj, Mauryya-nirjjit, conqueror of the Mauryas; Mauryya-nirvyâṇa-hêtuh, cause of the exile of the Mauryas. Ind. Ant. VIII, 12, 16. There may be a punning allusion to nirvâṇa in the last.

We have thus at length given grounds for accepting as true the statement of the inscription that Bhadrabâhu died at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa. We have also found that he was one of the S'ruta-kêvalis. Chandragupta, stated to have been his disciple, we have shown reasons for identifying with the celebrated Maurya emperor, and may further add that as a Jaina it was incumbent on him to take dîkshe and that no more distinguished professor of the religion at that time existed than Bhadrabâhu under whom he could place himself./

Having got thus far, it remains to discuss the probable date of the inscription. The events recorded in it belong, as already shown, to somewhere about 297 B C., but is there any evidence as to when it was engraved, for hitherto the edicts of Aśôka, dating about 250 B.C., have been generally received as the oldest specimens of writing yet found in India. On this point we can only approximate to a probable date than which it must be earlier. Yet, on the one hand, if Bhadrabâhu died in the year after the end of Chandragupta's reign or (say) 290 B.C. and the latter survived the twelve years' famine which followed, which would bring us to 278 B.C. and the inscription was engraved by his grandson, who is said to have erected chaityâlayas and founded the town, this would carry us at least to the same period of 250 B.C. (for Aśôka was also a grandson of Chandragupta) as the earliest date to which it could possibly be assigned. On the other-hand, by the aid of certain allusions in the associated inscriptions we are enabled, as this undoubtedly preceded them, to arrive at a period than which it is not later. Probably among the last engraved of them is No. 24, which records a gift by a son (magandir, a very old form) of the great king S'rî-Ballabha, that is, S'rî-Vallabha. Now this was the name of the Gaṅga king Bhû-Vikrama, whose reign would fall in about 650 A.D.[8] There was also a S'rî-Vallabha, son of Krishṇa, probably of the Raṭṭa family, ruling the South in S'aka 705 (A.D. 783).[9] But it is more probable that we have here the Gaṅga king, for the son's name is given as Nava-Lôka. Now the Nâgamaṅgala plates give us Nava-Kâma for this king's successor, more correctly known as S'ivamâra, while the Suradhônupura plates give his name as Nava-Choka. It is true he is described in these as the younger brother, but this is not an insuperable difficulty and all are in agreement in attributing to him some name combined with Nava, which in the absence of fuller information we may accept as a clue to the person indicated. Going a step back, from the note to No. 2 it will be seen that the district therein named appears in the same form in a Pallava grant which is assigned to the 4th or 5th century A.D.[10] Again in No. 13 we have a reference to Taḷekâḍ spelt in the oldest form of the name. Now this place first came into notice as the capital of the Gaṅga kings under Hari-Varmmâ who reigned about 247 A.D.

For comparison of characters of a similar type reference may be made to some of the excellent fac-similes published in the Indian Antiquary, but it is not easy to find any of sufficiently early date, and allowance must be made for the difference between inscriptions on copper plates or prepared stone tablets and inscriptions on the bare rock. In Vol. VIII, p. 168, is a Pallava grant of the 4th or 5th century A.D. from copper plates ; in Vol. III, p. 305, is a Châlukya stone inscription on a pillar at Bâdâmi dated S'aka 500 (A.D. 578) ; in Vol. VIII, p. 241, is a Châlukya stone inscription dated S'aka 556 (A.D. 634) ; in the same volume, p. 44, is a Châlukya copper plate grant from Nêrûr, of the 6th century A.D. ; in Vol. IX, p. 304, is a Châlukya copper plate grant of the 7th century A.D. But reference may perhaps be better made to the Pallava grant of about the 4th century A.D. in Burnell's South Indian Palæography, plate 24 ; and to plate V in Vol. IV of the Report of the Archæological Survey of Western India. On the whole the resemblance seems to me the closest to the characters of the early Kadamba grants on copper plates of the 5th century A.D. (See Ind. Ant. Vol. VI, p. 22ff ; VII, p. 33ff.) I have recently obtained one dated in the 7th year of the reign of Krishṇa-varmmâ[1] , son of Siṃha-varmmâ, son of Vishṇu-varmmâ, which corresponds pretty nearly in several of the letters. Now we know that Krishṇa-varmmâ's sister was married to the Gaṅga king Mâdhava, whose reign ended in 425 A.D. Also that their grandson, who came to the throne in 478, had had for his preceptor the celebrated Pûjyapâda, which upholds the accuracy of these dates[2] . We further know that the Kadambas were lords of the ancient city of Banavasi, on the north-west frontier of Mysore, and that this city is mentioned by the same name both in the Mahawanso as a place to which a Buddhist missionary was sent in 245 B.C. and also by Ptolemy in his Geography in about 130 A.D. Wilks also mentions that Pûrvada Haḷe Kannada or the Primitive Old Canarese, the earliest form of the language, and that in which the present also [illegible] rock inscriptions are written, was the language of Banavasi.

In fine, a consideration of all that has been advanced on the subject may, it seems to me, be sufficient to warrant the conclusion that if this interesting inscription did not precede the Christian era, it unquestionably belongs to the earliest part of that era and is certainly not later than about 400 A.D.

We are now in a position to proceed with an examination of the inscriptions Nos 2 to 21, 23 and 26 to 35. It will be observed that they are all somewhat similar in character, being brief records of the death of Jainas, both clerics and laics, male and female, who had given themselves up to fasting with the express object of quitting the body. In other words they committed religious suicide as a meritorious act, and in many cases the time they held out is mentioned.

The vow in performance of which they thus starved themselves to death is called sallêkhana (see No. 54 and other places) and the following is the description given of it in the Ratna Karaṇḍaka, a work by Âyita-varmmâ :—

upasargê durbhikshê jarasi rujâyâṃ cha nishpratikârê |

'When overtaken by portentous calamity, by famine, by old age, or by disease for which there is no cure, to obtain liberation from the body for the sake of merit the Âryâs call sallêkhana. He who is perfect in knowledge possesses the fruit of all penance, which is the source of power, therefore should one seek for death by the performance of some meritorious vow, so far as his means will permit. Having purified his mind by renunciation of friendship, hatred, ties and acquisitions ; having forgiven his relations and dependants, and with kind words sought forgiveness from them : Viewing with a strong mind impartially (or with indifference) all that he does, causes to be done or desires ; should a man enter upon the performance of the great vow, not to be completed save by his death.'

The mode of performance is further thus described :—

âhâraṃ parihâpya kramaśaḥ snigdhaṃ nivartayitvâunaṃ |
snigdhaṃ cha varjayitvâ karapânaṃ pûrayêt kramaśaḥ ||

karapânahâpanam api kṛitvâ kṛitvôpavâsam api śaktyâ |

jîvita-maraṇâśaṃsâ-bhaya-mitra-smṛiti-vidhâna-nâmânaḥ |
sallêkhanâtichârâḥ pañcha-Jinêndraiḥ samuddishtâḥ ||

'He should by degrees diminish his food, and take only rice seasoned with milk. Then, giving up the milk, he should gradually reduce himself to only a handful of water. Then, abandoning even the handful of liquid, he should, according to his strength, remain entirely fasting ; and thus, with his mind intent upon the five kinds of reverence[3], should by every effort quit his body. Desire of life or of death, remembrance of fear or friendship, action, these five are transgressions of sallêkhana—thus say the five Jinêndras.'[4]

All the inscriptions ending in muḍippidar indicate the completion of this vow of sallêkhana or religious suicide. The derivation of the term sallêkhana, evidently sat + lêkhana or saṃ + lêkhana, is difficult to account for, but is said to be equivalent to samyak-lêkhana. It is not found in the dictionaries and is a term peculiar to the Jainas. It seems necessary here to take for lêkhana its meaning of scarifying, or scraping off, and to understand its application as referring to divesting the body of all its trammels, or getting rid of it as the serpent of its slough, 'shuffling off this mortal coil.'

The term muḍippidar is also peculiar to the Jainas. In the Dhâtuprakaraṇaṃ of the S'abda-maṇidarpaṇa, the root muḍi is explained as kêśa-bandhanê, to tie the hair ; nirvahaṇê, to end. On the analogy of maḍi, maraṇê, to die : maḍipu, maraṇa-karaṇê, to kill or cause death—muḍipu would be a causal form of muḍi and therefore mean 'to bring to an end, or cause to end' (in this case one's life). Nirvahaṇa is derived from nirvah to which Benfey gives the meanings 'to extricate oneself, to pass away'—the first on the authority of Lassen. It has an evident relation to the Buddhist term nirvâṇa, derived from nirvâ, to be extinguished. The Amarakôśa explains the latter thus :—nirvâṇô muni vahny âdau, which means 'blown out or gone out, applied either to a sage or to fire' ; extinct. Proceeding on these analogies I have translated muḍippidar in every case as 'expired'.

Of the contents of these inscriptions it is unnecessary to say anything. They are painfully plain as to the main object for which they were recorded. The bitterest satirist of human delusions could hardly depict a scene of sterner irony than the naked summit of this bare rock dotted with emaciated devotees, both men and women, in silent torture awaiting the hour of self-imposed death. The irony is complete when we remember that avoidance of the destruction of life in whatever form is a fundamental doctrine of the sect.

It need scarcely be pointed out that these views regarding the release of the soul from the body were not altogether peculiar to the Jains or to India. Writing of the Pagan Empire of Rome, Mr. Lecky says[5] —"The conception of suicide as an euthânasia, an abridgement of the pangs of disease, and a guarantee against the dotage of age was not confined to philosophical treatises. We have considerable evidence of its being frequently put in practice." "The act was committed under the most various motives .... Most frequently however death was regarded as 'the last physician of disease' (Sophocles), and suicide as the legitimate relief from intolerable suffering."

Referring to a later time he says—"We find among the Albigenses a practice, known by the name of Endura, of accelerating death, in the case of dangerous illness, by fasting and sometimes by bleeding."

The instances recorded in the later inscriptions of the performance of the vow of sallêkhana show that it was in vogue at all periods, even down to 1809, the date of No. 72. The question may well be asked whether it is still put into practice. On this point it is not easy to obtain information, but it seems to be the orthodox mode of quitting this life for Jainas and is admitted to be resorted to in the case of persons whose death seems near. Their end is hastened by withholding nourishment, just as in other sects persons borne to the banks of the Ganges to die are sometimes suffocated with the holy soil. In the case of persons too weak to perform the requirements of the vow, the proper ritual is recited in their hearing, and this is done, I am told but do not vouch for the truth of it, even for domestic cattle and other animals at the time of their decease.

A few words may here be devoted to the Chandragupta basti, which, as already stated, must be the oldest in the place and facing in the direction of which the above rock inscriptions must be read. It is situated almost exactly in the centre of the temple area and at its highest point. The temple is a very small one, only 19 ft. by 15 ft. outside measurement, and faces south. It consists of three cells, containing—the middle one an image of Pârśvanâtha, the one on the west side Padmâvatî and the one on the east side Kûshmâṇḍinî. A verandah about 4 feet wide runs along the front, with the figure of a Kshêtrapâla at each end. The outer walls are about 8 feet high, pilastered, and a frieze of the heads and trunks of mythical lions runs round the top. Above are two small pinnacles of Dravidian style, one over each of the side cells. Such was probably the whole of the temple as originally built. But an ornamental doorway was subsequently placed in front, with a perforated stone screen on both sides of it, thus closing up the former open verandah. The screen, each half of which is 5 ft. 10½ in. by 5 ft. 5½ in., is pierced with square or rectangular openings in regular rows and on the spaces between are minutely sculptured scenes from the lives of Bhadrabâhu and Chandragupta, 45 on each side, or 90 altogether. This work I conclude is of later date than the temple and made for its protection. On one part, near about the middle of the eastern half of the screen, is the name Dâsôja, in small Hale Kannaḍa characters. This may possibly be the name of the sculptor or it may have no connection whatever with the work. It is the only inscription on it. I should have been inclined to attribute the screen to a time subsequent to the erection of the Kûge Brahma Dêva pillar at the entrance to the temple area, or A.D. 973 as will appear from No. 38. But on examining the irregularity in the alternate rows of the eastern portion it is evident that the three stones of which it is composed have at some time, is coming with speed to fight you; give up pride in an armed array of elephants and horses, no match for the enemy's force; prepare to depart across the Ganges: and thus he did."[9] The Chôḷântaka king must have been Kṛishṇa Râja[10], and the meaning of the phrase must be that as the Gûrjjara king virtually surrendered his country to Mârasiṃha the latter was entitled to take his name or rank.

Satya-Vâkya is next credited with certain victories over a powerful opponent named Dalla, and over the Kirâtas of the Vindhya forests. He is then described in some connection (which, owing to parts defaced, is not clear) with the army of the emperor dwelling at Mânyakhêṭa. This city has been identified by Dr. Bühler with Mâlkhêd in the Nizam's Dominions and was the Raṭṭa capital. The Indra Râja dwelling at Mânyakhêṭa, at whose coronation he rejoiced, indicates a Nitya-Varsha and he is thus identified with Koṭṭiga, the elder brother of Kṛishṇa Râja. An inscription dated S'aka 893 (A.D. 971) describes Mârasiṅgha as ruling over the Gaṅgavâḍi 96,000, the Purigere 300 and the Belvoḷa 300, during the reign of Nitya-Varsha.[1]

Among the further descriptions in our present inscription Mârasiṃha is said to have destroyed the fighting power of the king of all the Noḷambas, who was flushed with pride on account of receiving obeisance from the son of a Râja whose name is gone but who was of the Mâṭûra vaṃśa. He is further said to have been reverenced through fear by the king of the Vanavâsi country, no doubt a Kadamba king. Also to have ground to powder the Uchchaṅgi hill fort: this is Uchchaṅgi-durga in the south-west of the Bellary district, just over the Mysore border, and was the capital of the Noḷambavâḍi 32,000 province. From the other inscriptions of this collection it will be seen that most of the distinguished kings boast of attacking this place. He is further said to have slain the S'abara minister Naraga. And finally to have been reverenced on account of his valour by Chêra, Chôḷa Pâṇḍya and Pallava.

The second and third sides are nearly all gone, but the designations Gaṅga-Chûḍâmaṇi, Guttiya Gaṅga, and śrî Mârasiṃha occur. Also at the end it is stated that this Gaṅga prince was born to be a wild fire to the lion the warlike Châlukya prince Râjâditya, of whom I have met with no other notice. Naraga, above described as the S'abara minister, whom he slew, is here called an Asura (a play upon the name Narakâsura) from whom he freed the earth as formerly it had been freed from the Daityas Madhu, Kaiṭabha, Mura and others.

The fourth side is all in Haḷe Kannaḍa, and repeats some of the above exploits, winding up with a list of places he had distinguished himself in and a string of complimentary titles. The places he had either taken or gained renown in were the regions in the Vindhyâ forests, the city of Mânyakhêṭa, Gônûr, Uchchaṅgi, the Banavâsi country, the Parise fort &c. Finally he is said to have erected basadis and mâna-stambhas[2] in many places.

[9] The original as given by Mr. Fleet is—Âdêśâd Dêva Chôḷântaka-dharaṇipatêr Gaṅga-chûḍâmaṇis tvâṃ vêgâd abhyêti yôddhuṃ tyaja gaja-turaga-vyûha-sannâha-darppaṃ Gaṅgâm uttîrya gantum para-balam atulaṃ kalpayêty âpa dûtair vvijñaptam Gûrjjarâṇâm patir akṛiti tathâ yatra jaitra-prayâṇê ||

[10] Mr. Fleet, relying on the genealogy in the Lakshmês'vara inscription, suggests Hari-Varmma, but this is impossible, and is disproved by the context here. Moreover an inscription at Âtakûr specially mentions Kṛishṇa Râja as having fought against the Chôḷas in S'aka 872 (A.D. 950), and being in alliance with the Gaṅga king. It runs as follows:—Svasti S'aka-nṛipa-kâlâtîta-saṃvatsara-śataṅgaḷ eṇṭu-nûṟ-eppatt-eraḍaneya Saumyaṃ emba varsham pravattise | Svasti Amôghavarsha-Dêva-S'rî-pṛithvî-vallabha-paramês'vara-parama-bhaṭṭâraka-pâda-paṅkaja-bhramara-nâ(ma) Triṇêtra .. ..vana-gaja-malla ...., Kṛishṇa-Râja S'rîmat-Kannara-Dêva.......vadi Chôḷa-Râjâdityana mêle (va)ndu taḷ-kâḷadoḷ kâdikoṇḍu bijayaṃ geyyuttirdu Svasti Satya-Vâkya Koṅguṇi-Varmma dharmma-mahârâjâdhirâja Kôḷala-puravarês'vara Nandagiri-nâtha S'rîmat-Permmanaḍigaḷ nanniya-Gaṅga jayad-uttaraṅga Gaṅga-Gâṅgêya Gaṅga-Nârâyaṇan &c....

[1] Ind. Ant. XII, 255. Mr. Fleet, in his preface to it, says:—"There being no probability of Koṭṭiga leaving any issue, first his younger brother Kṛishṇa was joined with him in the government, and then the latter's son Kakka."

[2] Mânastambha is the name given to the elegant tall pillars with a small pinnacled maṇṭapa at the top erected in front of the Jaina temples. See the interesting discussion regarding them in Fergusson, Ind. & East. Arch. 276.

At the end is the subsequent addition already referred to, in which it is said that he continued to support works of merit at Beḷgoḷa and to rule the kingdom for one year longer, when he died in the Jaina orthodox manner at the feet of Ajitasêna-bhaṭṭâraka in Baṅkâpura. A satirical verse is added bidding Chôḷa and Pâṇḍya dismiss their fears now that Gaṅga who was about to conquer them had gone to the world of gods.

We next have to take up Nos. 60 and 61, which are two Vîragal or memorial stones for braves killed in battle. They are not dated but the references enable us to assign them to about the same time as the above. They are put up against the Têrina basti or Bâhubali or Gommaṭêśvara basti, which is therefore for this and other reasons probably the oldest on the hill, excepting of course the Chandragupta basti. It is near the north-east entrance to the temple area and faces north. It is called Têrina basti or Temple of the Car on account of its having a tower which is in tiers and supposed to resemble a temple car.

No. 61 is the older, as will appear from the examination of No. 60, which it is necessary to make first in order to explain the other. It is the record of the death in Gaṅga's war of a chief called Bâyiga, who was one of the household of Rakkasa-maṇi or the prince Rakkasa, the Gaṅga diamond (vajra), praised in poetry as aṇṇana-baṇṭa, elder brother's warrior. Now in an inscription in Coorg[3], dated S'aka 899 (A.D. 977), we have an account of this Rakkasa, with the same title of aṇṇana-baṇṭa, ruling on the banks of the Bed-ḍore (here the Lakshmantîrtha) under his brother Râcha-Malla. In the present inscription Rakkasa was evidently much younger and apparently under Bâyiga as his guardian or ward, for the latter sends him away for safety before going into the battle. We cannot for the above reasons be far wrong in putting down A.D. 975 as the date. As for Bâyiga, he is stated to have been a scion of the Kakka line. This was the last of the Raṭṭa or Râshṭrakûṭa kings, also called Karka, Kakkala, &c., and styled Amôgha-varsha, whose reign ended in A.D. 973, when the dynasty was overthrown by Taila, the restorer of the Western Châlukya supremacy

No. 61 was erected by Bâyika (the Bâyiga of No. 60) as stated in the first verse, and is therefore older. It was set up to the memory of Gunti, his wife's sister. Their parents were Mâduvara of Poḷâlu and Dêyilamma, and they had a brother Jâbayya. Gunti, also it seems called Sôyibbe, was married to Lôka-Vidyâdhara, and had a son Udaya-Vidyâdhara. From the continuation of the inscription round the top, which is almost illegible, we gather that out of affection for her husband she accompanied him to battle and fell fighting at his side. The sculptured figures at the top represent her as an amazon, nude and riding on a horse, flourishing a sword: opposing her is a man on an elephant, apparently aiming at her with some weapon held at the level of his waist. Lôka-Vidyâdhara, her husband, was perhaps the Goṅka chief of that name who assisted Taila in gaining the successes above mentioned. See note, p. 148.

We have next to notice No. 57, an important and interesting inscription both on account of its contents and the style of its composition. It is all in Haḷe Kannaḍa verse, except the two opening lines, which are in Sanskrit. The obscurity of the allusions and the unusual metres have presented serious difficulties in certain parts, and the best Kannaḍa scholars in Bangalore, Mysore and other places have 3 Coorg Inscriptions, p. 7. I may take this opportunity of explaining an obscurity in the date, guided by information since received from a Jaina. The day on which the grant was made is stated to be Nandis'vara talpa-devasam, and no satisfactory meaning was forthcoming. It now appears that Nandis'vara is the name of an island in the Jaina cosmography being the eighth from Jambû-dvîpa. A plan of it on stone or brass is kept in many Jina temples, and a Nandis'vara temple in conformity with the plan has lately been erected by the Jains in Delhi.

From the 8th of the bright fortnight in the months Âshâḍha, Kârttika and Phâlguna, till full moon is the time of the Nandis'vara pûjâ, or observance of the season when certain deified beings—Saudharmêndra, Is'ânêndra, Chamara and Vairôchana—assemble for worship at the island of Nandis'vara, which has 52 Jina temples on it. These are also the approved times for the commencement of any religious vows. The authorities may be found in Trilôkasâra and in Nandis'vara-bhakti.

The date of the Coorg inscription referred to must therefore be taken as Phâlguna s'ukla 8, the beginning of the Nandis'vara days in that month.

tried in vain to satisfactorily explain them. Though the greater part of the inscription seems to be of an allegorical character, its main purport is perfectly clear. It is a record of the death, in S'aka 904, the year Chitrabhânu, (A.D. 982), of Indra Râja, and is engraved on four sides of a high pillar erected in a maṇṭapa near the front of the same Têrina basti. The opening couplet is very effective, as giving the key-note to the whole, and the simile is as appropriate as it is simple, in fact it reminds one more of European than of Indian poetry. The carpenter Death (or Yama), it says, spies out and fells the tallest and soundest of the human trees standing in the midst of the forest of family cares, which seems to imply that the subject of the memorial died before his time, in the prime of life.

The second verse informs us that he was called Raṭṭa-Kandarppa, that he was the son's son of Kṛishṇa Râja, the daughter's son of Gaṅga Gâṅgêya, and the son-in-law of Râja-Chûḍâmaṇi. From other verses we learn that among his titles were those of Râja-Mârttâṇḍa, Chalad-aṅkakâra, and Kîrtti-Nârâyaṇa.

Kṛishṇa Râja, his paternal grandfather, was no doubt the Raṭṭa king already noticed in No. 38, and we have here probably the memorial of the last representative of the Raṭṭa or Râshṭrakûṭa dynasty of Mânyakhêṭa. So far as the history of this period is known, Kṛishṇa Râja was succeeded by his son Kakka or Amôgha-varsha. The latter was defeated and probably slain by the Châlukya king Taila, which put an end to the Raṭṭa dynasty and restored to power that of the Western Châlukyas. Moreover the one line was absorbed into the other by Taila's marrying Jâkabbe or Jâkala Dêvi, the daughter of Kakka.[4] From the present inscription however it would appear that she was not the only representative of the Raṭṭa family.

We have next to consider who Gaṅga Gâṅgêya, his maternal grandfather, was. We have to chose between the Gaṅga dynasty of Mysore and the Gâṅgêya vaṃśa of Kaliṅga. As regards the former, the title Gaṅga-Gâṅgêya, it will be seen, is expressly given in the Âtakûr inscription already quoted (p. 19), to Satya-Vâkya Koṅguṇi-Varmmâ who was ruling in S'aka 872 (A.D. 950) and was in alliance with Kṛishṇa Râja called Kannara Dêva, the son of Amôgha-varsha, of the Raṭṭa family. Moreover, from a subsequent addition engraved at the top of the same inscription, we learn that this Gaṅga king was Râcha-Malla, the son of Ereyappa; also, that he defeated a rival named Bûtuga, who then proposed to Râjâditya, the Chôḷa prince mentioned in the previous part of the inscription, to join him in attacking Kannara Dêva. His treachery becoming thus known, he was defeated and slain, and the provinces of which he was governor absorbed into the Gaṅga territories.[5] I think there can be little doubt, considering the intimacy that thus existed between Râcha-Malla and Kṛishṇa Râja, and also between Râcha-Malla's successor Mârasiṃha and the same Kṛishṇa Râja as disclosed in No. 38, that it was the daughter of the Gaṅga king Râcha-Malla (ruling A.D. 921 to 963) who was married to the son of the Raṭṭa king Kṛishṇa Râja (ruling A.D. 945 and 956), and that the Indra Râja here deceased, who was the offspring of this union, was destined to be the last of his race.

For the Gâṅga or Gâṅgêya kings of Kaliṅga we have no reliable dates, as the era in which their grants are dated has not been identified. The only actual date given for one is A.D. 985 by Dr. Burnell[6], on what authority is not known. However, this is near about we want and a princess from that line may have been married to Kṛishṇa Râja's son. But I think that the other hypothesis is much the most likely to be correct.

It is difficult to decide who Râja-Chûḍâmaṇi was whose daughter was the wife of Indra Râja. He may have been the prince of that name mentioned in the next inscription, but the title is too common and indefinite to be identified with certainty.

[6] So. Ind. Pal. 53.

Inscription No. 56 is of a similar character to the above and of the same period, being dated in the same cycle year, Chitrabhânu. The pillar on four sides of which it was engraved has been at some time thrown down and broken; and what remains has been built upside down into the side of steps leading up to the same Têrina basti. It is in Haḷe Kannaḍa and commemorates the death of Pilla, who, besides that of Râja-Chûḍâmaṇi, had the title mâvana gandha-hasti, father-in-law's rutting elephant or a rutting elephant to his father-in-law. It is difficult to conjecture who either he or his father-in-law may have been.[7]

We now come to consider the inscriptions Nos. 75 and 76, and it is impossible not to admire the original grandeur of their simplicity, so well befitting the completion of a stupendous work of devotion and art, the bold sculptor of which has not so much as left a record of his name. They are engraved on the rock representing an ant-hill which supports the lower part of the colossal image of Gommaṭêśvara and are immediately below its right and left hands. The upper line on one side, in Nâgarî characters, and the two upper lines on the other side, the first in Pûrvada Haḷe Kannaḍa and the second in Grantha and Tamil characters, are all three similar in their contents and contain the announcement in three languages that Châvuṇḍa or Châmuṇḍa Râya caused the image to be made. They are undoubtedly of the period when that work was completed.

The remaining two lines, the last on each side, one in Nâgarî and the other in Haḷe Kannaḍa characters, are also alike in their contents, and state in imitation of the foregoing, in two languages that Gaṅga Râja had the enclosure or cloisters which surround the image erected. These as certainly date from the time when the work to which they refer was completed.

The date of the older lines is therefore that of Châmuṇḍa Râya, and he, according to Nos. 85 and 137 as well as tradition, was the minister of the Gaṅga king Râcha Malla (or Râja Malla). It will be shown that this was the successor of Mârasiṃha (of No. 38): he therefore came to the throne in S'aka 896 (A.D. 974). From inscriptions in my possession yet to be published it is also known that his reign ended in S'aka 906 (A.D. 984). Between these dates therefore must the great statue have been erected. But we can get much nearer to the actual date, for Châmuṇḍa Râya composed a work called Châmuṇḍa Râya Purâṇa, containing an epitome of the history of the 24 Tîrthaṅkaras, and at the end its date is given as S'aka 900, the year Îśvara (A.D. 978). Now in the account with which it opens and closes of Châmuṇḍa Râya's achievements no mention is made of the statue of Gommaṭêśvara. It is incredible that so great a work should have been unnoticed if then in existence. It is evident therefore that it was erected after A.D. 978. But as according to tradition it was completed during the reign of Râcha-Malla, which ended as above stated in A.D. 984, we may in the absence of any more precise information put down the date of the colossus and therefore of these inscriptions of Châmuṇḍa Râya's as S'aka 905 or A.D. 983.[8]

It would be strange however if no claim were made to a much higher antiquity for so remarkable a monument. Accordingly, Wilson states that "an inscription is said to exist on a rock at Belligola, recording a grant of land by Châmuṇḍa Râya to the shrine of Gômaṭîśvara, in the year 600 of the Kali age, meaning the Kali of the Jains, which began three years after the death of Varddhamâna. This inscription therefore, if it exists, was written about 50 or 60 years before the Christian era."[9] No such inscription has been found, though the local priests believe it to be among those on the pillars in front of the image. The tradition of this date however is perpetuated in the following verse which

[7] Compare S'ântala Dêvi's title of Savati-gandha-vâraṇa in No. 56.

[8] It will be seen from what follows that tradition gives the year Vibhava as that of the erection of the great statue, but to get Vibhava we must either go back to S'aka 890 (A.D. 968) or forward to S'aka 950 (A.D. 1028) neither of which will suit the facts of the case, as above given.

[9] Works, I, 332.

is known to most of the Jains and is said to be always inscribed at the head of the mandates issued by the Jaina guru of the place :—

> Kaly-abdê shach-chhatâkhyê vinuta-Vibhava-samvatsarê mâsi Chaitrê |
> pañchamyâm śukla-pakshê Dinamaṇi-divasê Trashṭri-yôgê su-laghnê |
> saubhâgyê Hasta-nâmni-prakaṭata-bhagaṇê su-praśasthâm chakâra |
> śrîmach-Châmuṇḍa-Râjô Beḷuguḷa-nagarê Gômaṭêśa-pratishṭâm ||

The lines in No. 77, being an ascription of praise engraved on the rim of the pedestal on which the image stands, may also probably belong to the time of its erection, or 983 A.D., as it is natural to suppose they were engraved on the completion of the work.

Of Châmuṇḍa Râya we shall have more to say later on in connection with No. 109. Of Gaṅga Râja, who had the cloisters around erected, we have abundant information in the inscriptions. Nos 90 and 137 inform us that he was the minister of the Hoysaḷa king Vishṇu-varddhana, and from an inscription at Haḷebiḍ we know that his death occurred in S'aka 1055 (A.D. 1133). We are able to state with precision that these two lines relating to him belong to A.D. 1116, for No. 47, dated in 1115, while describing his erections makes no mention of the suttâlayam, which would certainly have been referred to had it been in existence, whereas, on the other hand, No. 59, dated in 1117, expressly mentions it.

A word is necessary as to the language of the two lines in No. 75 in the Nâgarî character. They should be in either the sacred language of the Jains called Arddha-Mâgadhî or in Jaina Mahârâshṭrî. The following account of these is taken from Jacobi[10]—"The language which Mahâvîra and his immediate disciples, the Gaṇadharas, spoke, was, of course, the vernacular dialect of Magadha. For it is not likely that Mahâvîra used Sanskrit. But the Jaina Prâkṛit has very little affinity to the Mâgadhî either of Aśôka's inscriptions or of the Prâkṛit grammarians. Nevertheless it is called Mâgadhî by the Jains themselves. In a half stanza quoted by Hêmachandra (Prâkṛit Grammar, IV, 287) it is said that "the old sûtra was exclusively composed in the language called Arddha-Mâgadhî."

> bhâsâ-niayam havai suttam ||

Hêmachandra appends the remark that notwithstanding such is the old tradition, the Jaina Prâkṛit is not of the same description as the Mâgadhî...... It must be noticed that there are two varieties of language observable in their Prâkṛit. The older prose works are written in a language which considerably differs from the language of commentators and poets. The latter entirely conforms to the rules which Hêmachandra gives in the first part of his Prâkṛit Grammar for the Mahârâshṭrî. But the Mahârâshṭrî of Hêmachandra is not identical with the Mahârâshṭrî of Hâla, of the Sêtubandha, and of the dramas. The Jaina Mahârâshṭrî it may be appropriately called ...... The language of the older Sûtras I shall call Jaina Prâkṛit .... I believe that the Jaina Mahârâshṭrî nearest approached the language of Surâshṭra, because the edition of the Jaina scriptures, according to tradition, took place in Valabhî. It might therefore more appropriately be called Jaina Saurâshṭrî. But as it shares the general character of the Prâkṛit commonly called Mahârâshṭrî, and it is thus called by Hêmachandra, I dare not introduce a new name. The Jaina Prâkṛit .... is on the whole the same language as the Jaina Mahârâshṭrî, from which it differs merely by the retention of archaic forms; we may justly look upon it as an older or archaic Mahârâshṭrî. Hêmachandra calls it ârsham, the language of the Rishis, and treats it together with the Jaina Mahârâshṭrî. .... The only Mâgadhism which he discovered in Jaina Prâkṛit is the nominative singular in e formed from masculine bases in a........... I therefore do not hesitate to declare the Jaina Prâkṛit to be Mahârâshṭrî, as has already been done by Lassen in his Institutiones linguæ Pracriticæ p. 42. In those cases in which Jaina Prâkṛit differs from the Mahârâshṭrî, it has usually retained the older forms."

Before proceeding further it is necessary to enter upon the inquiry as to who Gômata or Gommata was, and how this remarkable statue of him came to be erected here, with such descriptive details of the image as have been obtained.

The name Gômata is said, according to one statement, to be derived from gô, the earth, and at, to wander, or math, to go. According to another account, it is derived from gô, speech, and mat (for ma')[1], to gladden, he who gladdens with his words. It is evident that these are merely forced derivations to account for the name, which also appears in the forms Gommata and Gummata, said to be tadbhavas. The Jains, to whom everywhere the images of their Tirthankaras are the only objects of worship, can give no explanation of the worship of Gômata, who is not one of them, further than that he is worshipped out of respect for the first Tirthankara as being his son.[2]

So far as I am aware the name does not occur throughout Hindu literature[3] except in connection with this Jaina image and two others in South India like it but more modern and of smaller proportions, to be mentioned hereafter. The name Gomati occurs in Fah Hian's travels 400 A.D. in connection with Khoten in Turkistan. It is there said—"The ruler of the country located Fah Hian and his companions in a Sangharâma, which was called Gômati (Ku-ma-ti)."[4] The only other occurrence of such a name that I have met with is in connection with the ancient history of Persia. In the celebrated cuneiform inscription of Darius Hystaspes at Behistan[5] it will be seen that Gomates (in the original Persian, Gaumâta) is given as the name of the Pseudo-Bardes or Pseudo-Smerdis, the Magian who usurped the throne of Cambyses by personating his brother. The deception was at length discovered and Gomates slain by Darius. A general slaughter of the Magi followed, and the day was observed ever after as a great festival, called the Mago-phonia, or Slaughter of the Magi.[6] I merely point out the seeming coincidence with the singular name Gômata, and there are it appears Jaina traditions connecting the tirthankara Pârisnâth or Pârśvanâtha with Persia.[7]

1 Compare mantapa used for mandapa.

2 Fergusson says—He is not known to the Jains in the north. All the images on the rock at Gwalior are of one or other of the Tirthankars, and even the Ulwar colossus, Nau Gûnga, can hardly be identified with these southern images. Ind. and East. Arch. 267.

6 The following is the passage referred to, according to the translations by Sir H. Rawlinson. The inscription itself belongs to the 5th year of Darius, or B.C. 516.

Says Darius the king—Afterwards there was a (certain) man, a Magian, named Gomates. He arose from Pissiachada, the mountain named Aracadres, from thence. On the 14th day of the month Viyakhana, then it was that he arose. He thus lied to the state:—"I am Bardes, the son of Cyrus, the brother of Cambyses." Then the whole state became rebellious. From Cambyses it went over to him, both Persia and Media and the other provinces. He seized the empire. On the 9th day of the month Garmapada, then it was he so seized the empire. Afterwards Cambyses having killed himself, died.

Says Darius the king—The empire of which Gomates, the Magian, dispossessed Cambyses, that empire from the olden time had been in our family. After Gomates the Magian had dispossessed Cambyses both of Persia and Media and the dependent provinces, he did according to his desire: he became king.

Says Darius the king—There was not a man, neither Persian, nor Median, nor any one of our family, who could dispossess that Gomates the Magian of the crown. The state feared him exceedingly. He slew many people, who had known the old Bardes; for that reason he slew them, "lest they should recognise me that I am not Bardes, the son of Cyrus." No one dared to say anything concerning Gomates the Magian, until I arrived. Then I prayed to Ormazd; Ormazd brought help to me. On the 10th day of the month Bagayadish, then it was, with my faithful men, I slew that Gomates the Magian, and the chief men who were his followers. The fort named Sictachotes in the district of Media called Nisæa, there I slew him. I dispossessed him of the empire. By the grace of Ormazd I became king: Ormazd granted me the sceptre.

Says Darius the king—The empire which had been taken away from our family, that I recovered. I established it in its place. As (it was) before, so I made (it). The temples which Gomates the Magian had destroyed, I rebuilt. I reinstituted for the state both the religious chaunts and the worship, and (gave them) to the families which Gomates the Magian had deprived of them. I established the state in its place, both Persia, and Media, and the other provinces. As (it was) before, so I restored what (had been) taken away. By the grace of Ormazd I did (this). I laboured until I had established our family in its place, as (it was) before. Thus I laboured, by the grace of Ormazd, that Gomates the Magian should not supersede our family. Rawlinson's Herodotus, Vol. II, pp. 594 ff.

The usurpation of the Pseudo-Bardes checked for a while the carrying out of the decree of Cyrus for the rebuilding of the Temple of Jerusalem; and the Samaritans were able to persuade the usurper to counter-order these works, and to make "the Jews to cease, by force and power" (Ezra iv, 23). Vaux's Ancient History of Persia from the Monuments, p. 29.

7 Cyrus had extended his dominions as far as the Indus, but Darius Hystaspes it was who first crossed that river and added the Panjab to Persia under the name of India as the 20th Satrapy, and the connection continued until the overthrow of the Persian monarchy by Alexander the Great in 330 B.C.

According to Nos. 85 and 105 Gômaṭa is identified with Bâhubali or Bhujabali. He was the son of Puru and the younger brother of Bharata.[8] There was a struggle for empire between the two, which resulted in Bâhubali resigning his claims and retiring from the world in order to do penance. He thus became a Kêvali, and attained such eminence by his victory over karma, or action, that Bharata erected at Pôdanapura an image in his form, 525 bow-lengths in height, which came to be known as Kukkuṭêśvara. In course of time the image became invisible to all except the initiated. But Châmuṇḍa Râya, having heard a description of it, set out with the desire of seeing it. Finding however that the journey was beyond his power, he resolved to erect such an image himself, and by his own efforts succeeded in getting this statue of Gômaṭa made and set up.

The account given in the Bhujabali Charita is substantially the same, with some variation in the details. It states that Bharata and Bhujabali were sons of Nâbhi. At a city in the north, called Pôdanapurî, the râjarshi Bharatêśvara, son of Âdi Brahma, set up a bimba or image of Bhujabali, in the form of a man, 525 bow-lengths in height, so natural that he seemed as if smiling and speaking. This Bhujabali received the new (abhinava) name of Gummaṭa. A merchant who visited the court of Râja Malla gave such a description of this image that Châvuṇḍa his minister resolved to go and see it. He set out, with his mother Kâlikâmba and their guru Siṃha Nandi, taking a vow that he would not taste milk until he had seen this wonder. In the course of their journey they met with unexpected difficulties, and while resting one night at a Jinâlaya near a small hill, each of them had the same dream, in which a muni appeared and informed them that an image of Bhujabali, set up by Râvaṇa, was on that very hill, 10 palmyra (tâle) trees in height, or 20 bow-lengths. They accordingly found the image; and in the year 600 of the Kali yuga, the year Vibhava, Chaitra śuddha 5, Sunday, under the Mṛigaśira nakshatra, Saubhâgya yôga and Kumbha lagna, Châvuṇḍa consecrated this Gommaṭêśvara, who thus appeared to him in Beḷaguḷa in the Kûshmâṇḍâraṇya, endowing it with lands to the value of a lakh and a half of pagodas. The king Râja Malla, on hearing of his munificence, gave him the title of Râya.

The Râjâvali Kathe has the same story but in a different version. After relating the defeat of the Bauddhas by Akalaṅka at the court of Himaśitala (see No. 54)[9], it goes on to say—"And after that, in the Yadu kula, there was Râja Malla, who was in Dakshiṇa Madhura (the southern Madura). He, having subdued Karṇâṭa, Drâviḍa, Mahârâshṭra, Taurushka and other countries, was celebrated as Vîra Mârttâṇḍa Dêva.[10] While his great feudatory (mahâ sâmanta) Châmuṇḍa Râya, a Yama to the Noḷamba family (Noḷamba-kulântaka), ornament of the Gaṅga race (Gaṅga-vaṃśa-lalâma), was ruling in peace and wisdom,—his mother hearing it read in the Âdi Purâṇa (or an early purâṇa) that in Pôdanapura there was an image of Bâhubali Dêva, 500 bows in height; he, with his mother Kâlikâ Dêvi, set forth in order to see it, vowing not to taste milk or fruit until they did. They went by marches, attended by their forces, and at each camping-ground where they halted they set up a Jinâlaya. Thus they arrived at the hill where Bhadrabâhu svâmi's tomb (nis'idhi) was. On the night before they left it, Padmâvatî Dêvi appeared in a dream to both mother and son and said, [8] More properly the half-brother, as they were sons by different wives: Bharata's mother was Yaśasvatî, and Bâhubali's mother was Sunande.

[9] Wilson places this event in A.D. 788.—McK. Coll., I, lxvii.

[10] This would seem to imply that Râja Malla was a king of the Pâṇḍya country, of which Madura was the well-known capital. Of his rule extending thus far we have no other information. There is only one Mârttâṇḍa in the list of Pâṇḍya kings,—No. 28 in the Madura Sthala-Purâṇa list and No. 15 in Mr. Nelson's list (The Madura Country, pp. 39, 74)—and no particulars whatever are given regarding him. Possibly the tradition has arisen out of the fact that a Vîra Pâṇḍya (as will be seen further on) erected the image at Kârkala, and this, in ignorance of any other origin, has been transferred to the one at Śravaṇa Beḷgoḷa.

But it should be stated that in inscriptions the Jain town of Humcha (Patti Pombuchapura) in Shimoga District, where Jinadatta Râya set up a dynasty with which these Pâṇḍyas were connected, is called Dakshiṇa Madhura.

"You are not able to go to Pôdanapura. Here, in the larger hill, is a stone image of Gômaṭa Jina, which was worshipped by Râma and Râvaṇa and seen by Maṇḍôdarî. It is covered up with stones. Purify yourselves, and going to the rock on the smaller hill, shoot an arrow to the south, when, before the sound dies away, the image will rise and appear." At sunrise on the morning after that dream, on shooting an arrow as directed, the image of Bhujabali Yati, which had been hidden by stones, appeared, and proved to be of the height of 18 men.

Erecting a platform round it and building chaityâlayas, Châmuṇḍa Râya, having collected cocoanut milk and the five nectars, performed the final anointing four separate times. But the anointing liquid would not descend lower than the navel.[1] Being greatly distressed thereat, he besought all the priests there to perform the anointing. Still it would not go below the navel. At this moment Kûshmâṇḍinî Dêvî presented herself in the form of an old woman, with a little drop of milk in the half of a gulla kâyi[2] and said "let my faith be tried" (by anointing the image with the milk she had brought), whereon they all derided her. But some of the priests, taking her offering, poured it on the head of the image, when, instantly, it ran down all over the image and covered the hill and the town; whence the town was named Beḷguḷa.[3]

After this, Châmuṇḍa Râya founded many new towns, which he presented for the worship of the god, and bestowing by means of stone inscriptions villages and lands of the value of 1,96,000 ponn, he continued to rule the kingdom with justice.

In another place, it further states that Châmuṇḍa Râya, having established many Jinâlayas and endowed them, brought from his country 64 Jaina Brahmans and made them temple priests (archaka). Next follows an event dated in S'aka 780.

In the face of the plain inscription at the side of the colossal image, stating in several languages that Châmuṇḍa Râya had it made, it is needless to inquire further into the above stories, so far as they pretend it to have existed ages before, from the time of Râma and Râvaṇa, &c.[4] But both the inscription No. 85 and all the accounts agree in stating that it was a desire to reproduce a certain gigantic image at Pôdanapura, of which he had heard, that led Châmuṇḍa Râya to have this colossus at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa made. We also learn from the inscription that the image at Pôdanapura was known as Kukkuṭês'vara[5], from the thick forest which grew up around it being infested with cocks (kukkuṭa) and serpents (sarpa), or kukkuṭasarpa, cockatrices.[6]

3 The story as given by Colonel Mackenzie is as follows:—

Châmunda Râya, after having established the worship of this image, became proud and elated, at placing this god by his own authority at so vast an expense of money and labour. Soon after this, when he performed in honour of the god the ceremony of pañc âmrita snâna (or washing the image with five liquids,—milk, curds, butter, honey and sugar), vast quantities of these things were expended in many hundred pots, but through the wonderful power of the god the liquor descended not lower than the navel, to check the pride and vanity of the worshipper. Châmuṇḍa Râya, not knowing the cause, was filled with grief that his intention was frustrated of cleaning the image completely with this ablution. While he was in this situation, the celestial nymph Padmâvati, by order of the god, having transformed herself into the likeness of an aged poor woman, appeared, holding in her hand the five amritas in a belliya gola (or small silver pot), for washing the statue: and signified her intention to Châmunda Râya, who laughed at the absurdity of this proposal for accomplishing what it had not been in his power to effect. Out of curiosity, however, he permitted her to attempt it: when, to the great surprise of the beholders, she washed the image with the liquor brought in the little silver vase. Châmuṇḍa Râya, repenting his sinful arrogance, performed a second time with profound respect his ablution on which they formerly wasted so much valuable liquids; and washed completely the body of the image. From that time this place is named after the silver vase (or belliya gola) which was held in Padmâvati's hand. (As. Res. IX, 266.)

4 But through inability to read the inscriptions accurately, it was popularly supposed at the place that the word "Châvuṇḍa" was "Râvaṇa," and this was referred to in support of the story that Râvaṇa had made the image.

5 In Nos. 85 and 186 the image of Gommaṭês'vara at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa is called the southern Kukkuṭês'vara.

6 The kukkuṭasarpa is the emblem of Padmâvati, and is represented in sculptures at Beḷgoḷa as a cock or fowl with a serpent's head and neck.

KUKKUṬA SARPA

Scale 12 9 6 3 1 foot

The latter reference at once directs our attention to the Kukkuṭa-pâda-giri or Cock's-foot mountain near Gayâ in Bihâr. It is mentioned by Buddhist pilgrims from China, namely, Fah-Hian, who travelled in India 400 to 415 A.D.[7], and Hiuen-Tsiang, who travelled in India 629 to 645 A.D. It was celebrated as the abode of Kâsyapa, as well as the scene of his death. On this account it was also called Guru-pâda-parvata, or mountain of the master's foot. There was also a monastery, called the Kûkkuṭârâma or Kukkuṭa-pâda-vihâra, near Pâṭaliputra or Patna.

Fah-Hian's account is as follows :—"From this place (Gayâ), going south three li, we arrive at a mountain called Kukkuṭa-pâda-giri. The great Kâsyapa is at present within this mountain. (On a certain occasion) he divided the mountain at its base, so as to open a passage (for himself). This entrance is now closed up. At a considerable distance from this spot, there is a deep chasm ; it is in this (fastness as in a) receptacle that the entire body of Kâsyapa is now preserved. Outside this chasm is the place where Kâsyapa, when alive, washed his hands. The people of that region, who are afflicted with head-aches, use the earth brought from the place for anointing themselves with, and this immediately cures them. In the midst of this mountain, as soon as the sun begins to decline, all the Rahats[8] [i. e. Arhats] come and take their abode. Buddhist pilgrims of that and other countries come year by year (to this mountain) to pay religious worship to Kâsyapa ; if any should happen to be distressed with doubts, directly the sun goes down, the Rahats arrive, and begin to discourse with (the pilgrims) and explain their doubts and difficulties ; and, having done so, forthwith they disappear. The thickets about this hill are dense and tangled. There are, moreover, many lions, tigers, and wolves prowling about, so that it is not possible to travel without great care."[9]

General Cunningham identifies Kurkihâr, near this spot, with a Kukkuṭa-pâda-vihâra, which in Hindi would form Kurak-vihâr (kurak meaning cock) and so Kurkihâr. "The remains at Kurkihâr" he says "consist of several ruined mounds, in which numerous statues and small votive topes of dark blue stone have been found. The principal mass of ruin, about 600 feet square, lies immediately to the south of the village. A second less extensive mound lies to the south-west ; and there is a small mound, only 120 feet square, to the north of the village. The last mound is called Sugatgarh or the house of Sugata, one of the well known titles of Buddha. In the principal mass of ruin, the late Major Kittoe dug up a great number of statues and votive topes ; and a recent excavation on the west side showed the solid brick-work of a Buddhist stûpa.[10]

This Kukkuṭa-pâda mountain and forest is perhaps the place which inscription No. 85 refers to as the site of the Kukkuṭêśvara image. Pôdanapura or Pâdanapuri may perhaps refer to the name Guru-pâda, which we have seen is another name used for the place. No remains appear to have been found of any statue of such dimensions as the latter is described to have had. Of course Buddhists would never mention such an object, owing to its connection with their inveterate enemies the Jains ; and, if it ever existed, the former, having occupied every part of the neighbourhood as consecrated to the memory of Buddha, would have removed all trace of Jaina worship there.

But of gigantic statues of Buddha in those early times we have notices. Fah-Hian says, "On passing this mountain chain (the Tsung Ling or Snowy mountains) we arrive in North India. On the confines of this region is a little kingdom called To-li[1], in which, likewise, there is a congregation of priests belonging to the Little Vehicle. In this kingdom there was, formerly, an Arhat, who, by his spiritual power transported a sculptor up to the Tushita Heavens[2], to observe size, colour, and general appearance of Maitrêya[3] Bôdhisatwa, so that, on his return, he might carve a wooden image of him. Having first and last made three ascents for the purpose of correct observation, he finally completed the image. It was 94 ft. high, and the length of the foot of the image 9 ft. 4 in. On festival days it always emits an effulgent light. The princes of all the neighbouring countries vie with each other in making religious offerings to it. It still exists in this country."[4]

Recently, in connection with the Afghan Boundary Commission, general attention has been directed to the gigantic Buddhist statues at Bâmiyân[5], which place stands at a height of about 8,500 feet, in a valley of the region occupied by Hazâra tribes, on the chief road between Kabul and Turkestan. The earliest mention of the place is by the Chinese pilgrim Hiuen Tsiang in 630 A.D. It was taken and utterly destroyed by Chinghîz Khân in 1222 A.D.

Hiuen Tsiang's account is as follows :—"To the north-east of the royal city there is a mountain, on the declivity of which is placed a stone figure of Buddha, erect, in height 140 or 150 feet. Its golden hues sparkle on every side, and its precious ornaments dazzle the eyes by their brightness. To the east of this spot there is a convent, which was built by a former king of the country. To the east of the convent there is a standing figure of S'âkya Buddha, made of metallic stone[6], in height 100 feet. It has been cast in different parts and joined together, and then placed in a completed form as it stands. To the east of the city twelve or thirteen li there is a convent, in which there is a figure of Buddha lying in a sleeping position, as when he attained Nirvâṇa. The figure is in length about 1,000 feet or so".[7]

Captain Maitland of the Afghan Boundary Commission, the latest visitor to Bâmiyân, says, "To the north is a fairly continuous wall of cliffs, averaging about 300 feet in height .... The cliffs are everywhere pierced with numerous caves .... and here are also the famous idols, the Bût-i-Bâmiân. .... They are about a quarter of a mile apart, and supposed to be male and female. Their heights are respectively 180 and 120 feet. Their names are, as reported by former travellers, Sal Sâl for the male and Shâh Mameh for the female figure. The idols are standing figures, sculptured in very bold relief in deep niches ...... The depth of the niches is about twice the thickness of the figures standing in them : the latter are therefore fairly well protected from the weather, and this accounts for their excellent preservation, nearly all the damage done to them being due to the hand of man.... The idols themselves are rather clumsy figures, roughly hewn in the tough conglomerate rock and afterwards thickly overlaid with stucco, in which all the details are executed. The whole arrangement clearly shows that this was not done at a later period, but is part of the original design of the figures. The stucco appears to have been painted, or at least paint was used in some places. The features of the figures have been purposely destroyed, and the legs of the larger one have been partly knocked away, it is said by cannon shot fired at it by Nadir Shah. Both idols are draped in garments reaching below the knee. The limbs and contour of the body show through, and the general effect of muslin is excellently imitated in the stucco. The arms of both are bent at the elbow, the forearms and the hands projecting, but the latter are now broken off. The feet have also been battered out of shape."[8]

Gigantic statues therefore were not unknown in the north of India, and of some such Châmuṇḍa Râya may have heard the account which so powerfully impressed him. But those hitherto brought to notice are exclusively statues of Buddha; none on this scale have been discovered representing a Jina.[9] The fundamental difference between the two is that the Jaina figures are nude while those of Buddha are always clothed. On the other hand, as the northern Jainas were Svêtâmbaras, or those clad in white, while the southern Jains were Digambaras, or the sky-clad, that is, nude, it does not follow that Jaina statues in the north would be nude. As a matter of fact however it is believed that all statues of Jaina tîrthaṅkaras are invariably nude, thus confirming the statements that the Digambaras are the original and orthodox sect. Indeed, Vardhamâna is expressly said to have been a Digambara: "he went robeless and had no vessel but his hand."

As already stated there are only three of these colossal images of Gomaṭêśvara known to exist, namely, this one at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa, and two in the South Kanara district at Karkala and Yênûr.[10] They are identical in the way in which they are represented, but differ considerably in the features of the face. The Beḷgoḷa statue is not only the most ancient in date and considerably the highest of the three but from its striking position on the top of a very steep hill and the consequently greater difficulty involved in its execution is by far the most interesting.

The image is nude and stands erect, facing the north or in the direction of the smaller hill. The figure has no support above the thighs. Up to that point it is represented as surrounded by ant-hills, from which emerge serpents: a climbing plant twines itself round both legs and both arms, terminating at the upper part of the arm in a clustre of fruit or berries. The pedestal on which the feet stand is carved to represent an open lotus. On this the sculptor has engraved a scale, which corresponds almost exactly with 3 feet 3½ inches English, or with the French metre, which is 39·37 inches English, and is evidently the one employed in the original design.[1] The general aspect and proportions of the figure will be seen from the published illustrations[2], but, owing to the great height of the image and the want [9] Weber says (über das Çatrunjaya Mâhâtmyam) "It is Rishabha's image erected by Bâhubali that imparts its peculiar sanctity to S'atrunjaya" (near Pâlitâna in Katiâwâd or Surâshtra) but this is not of colossal proportions.

[10] At S'ravana gutta, about 4 miles north-west of the Yelwal (Iliväla) Residency near Mysore, is an abandoned Jaina statue of Gommaṭa, about 20 feet high, on the top of a small rocky eminence. The image faces east and has a half smile like that of the Yênûr image. The creeper as at S'ravana Beḷgoḷa twines round the thighs and arms, while a fully formed cobra, with hood expanded, forms a support for each hand. The buildings erected over and in front of it are much more modern. The sloping rock in front, by which the ascent to the image was made, was some years ago split into a great chasm by lightning. But the top can be reached by climbing up a narrow cleft on the north side, with the aid of the roots of the trees growing out of the rock. There are no inscriptions anywhere. A mile to the south there is said to have been a town called Gommatapura of which no traces remain.

There is also a Jaina image, 9 feet high, on the summit of a hill called S'ravanappa gutta, of about 200 feet in elevation, on the borders of the Channapatna and Malavaḷḷi taluqs, near Tippur in the latter. But the image, which faces east, is only in half-relief, carved on a large slab rounded at the top. It is quite deserted and there is no inscription or mark to indicate who it represents or who made it. But at Kuligere in Malavaḷḷi taluq there is an inscription, dated S'aka 838 (A.D. 916), of the time of the Gaṅga king Nîti-mârgga, which shows that Tippur was as far back as that a sacred place of the Jains, and there are numerous Jaina remains at the place, as well as a fine inscription of the time of the Hoysaḷa king Vishṇu Varddhana.

[1] There is an abandoned image, about 10 feet high, on the smaller hill, facing west, which may have been carved to serve as a model and to test the stability of such a figure when erected. For it is complete only to the thighs, from which point it rises from the face of the rock, and may have been cut out of a large upright boulder on the spot where it stands. According to No. 23 it was Arittο Nêmi who made it siddam or in other words demonstrated its feasibility as the inscription may be held to imply. The date of that inscription therefore would be about A.D. 980 and Aritto Nêmi may have been the sculptor of the great colossus.

of any point sufficiently elevated from which to take a picture of it, most of the representations fail to give a good idea of the features of the face, which are the most perfect part artistically and the most interesting. The hair is in spiral ringlets flat to the head, as usual in Jaina images, and the lobe of the ears lengthened down with a large rectangular hole.[3]

The most trustworthy measurements of the different parts seem to be those taken by Mr. Scanlon, of the Public Works Department, in June 1871, and published by Captain Mackenzie in the Indian Antiquary for May 1873 (II, 129). Advantage was taken of the platforms and scaffolding erected for the anointing of the god (which is performed only at certain conjunctions of the heavenly bodies at intervals of several years, and at a great cost)[4] to secure accurate measurements, but unfortunately the priests interfered before the work was quite completed. The following were the dimensions obtained:—

[3] The best representation I have seen is a photograph (copyright reserved) by Appavoo Pillai of Mysore, for whom special facilities were provided by the Jain authorities of the place at the time of the last abhishêka, when high scaffoldings were erected level with the top of the image.

[4] The ceremony was performed in 1887, at the expense of the Kolhâpûr Svâmi, who spent Rs. 30,000 for the purpose.

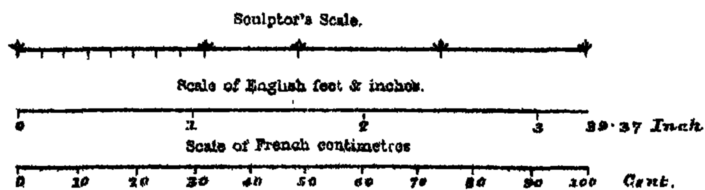

The following account of the ceremony was published by an eye witness, B. Venkaṭâchalam Aiya, B. A., in the Harvest Field (for May):—"The 14th March last was the day of anointing for the statue of Gomatésvara. It was a great day, in anticipation of which 20,000 pilgrims gathered there from all parts of India. There were Bengalis there, Guzeratis also, and Tamil people in great numbers. Some arrived a full month before the time and the stream continued to flow until the afternoon of the day of the great festival .....For a whole month there was daily worship in all the temples, and pâda pûja or worship of the feet of the great idol besides... ..On the great day, the 14th, the people began to ascend the hill even before dawn in the hope of securing good places from which to see everything. Among them were large numbers of women and girls in very bright attire, carrying with them brass or earthen pots. By 10 o'clock all available space in the temple enclosure was filled. Opposite the idol an area of 40 square feet was strewed with bright yellow paddy, on which were placed 1,000 gaily painted earthenware pots, filled with sacred water, covered with cocoanuts and adorned with mango leaves. Above the image was scaffolding, on which stood several priests, each having at hand pots filled with ghee, milk and such like things. At a signal from the Kolhâpûr Svâmi, the master of the ceremonies, the contents of these vessels were poured simultaneously over the head of the idol. This was a sort of preliminary bath, but the grand bath took place at 2 o'clock. Amid the horrible dissonance of many instruments the thousand pots already mentioned were lifted as if by magic from the reserved area to the scaffolding and all their contents poured over the image, the priests meanwhile chanting texts from the sacred books. Evidently the people were much impressed. There were mingled cries of 'Jai, jai, Mahârâja,' and 'Ahaha, ahaha,' the distinctive exclamations of Northern and Southern Indians to mark their wonder and approval. In the final anointing fifteen different substances were used, namely—

1. Water.	6. Sugar.	11. Curds.
2. Cocoanut meal.	7. Almonds.	12. Sandal.
3. Plantains.	8. Dates.	13. Gold flowers.
4. Jaggory.	9. Poppy seeds.	14. Silver flowers.
5. Ghee.	10. Milk.	15. Silver coin.

With the gold and silver flowers there were mixed nine varieties of precious gems; and silver coin to the amount of Rs. 500 completed the offering."

UPPER PART OF COLOSSAL STATUE OF GOMMATESVARA.

The extreme height of the figure may thus be stated at 57 feet, though higher estimates have been given,—60 ft. 3 in. by Sir Arthur Wellesley (the late Duke of Wellington) and 70 ft. 3 in. by Buchanan. The difficult problem involved in the execution and erection of such a gigantic form is thus stated by the eminent architectural authority the late Dr. Fergusson—"The images of this king or Jaina saint are among the most remarkable works of native art in the south of India. Three of them are known and have long been known to Europeans, and it is doubtful if any more exist. They are too remarkable objects not to attract the attention of even the most indifferent Saxon. That at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa attracted the attention of the late Duke of Wellington when as Sir A. Wellesley he commanded a Division at the seige of Seringapatam. He, like all those who followed him, was astonished at the amount of labour such a work must have entailed and puzzled to know whether it was a part of the hill or had been moved to the spot where it now stands. The former is the more probable theory. The hill called Indragiri is one mass of granite about 400 ft. in height, and probably had a mass or Tor standing on its summit, either a part of the subjacent mass or lying on it. This the Jains undertook to fashion into a statue 70 ft. 3 in. in height, and have achieved it with marvellous success. The task of carving a rock standing in its place the Hindu mind never would have shrunk from, had it even been twice the size; but to move such a mass up the steep smooth side of the hill seems a labour beyond their power, even with all their skill in concentrating masses of men on a single point. Whether, however, the rock was found in situ or was moved, nothing grander or more imposing exists out of Egypt, and even there no known statue surpasses it in height, though, it must be confessed, they do excel it in the perfection of art they exhibit."[5]

Of the two other colossal images of Gomaṭêśvara previously referred to as being in the South Kanara district, that at Karkala was erected in A.D. 1431 and is stated to be 41 ft. 5 in. in height: the other one at Yênûr was erected in A.D. 1603 and is about 37 feet high.[6]

Of the former an account has been given by Dr. Burnell[7], who says "it is on the top of a hill, a rounded mass of gneiss of some elevation, and is visible from several miles' distance. The block from which it has been cut was evidently taken from the southern slope of the hill[8], and, as the figure is 41 feet 5 inches high and weighs about 80 tons, it almost rivals the Egyptian statues in size, though its artistic merit is not nearly so great. The date is given in an inscription near the right foot of the statue. It is in Sanskrit but in the Haḷe Kannaḍa character, and is only partly legible owing to the exfoliation to which gneiss is peculiarly subject when exposed to the weather. "It runs[9]:—

[8] Mr. Walhouse says—"The Karkala statue stands upon a rounded rocky hill some three or four hundred feet high [facing east]......The spot is shown where it was excavated and cut into shape—on the western declivity of the hill—and now appears as a long irregular trench overgrown with herbage and bushes. A considerable depression or hollow runs transversely between this spot and the summit of the hill; this is said to have been filled with earth, and the colossus, when finished, raised on to a train of twenty iron carts, furnished with steel wheels, on each of which ten thousand propitiatory cocoa-nuts were broken, and covered with an infinity of cotton. It was then drawn by legions of worshippers up an inclined plane to the platform on the hill-top where it now stands, the transit taking many days." Ind. Ant. V, 36.

śrî-Sômânvaya-Bhairavêndra-tanuja-śrî-Vîra-Pâṇḍyêśinâ ।
nirmmâpya pratimâtra Bâhubalinô jîyât pratishṭhâpitâ ॥

S'aka varsha 1353 ne Virôdhikṛita-saṃvatsarada Phâlguṇa-śuddha 12 Budhavâra-divasa Pâṇḍya-râya pratishṭhâpita ।

"May the worship-worthy statue of Bâhubalin, consecrated here by śrî Vîra-Pâṇḍyêśin, son of Bhairavêndra, of the Lunar race, on the bright 12th lunar day, Wednesday, in Phâlguṇa of the (cycle) year Virôdhikṛit, in the S'aka prince's year 1353, be victorious.

"The remains of the ślôka which commenced the inscription show that this statue was probably consecrated by advice of Vîra-Pâṇḍya's guru, by name Lalitakîrti.[10] Its date=1432 A.D. Vîra-Pâṇḍya seems to have been a Jain feudatory of Vidyânagara, at Ikkêri above the ghâts, but his successors seem to have been bigoted Liṅgâits and to have much contributed to the decay of the Jains in South Kanara.

"The purpose of these colossal statues has been questioned, but I am not aware of any explanation having been given. I would suggest the following. The Jain saints are said to have been giants in size, according to the fabulous stature of men in the ages in which they lived, but which has been, the Jains say, gradually decreasing. Bâhubalin, as a son of Vṛishabhanâtha, the first Tîrthaṅkara, is thus assumed to be of enormous height."

The statue at Yênûr has been described as follows by Mr. Walhouse[1] :—"This statue is not, like the other, placed on a hill, but on an elevated terrace on the south bank of the Gûrpûr river .... The terrace rises about fifty feet above the river's bed .... [The statue] resembles its brother colossi in all essential particulars, but has the special peculiarity of the cheeks being dimpled with a deep grave smile. I could get no explanation of this .... Like its brother at Karkala, the Yênûr giant looks eastward towards the prodigious slopes of the Kudare-mukh [Horse-face] mountain, the highest part of the Western Ghâts, which rises abruptly more than 6,000 feet, about twelve miles in front .... The natives say that this statue was cut and wrought at a spot three or four miles distant from where it now stands and on the other side of the river: if so, its transport to its present site must have been a marvel of engineering and skill."

The following inscription to the south of the image gives its date &c :—

S'aka-varshêshv atîtêshu vishayâkshi-śarêndushu । varttamânê S'ôbhakṛiti vatsarê Phâlgunâkhyakê ॥

mâsê 'tha śukla-pakshêddha-daśamyâm Indu-Pushyakê ।
su-lagnê Mithunê Dêśi-gaṇâmbara-dirêśituḥ ॥

Belguḷâkhya-purî-paṭṭa-kshirâmbudhi-niśâpatêḥ ।
Chârukirtti-munêr divya-vâkyâd Ênûra-paṭṭanê ॥

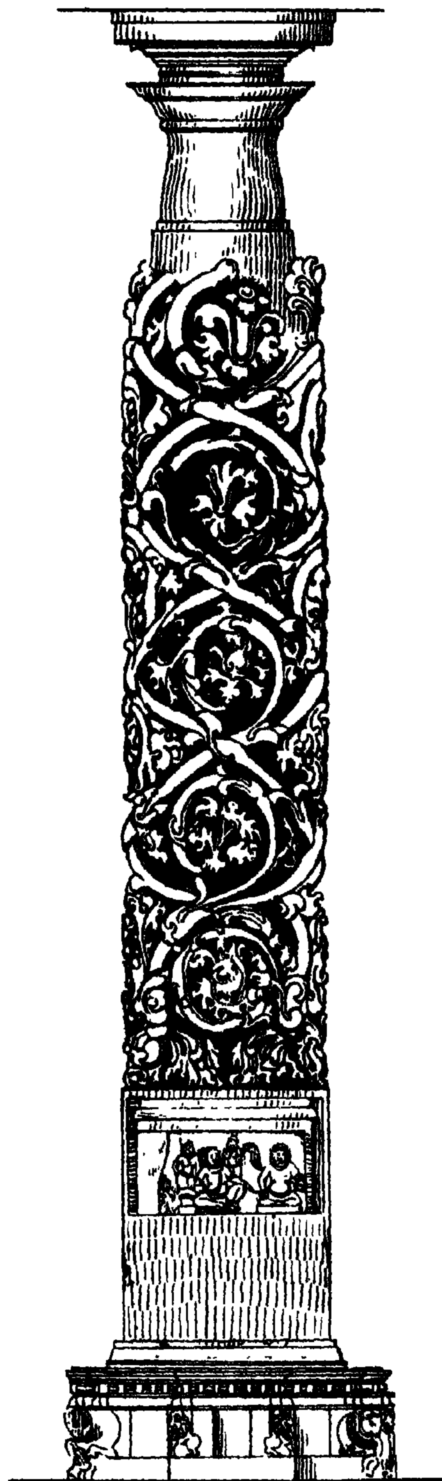

śrî-Râya-kuvarasyâtha jâmâtâ tat-sahôdarî । Pâṇḍyakâkhya-mahâ-dêvyâḥ su-putraḥ Pâṇḍya-bhûpatêḥ ॥

anujêndra-su-râjâkhyaś Châmuṇḍânvaya-bhûshakaḥ । asthâpayat pratishṭhâpya Bhujabaly âkhyakaṃ Jinaṃ ॥

From this we learn that it was an image of Bhujabali, erected in S'aka 1525, the year S'ôbhakṛit (A.D. 1603), on the advice of Chârukirtti-muni, the guru of Belguḷa, by Indra Râjâ, a descendant in the line of Châmuṇḍa. Indra Râja it is stated was the son-in-law of Râya-kuvara, and the son of Pâṇḍyaka mahâdêvi, sister of Râya-kuvara. Also he was the younger brother of Pâṇḍya bhûpati.

[10] This may be confirmed from another inscription. (See Ind. Ant. V, 43).

TYÂGADA BRAHMADÈVA PILLAR

Scale 1 2 3 feet

Of the accessories of these images it is necessary to notice the ant-hills, with serpents issuing from them, which surround the lower limbs, and the climbing plant which twines round both legs and arms. These details are identical in all three, and are supposed to represent so rigid and complete an absorption in penance that ant-hills had been raised around his feet and plants had grown over his body without disturbing the profoundness of the ascetic's abstraction from mundane affairs, which seems a natural explanation.

But in the traditional stories about Bâhubali it is said that, on his refusing to acknowledge the supremacy of his half-brother Bharata, he wandered away in search of territory belonging to some other in which he might perform penance. But wherever he went he still found himself in Bharata's dominions, for all the land was his (see No. 85). In this predicament a Vyantara or demi-god presented himself in the form of a Nâga or serpent and offered his head as a standing-place on which he would support Bâhubali for the performance of his penance.

However this may have been, the figures are not represented as standing on a serpent's head. But it is impossible not to see in the actual sculptured details some connection with the Tree and Serpent worship whose significance and universality have been so splendidly illustrated in Fergusson's work of that name. He has indeed called attention to this, and says[2] :—"All (these three figures) possess the peculiarity of having twigs of the Bo-tree of Sakya muni—the ficus religiosa—twisted round their arms and legs in a manner found nowhere else, and in having serpents at their feet. In the Jaina cave at Badami a similar figure has two serpents wound round its arms and legs precisely as these twigs are here, and the Bo-tree is relegated to the back ground . . . . In that at Yênûr the serpents are three-headed and very prominent beside the statue, on steles alongside the legs. At Karkala they are less so, and at Belguḷa they are relegated to the base, while the tree with its leaves is there thickly spread over the whole figure." This last statement is a mistake, as the climbing plant winds in precisely the same manner over all three figures, each branch taking one turn over the thighs and two turns over the arms. The leaves may be more numerous or prominent in the S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa statue but they cannot be rightly described as "thickly spread over the whole figure." As regards the plant, again, it certainly is a mistake to describe what is evidently a creeper as a twig of the Bo-tree or sacred fig, much more to call it the Bo-tree of Sakya muni or Buddha, which would be quite inadmissible in a Jaina statue. In fact the plant is explained by the Jains to be the Mádhavî or Gaertnera racemosa, a large creeper with fragrant white flowers which springs up and blossoms in the hot weather. It appears to be known in the vernacular as kâḍa gulaguñji.

We may now revert to Châmuṇḍa Râya, who had this colossus made, and examine the accounts given of his achievements, so far as any are available. His own account of himself is contained in No. 109, and if this inscription on the Tyâgada Brahma Dêva kambha had been left intact we should perhaps have had the exact date of the erection of the great statue and a more precise account of the circumstances under which it was set up. But unfortunately Heggaḍe Kanna, in order to have only two lines and a half inscribed regarding himself (No 110), appears to have caused three sides of Châmuṇḍa Râya's original inscription to be entirely effaced, leaving only the one side which is here given in No. 109. So far as this goes, we learn that Châmuṇḍa Râya was born in the Brahma-Kshatra vaṃśa : that by order of a king Indra he conquered Vajvala Dêva, the younger brother of Pâtâla Malla, putting his forces to flight before the face of king Jagadêkavîra, his own lord : that the latter, in the war with Noḷamba Râja and in the war with king Raṇa Siṅga applauded him as equal to any conquest however arduous: and that he overthrew an attempt by Chaladanka Ganga to seize by force the Ganga empire.[3]

These statements accord with those given in the Châmuṇḍa Râya Purâṇa. It is there said, in the opening chapter, that his lord was the Gaṅga-kula-chûḍâmaṇi, Jagadêkavîra, Noṇamba-kulântaka-dêva[4]; and that he was born in the Brahma-Kshatra vamśa. In the concluding chapter it is said that he was the disciple of Ajita-sêna: also that in the Kṛita yuga he was Shaṇmukha, in the Trêta yuga Râma, in the Dvâpara yuga Gâṇḍîvi, and in the Kali yuga Vîra-mârttâṇḍa.[5] The origin of his various titles is then related. From his defeat of Vajvaḷa Dêva in the Kheḍaga war he obtained the title Samara-dhurandhara; from the valour he displayed in the plain of Gônûr in the Noṇamba war, the title Vîra-mârttâṇḍa; from his fight in the fort of Uchchaṅgi, the title Raṇa-raṅga-siṅga; from his killing Tribhuvana-Vîra and others in the fort of Bâgalûr and enabling Gôvinda to enter it, the title of Vairi-kula-Kâladaṇḍa; from his defeat of Râja and others in the fort of king Kâma, the title of Bhuja-vikrama; from his killing his younger brother Nâga-varmma on account of his hatred, the title of Chhaḷadaṅka-Gaṅga; from his killing the Gaṅga warrior (bhaṭa) Mudu Râchayya, the titles of Samara-Paraśurâma and pratipaksha-râkshasa; from his destroying the fort of the warrior (bhaṭa) Vîra, the title of bhaṭa-Mâri; from upholding the brave qualities of himself and others, the title of guṇavaṃ kâva; from his virtue, liberality &c., the title of samyaktva-ratnâkara; from his not coveting the wealth or wives of others, the title of sauchâbharaṇa; from his never telling an untruth even in jest, the title of Satya-Yudhishṭhira; from his being the head of the bravest, the title of Su-bhaṭa-chûḍâmaṇi. Finally, in his composition, he calls himself Kavi-jana-śêkhara, the head of the poets.

Of most of these allusions we have no other information, but it is remarkable that among so many distinguished actions no mention is made of a single work of religious merit, such as we should expect to characterise the man who conceived the project of creating the colossal image as an object of worship. On the contrary, there is little more than a record of warfare and bloodshed from beginning to end. On the other hand, in No. 89 Châmuṇḍa Râya is mentioned simply by his title of Râya (which is also used in other references), along with Ganga Râja, and Hulla, to be noticed further on, as one of the chief promoters of the Jaina faith, in the following verse:—

sthira-Jina-śâsanôddharaṇar âdiyoḷ âr ene Râcha-Malla-bhû- |
vara-varamantri-Râyane balikke budha-stutan appa Vishṇu-bhû- |
vara-varamantri-Gaṅgaṇane matte balikke Nṛisiṃha-Dêva-bhû- |
vara-varamantri-Hullane paraṅg init ulloḍe pêḷal âgade ||

'If it be asked who in the beginning were firm promoters of the Jina doctrine (i. e. in S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa)—(they were) Râya, the minister of king Râcha-Malla; after him, Gaṅga, the minister of king Vishṇu; and after him Hulla, the minister of king Nṛisiṃha-Dêva: if any others could claim as much would they not be mentioned?'

We may now pass on with our review of the inscriptions, taking up No. 67, which is inscribed at the base of the image in the upper storey of the Châmuṇḍa Râya basti. It is in Haḷe Kannaḍa, and states that the temple was erected by the son, no name given, of the mantri Châmuṇḍa, and that he was a lay-disciple of Ajitasêna muni. It would appear that it must have been originally built in memory of Châvuṇḍa Râya's death. No date is given, but it clearly belongs to somewhere about A.D. 995. This temple is the handsomest in the place, both in style, dimensions and decorative features. It stands at the extreme north of the temple area, towards the middle of the space, and faces east. It does not however in its present form belong to that date, for No. 66, inscribed on the image in the lower temple, shows that the building as it now exists was erected by the son of Gaṅga Râja, which would be about 140 years later. The only explanation that occurs to me of what took place is that either the original structure was like a manṭapa, with the image above it, and that subsequently the present building was erected round it ; or that, if the image now in the upper storey were originally on the ground floor, it was removed to its present position on the reconstruction or enlargement of the temple, to allow of Gaṅga's son consecrating a separate image of his own. We shall find another case in which the same difficulty arises when we come to No. 64.

[3] It is not improbable that the battle referred to in No. 60 was connected with this affair. On the other hand it will be seen that he himself also got the title Chaladanka-Gaṅga.

[4] A title inherited from his father who preceded him on the throne, and who, so far as we know, was the first to bear it.

Next in chronological order follows No. 119, a rock inscription in Nâgarî characters. It is the only one dated in the Saṃvat or Vikrama era, and it belongs to A.D. 1062 but is legible no further than to give the name Kâshṭa saṅgha. This saṅgha occurs in no other inscription.

Here have been put in two other rock inscriptions, Nos. 36 and 37, whose date is unknown. Of the persons mentioned in them no information has been found.

No. 71 is an inscription inside Bhadrabâhu's cave, on the rock at one of the sides. It is in Nâgarî characters and nearly worn out. It states that Jinachandra worships the feet (i. e. footprints) of Bhadrabâhu. As this may be the Jinachandra mentioned in No. 55 as a sadharmma or colleague of Mâghanandi who was the father of Mêghachandra, and as the latter according to No. 47 died in A.D. 1115, the date of the present inscription may be about A.D. 1090.

We next come to No. 46, dated S'aka 1037 (a mistake, as appears from No. 47, for 1035), the year Vijaya (A.D. 1113).[6] It records the erection of a pillar, silâ stambhaṃ, (also called at the end nisidige, tomb or monument), by Lakshmî, the wife of Gaṅga Râja, in memory of Bûchana or Bûchi Râja, who was the son of the daṇḍanâyakiti Lakkala-dêmati and a lay-disciple (guḍḍa) of S'ubhachandra-siddhânta-dêva, and who ended his life in the orthodox Jaina manner (sarvva-saṅga-parityâga-pûrvvakaṃ muḍipidaṃ). The inscription is principally in verse, in the Kannaḍa language, and contains some elegant turns of composition.

Although not stated, on comparing this with Nos. 49 and 48, it seems certain that Lakkala and Lakshmî were the same, and that Bûchi Râja was therefore the son of Gaṅga Râja. It is singular that the father is not mentioned, but perhaps the death of this son, probably in early life, was a painful subject and it was considered politic not to connect the misfortune with the rising prosperity of the king's minister. The wife therefore, who it is stated was very proud of the boy at his birth, takes the calamity all upon herself.

The next inscription, No. 47, is dated in S'aka 1037, the year Manmatha (A.D. 1115). It records the erection of a tomb or monument (nisidhige) by Lakshmîmati daṇḍanâyakiti, wife of Gaṅga Râja, minister to the Hoysaḷa king Vishṇu-varddhana, in memory of Mêghachandra-traividya-dêva. The inscription is one of those engraved on four sides of a square stone pillar. It is nearly all in verse, partly Sanskrit and partly Kannaḍa, and was composed by Perggaḍe Bhâva Râja.

The first part is occupied with an account of a succession of distinguished gurus belonging to the Nandi gaṇa, descended in the line of Gautama, the disciple of Mahâvîra. First we have mention of Padmanandi, who (so also in No. 40) is identified with Koṇḍakundâchârya: then come Umâsvâti, also called Gṛiddhra-piñchha—described as the most learned Jaina of his time,—his disciple Balâka-piñchha, and the disciple of the latter, Guṇanandi. This last had 300 disciples, of whom 72 were specially distinguished. The chief of them was Dêvêndra, whose disciple was Kaladhautanandi, whose son was Madana-śaṅkara, whose disciple was Viranandi.

A king named Golla Dêva, described as of the line of king Nûtna-chandira (new moon), for some reason (kim api kâraṇêna) took dikshe under Viranandi, and became Gollâchârya. His disciple was Traikâlya yôgi, whose disciple was Abhayanandi, who overcame in argument Pari Shah (?) and others. His disciple was the lord Sôma Dêva, who became Sakalêndu or Sakalachandra; and his disciple was Mêghachandra, whose disciple was Prabhâchandra.

Then follow praises of Mêghachandra, an account of his death, and of the erection of the monument by the wife of Gaṅga Râja, at the instance of Prabhâchandra, who was her guru.

At the end is a verse extolling Gaṅga Râja for repairing the Jaina temples throughout the Gaṅgavâḍi 96,000: and a verse in praise of the liberality of Lakshmîmati.

Next follows No. 55. It is not dated, and consists entirely of a succession of gurus down to Bâlachandra. As he was a colleague or fellow-student of Mêghachandra, who, as we learn from No. 47, died in A.D. 1115, this inscription must be of about that the same date. The information it supplies is of much interest.

It is the earliest that commences with the verse praising the syâd vâda, which subsequently appears at the beginning of almost every Jaina śâsana. The following is Wilson's account of this system, to which so much importance is attached:—"The Jains are known in controversial writings by the title sapta-vâdîs, or sapta-bhaṅgîs, the disputers or refuters of seven positions: more correctly speaking, they are reconcilers, or could be so, of seven contradictory assertions, evincing a sceptical character, which justifies another epithet which they acknowledge, of syâd-vâdîs, or assertors of possibilities. The seven positions are the following:

1. A thing is; 2. it is not; 3. it is and it is not; 4. it is not definable; 5. it is, but is not definable; 6. it is not, neither is it definable; 7. it is and it is not, and is not definable.

"Now these positions imply the doctrines of the different schools—the Sâṅkhya, Vêdânta, and others—with regard to the world, to life, and to spirit; and are met in every case by the Jains with the reply syâd vâ, it may be so sometimes; that is, whatever of these dogmas is advanced will be true in some respects, and not in others; correct under some circumstances and not under others; and they are therefore not entitled to implicit trust, nor are they irreconcilable."[7]

After praise of Varddhamâna and Koṇḍakunda (see No. 40 and note), Dêvêndra is mentioned as born in the Mûla-saṅgha and Dêsika-gaṇa. His disciple was Chaturmukha-dêva, a name which he had acquired by fasting for a month, eight days at a time at each of the four points or directions (chatur mukha) of the compass.

He had 84 disciples, of whom Gôpanandi gained destinction in the Vakra-gachcha. Of him it is related that he accomplished what had been found impossible by every one else, namely, that he restored the Jina dharmma, which for some time had been at a stand-still, to the countenance and prosperity it had enjoyed in the days of the Gaṅga kings.

His colleague or fellow-student was Prabhâchandra, whose feet were reverenced by Bhôja Râja, the king of Dhâra. This famous patron of literature reigned from about 1004 to 1059 A.D.[8] Prabhâchandra's colleague was Dâmanandi, who was a mill-stone in grinding to powder the arguments of an opponent named Vishṇu Bhaṭṭa: who he was does not appear. Dâmanandi's colleague was Maladhâri, also called Guṇachandra, who apparently belonged to the temple of S'ântiśa at Balipura (perhaps Baḷagâmi in the Shimoga District).

His colleague was Mâghanandi, proficient in the syâd vâda; whose colleague was Jinachandra, compared to Pûjyapâda in knowledge of the Jainêndra grammar, to Akalaṅka in logic and to Bhâravi in poetry. His colleague was Dêvêndra, described as the muni of Baṅkâpur (in Dharwar); whose colleague was Vâsava-chandra, who had acquired great practice in the syâd vâda logic, and was known in the Châḷukya capital or camp (kaṭaka) as Bâla-Sarasvati. His brother and colleague was Yaśaḥkîrtti, who expounded the syâd vâda and overcame the Bauddhas, his feet being worshipped by the king of Siṃhala or Ceylon. Who this may have been it is difficult to say, but it appears that Mihindu, who succeeded to the government of Ceylon at his capital Anurâdhâpura in A.D. 1023, forsook the throne in 1033 on account of incursions from India. In 1059 he was captured by the Chôḷas, who took him prisoner to the mainland and appointed a Chôḷa viceroy to govern the island. In 1071 the ancient kingdom of Ceylon was restored in the person of Vijaya Bâhu, who in twelve years succeeded with great difficulty in driving out the Chôḷa usurpers[9]

The colleague of the last, and a disciple of Gôpanandi, was Trimushṭi, so called because he subsisted on three handfuls (tri mushṭi) of food. His colleague Gauḷa, had also three other names—Maladhâri, Hômachandra, and Gaṇḍa-vimukta. His colleague, again, was S'ubhakîrtti, whose colleague was Mêgha-chandra, the son (or disciple) of Mâghanandi. He seems to have had, if the phrase has been rightly interpreted, a celebrated daughter, called Abhaya-chandrikâ, but nothing more is said about her. His colleague was Kalyâṇakîrtti, who had power to exorcise the demon S'âkini. His colleague was Bâlachandra, who was descended apparently from the Sâgara family. His learning is described at some length, and the inscription winds up with a summary of the names of the gurus previously mentioned.

We now come to a series of inscriptions connected with Gaṅga Râja. The first of them are the last lines in Nos. 75 and 76, which state, in Jaina Mahârâshṭri and Haḷo Kannaḍa respectively, that Gaṅga Râja had the enclosure or cloisters round (suttâlayam) made for the colossal statue of Gomaṭêśvara. The inscriptions are on either side the image, immediately below those of Châmuṇḍa Râya, and in characters to correspond. Their date, for the reasons already given (p. 23), is fixed as A.D. 1116. The erection of this enclosing parapet wall and other buildings around has certainly detracted from the imposing and picturesque effect the gigantic image must previously have presented when standing alone in its naked sublimity on the summit of the hill. But probably the walls were now required for its protection from injury. For when it was erected the Jainas were in the ascendant, and Jainism was the State religion. But, with the conversion to the Vaishṇava faith of the Hoysaḷa king Biṭṭi Dêva (subsequently called Vishṇu-varddhana), in probably this very year, by the reformer Râmânujâchâri, great animosity was excited against the Jainas, albeit they were too powerful to be altogether set aside. There are even stories of Râmânujâchâri's having mutilated the image, so as to ruin it as an object of worship. No trace remains of such injury, unless it be that the forefinger of the left hand, which is shorter than it should be, had a piece struck off below the first joint and was afterwards sculptured into a perfect finger again. This particular form of revenge would easily have suggested itself if it be true, as one tradition states, that the change of the king's religion was in some degree brought about by the refusal of his Jaina guru to take food with him because the king was mutilated, having lost one of his fingers.

9 Sewell's Madras Antiquities, II, 221.

Next follow three inscriptions, Nos. 65, 64 and 63, which record the erection of three more of the bastis on the smaller hill. They are severally engraved on the pedestal of the principal image in each of the temples, except that 64 is on the image in the upper storey, as is the case with No. 67. The first informs us that the Âdiśvara basti, now known as the S'âsana basti, was erected by Gaṅga Râja; the second, that another Âdiśvara basti, now known as the Kattale basti, was erected by him for his mother; and the third, that yet another Âdiśvara basti, now known as the Eraḍu-kaṭṭe basti, was erected by his wife. They are not dated, but they unquestionably belong to about A.D. 1116, as No. 59, whose date is 1117, is set up at the door of the S'âsana basti, (whence the name), and gives particulars of an endowment granted by Gaṅga Râja for the bastis erected by his mother and wife. Of course it might be argued from this that the S'âsana basti should come last of the three, but from their respective situations I conclude that it was the first. They must however have been under erection almost simultaneously.

No. 65 is in Sanskrit verse, and from it we learn that Gaṅga Râja's guru was S'ubhachandra; also that his father was Budhamitra and his mother Pôchâmbikâ. As regards the former, No. 45 and other inscriptions give his name as Êcha or Êchi Râja. But as it appears from No. 45 that he was originally a Brahman and then became a Jaina, Budhamitra must have been his Brahman name and Êcha the name taken by him on embracing the Jaina faith. The S'âsana basti, so called, as above stated, from the śâsana or inscription No. 59 being set up conspicuously at its entrance, is a plain building, situated immediately behind the Chandra Gupta basti, with a narrow passage between, and faces the east.

No. 64 is in Kannaḍa, and merely states that Gaṅga Râya, the lay-disciple of S'ubhachandra, had the temple made for his mother Pôchavve. We might from this be justified perhaps in concluding that it was built in memory of his mother at her death, but on consideration of the statements in No. 59, already referred to, and of No. 44, taken together with Nos. 63 and 48, it seems more probable that it was erected at this time. The temple, as now seen, is quite plain externally, but rather long. As it has no other opening than the single door in front, and all access of light even to this is prevented by the large enclosed entrance hall to be further described lower down, it is easy to account for the name of Kattalé basti or temple of darkness by which the structure is called. It is also called Padmâvatî basti, probably from its having been rebuilt by some one of that name, when the original image was moved up to the top to make room for a fresh consecration in connection with the enlargement, as suggested in the case of No. 67. The temple is situated to the west of Chandra Gupta basti, but placed more to the south, so that it begins in a line with where the other ends. There seems no doubt that it had a small tower something like that of the Châmuṇḍa Râya basti, but no tower now exists, though it is shown in a drawing (made in ultra native style) of the place as it formerly was which exists in the maṭha. At some subsequent period a large pillared hall was built in the square space in front of this basti and the Chandra Gupta basti, in such a way that both bastis opened into it, the latter on the north and the former on the west. A flight of stone steps outside, at the north-east angle, led up to the top of the hall, and here, it is said, the ladies of rank used to assemble to witness the great festivals. This hall seems to have given way and been rebuilt in recent times, in a rough fashion, the partially ornamental pillars of the former structure, some fragments of which are lying about the site, being replaced by plain uncut stones, and a partition wall built in front to shut in the whole.

No. 63 is in Sanskrit verse and is filled with the praises of Lakshmî, the wife of Gaṅga Râja, who built the temple. It is situated to the north-east of Chandra Gupta basti, some distance away both from that and the S'âsana basti built by her husband, and faces to the north. It is also a plain building, and called Eradu katte basti from having a raised terrace on each side of the entrance. Possibly it was built before the other, but in No. 59 the mother's is mentioned first and then the wife's: I have therefore preserved the same order.

KATTALE-BASTI

The next inscription, No. 45, is of great importance for the incidental information it supplies. Its date, as appears from No. 59, is A.D. 1117. Its immediate object was to record the grant by Ganga Râja, minister to Vishnu-varddhana, of a place called Parama, as an endowment of the bastis erected by his mother and his wife.

Ganga Râja's genealogy is traced from Mâra, whose wife was Mâkanâmbe, through their son Êcha, who was a Brahman (dvija) of the Kaundinya gôtra.[10] He became a devoted Jaina, and his wife was Pôchikabbe. They were the parents of Ganga Râja.

A spirited account is given of how the latter made a night attack at Kannegâla on the army of the Châlukya emperor Tribhuvana-malla Permmâdi Dêva (i. e. Vikramâditya, who reigned 1076 to 1127 A.D.), which was there encamped under the command of twelve feudatory chiefs, and completely defeated it, capturing all their stores and vehicles, which he presented to his king. The latter, greatly delighted with his prowess, asked him to name his reward, on which he begged for Parama[1], in order to present it as above stated.

The inscription winds up with a verse which often occurs in connection with Ganga Râja, recounting how he repaired all the ruined bastis throughout Gangavâdi, and had the enclosure or cloisters made round Gommata dêva; also how he drove the Tigulas (or Tamil people) out of Gangavâdi and caused Vîra Ganga (i. e. Vishnu-varddhana) to stand erect—an exploit regarding which we have full particulars in No. 90, to be noticed further on—thus proving himself a hundred times more fortunate than the former Râja of the Gangas.

The latter reference is unquestionably to Ganga Râja, the last of the Ganga kings, who was on the throne from at least 1022 to 1061 A.D. and whose capital was then taken by the Chôlas and the Ganga sovereignty brought to an end. The present Ganga Râja, as will be seen further on, had the good fortune to recover the capital of his ancestors from the Chôlas.

The inscription No. 59 is a repetition of the last (No. 45) as far as that goes, but adds important particulars. It also gives the date of the grant as S'aka 1039, the year Hêvalambi (A.D. 1117). Ganga Râja it is stated built towns and Jaina temples in every direction. It also introduces a panegyric of his fame, saying that it eclipsed that of Mabbarisi for whom (formerly) the Gôdâvarî stood still, for now the Kâvêrî, coming down in flood, surrounded him and touched his feet as if in obeisance. There is no information to explain either of these allusions.

Ganga Râja's gift of Parama to the basti erected by his mother was confirmed by his father Êchi Râja, and the boundaries of the village are given. The inscription was engraved by Varddhamânâchâri.

The next inscription is No. 139, dated S'aka 1041, the year Vilambi (A.D. 1119). It records the death, in the manner of a sannyâsi, of Mânkabbe Ganti, who had received dikshe from Divâkara-nandi, for whom she had erected a tomb, whence he must have died before she did. There is nothing more to show who she was.

The descent of Divâkara-nandi is said to be from Kondakunda, "who moved about leaving a space of four inches between himself and the ground" † (showing his perfection in yôga, see No. 105), [10] We have distinguished instances in Pampa, Ponna, and Nâgavarmma, of Jainas who were of Brahman origin. (See Karnâtaka Bhâshâ Bhushana, Intro: 13, 15, 1.

[1] This village is a short distance to the north-east of S'rava a Belgola.

through Dêvêndra. Divâkara-nandi's disciple was Maladhâri dêva, whose disciple was S'ubhachandra-dêva. (See No. 43).

We next come to No. 49, dated S'aka 1042, the year Vikâri, (A.D. 1120). It records the death of Dêmiyakka, who was the sister of Bûchi Râja, (see above, on No. 46), and wife of the merchant Châmuṇḍa Seṭṭi. A pillar (silâ stambham) was erected in memory of her, by Lakshmî, no doubt the wife of Gaṅga Râja, as mentioned in No. 48. Some parts of the inscription are word for word the same as that. And, if the conjecture there made be correct, Dêmiyakka must have been the daughter of Gaṅga Râja and his wife Lakkala, Lakkavve, or Lakshmî.

The inscription No. 44, which follows, records the death, in S'aka 1043, the year S'ârvari (A.D. 1121), of Pôchikabbe, the mother of Gaṅga Râja, and his erection of a tomb (nisidhige) to her memory.

The inscription begins with the genealogy and Jaina devotion of her husband Êcha, as given above in No. 45, and goes on to describe the virtues and benefactions of Pôchâmbike. She had erected many chaityâlayas in Beḷuguḷa and other sacred places, and made gifts to them. At length, forsaking household cares and the life of a woman, she became a sannyâsi and, with the performance of the vow of sallêkhana, mounted, triumphant over the troubles of this present life, to the throne of the gods above.

Her son Gaṅga Râja is next praised in a string of titles and epithets, among which he is called "the full vessel for the coronation-anointing of the Hoysaḷa king Vishṇu-varddhana," the significance and appropriateness of which will come under consideration further on.

The next inscription is No. 48, dated a year later, namely S'aka 1044, the year Plava (A.D. 1122). Gaṅga Râja had, the year before, lost his mother, he now lost his wife, and the inscription records his erection of a tomb or monument to her memory. Her virtues, beauty and piety are praised at length; and no wives in the world, it is said, could compare with the wife of Gaṅga Râja. This distinguished general and minister had however his domestic troubles. For we have seen in Nos. 46 and 49 how he and his wife had lost in early life their only son and daughter. That this was the case seems confirmed by there being no mention here of any children. These losses, too, so irreparable to a Hindu, may, one can well understand, have furnished a powerful incentive to the remarkable religious zeal and liberal benefactions of both husband and wife. The prosperity of the former was patent to all; the wife therefore, as we have seen, seems tacitly to admit that the cause of their misfortunes must have been in her. Nothing is said of her family or descent.

The inscription No. 43, which follows, shows that Lakkavve's guru S'ubhachandra died only a year after her, or in S'aka 1045, the year S'ôbhakrit (A.D. 1123). It is inscribed on four sides of a square pillar, erected to his memory by Gaṅga Râja, who was also his lay-disciple (guḍḍa) or adherent. Gaṅga Râja's sister-in-law, and therefore the sister of Lakkavve, whose name was Jakkaṇâmbe, is mentioned at the end as also his adherent, and as having apparently devoted herself to a religious life.

The inscription begins with tracing the spiritual descent of S'ubhachandra, and contains much of the information already derived from No. 47. After Mahâvîra and Gautama, it mentions Padmanandi, whose second name was Koṇḍakundâchârya; Umâsvâti, whose other name was Griddhra-piñchha; his disciple Balâka-piñchha; and his disciple Guṇanandi. The latter had 300 disciples, of whom 72 were specially distinguished, the chief of them being Dêvêndra. His disciple was Kaladhauta-nandi, whose disciple was Sampûrṇa-chandra, proficient in solar and lunar astronomy; whose disciple was Dâmanandi, whose eldest son was S'ridhara.

Then is introduced Chandrakîrtti, and his disciple Divâkaranandi. His disciple was Gaṇḍa-vimukta Maladhâri, of whom S'ubhachandra was the disciple, (see No. 139). The death of the latter is related with a despairing wail of grief—'alas ! alas ! the great yati S'ubhachandra Dêva departed to svarga.'

The inscription is well written and was the composition of Heggaḍe Marddimayya, a lay-disciple of Prabhâchandra. It was engraved by Varddhamânâchâri, who had done No. 59 six years before.

We now come to No. 56, which is dated in the same year as the above, namely S'aka 1045, the year S'ôbhakṛit, (A.D. 1123). Properly it ought to come first, being issued on New Year's day, four months earlier, but it was thought better to keep Gaṅga Râja's memorial stones together, as the present inscription is of a totally different character. Its object is to record the erection of a basti by S'ântala Dêvi, the queen of Vishṇu-varddhana ; but incidentally it gives certain information regarding the Hoysaḷa kings.

After praise of Prabhâchandra, the disciple of Mêghachandra, the descent of the Yadu line is traced from Brahma. We then have the story of Sala and the tiger, whence he took the name Poysaḷa or Hoysaḷa which was borne by all the kings of the dynasty descended from him. Next came Vinayâditya, who is said to have subdued the Malapas or hill chiefs. His son was Ereyaṅga, whose son was Vishṇu-varddhana. Among the conquests made by the latter are mentioned Chakragoṭṭi, Talakâḍu, Nilagiri, Koṅgu, Naṅgali, Kôḷâla, Tereyûru, Koyatûru, Koṅgali, Uchchaṅgi, Taleyûru, Pombu-chcha, Vandhâsura-chauka, and Baleya paṭṇa.[2] He thus brought the whole of the Gaṅgavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand (the central and southern parts of Mysore) into subjection to his rule, and assumed the titles of Tribhuvana-malla, and Bhujabala Vîra Gaṅga.

His queen was S'ântala Dêvi, the elder daughter of Mârasiṅga and Mâchikabbe. Among the titles or epithets applied to her is the significant one of Savati-gandha-vâraṇa, 'a rutting elephant to co-wives,' and this menacing title, strange and inappropriate as it appears for the purpose,[3] is the one that she selected for the name of the basti she caused to be erected at Belgoḷa, a name which it still retains, dedicated though it is to S'ântisvara (literally, lord of Patience), as appears from No. 62, which follows. She also, with the permission of Vishṇu-varddhana, endowed it with various lands, which she presented through her guru Prabhâchandra. And Sahasrakîrtti, disciple of the latter, had 313 brass vessels made for it.

The next inscription, No. 62, is from the image in the interior. It is in Sanskrit verse, and relates that S'ântala Dêvi, a lay-disciple of Prabhâchandra and the consort of king Vishṇu, erected the temple and set up therein the image of S'ânti Jina. This tîrthaṅkara was perhaps selected because his name was similar to her own. One of the verses describes her attractive qualities in a string of equivoques such as are considered a superlative beauty in Hindu poetry.

The inscription next in date, No. 54, is one of the most learned and interesting of the whole collection. Its object is to record the death, in S'aka 1050, the year Kilaka, (A.D. 1128), of Mallishêṇa muni, but the abundance and detail of the information it supplies regarding the succession of gurus in whose line he was descended are of the highest importance. It is entirely in Sanskrit, and in verse, interspersed here and there with chûrṇis or quotations in corroboration of the narrative.

Commencing with praise of Varddhamâna and his disciple Gautama, it passes on to the S'ruta kêvalis, especially naming Bhadrabâhu and his disciple Chandra Gupta, who, on account of the merit of his guru, was 'for a long time served by the forest deities.' Next follow Koṇḍakunda, who caused the (Jina) doctrine to be widely established in Bharata (or India), and Samantabhadra, who, by the spell of his own word, summoned Chandraprabhâ, an allusion which is explained by the following statement in the Râjâvaḷi-kathe :—modalu Padmanandigaḷum Pûjyapâdarum tatvârtthadoḷ sandêham bare prayatnadim Pûrvva-Vidêhaman eydi samavasaraṇa-dars'ana-tîrtthankarâvalôkanadim nissandêham âge bandu virachisida kramadoḷe Samantabhadrâchâryya-svâmigaḷu Kaus'ambi-nagaradoḷu S'âsana-dêvi pratyaksham âge suvarṇṇamaya-Chandraprabha-svâmi-pratibimbama lôkâs'charyyam âge tôrisi vividha-siddhânta shaṭ-khaṇḍâgama mṛidu-Samskṛitu-bhâshâ-ṭîkam virachisiral. 'As formerly Padmanandi (i. e. Koṇḍakunda, see No. 47) and Pûjyapâda (see No. 108), having doubts as to the tatvârttha, with great effort reached Eastern Vidêha (Tirhut in Bihar), and by beholding the tîrthankaras, their manifestation and passing, came back with all doubt removed ; even so Samantabhadra-svâmi, the S'âsana-dêvî having appeared to him in the city of Kauśambi (on the Jumna, near Allahabad) and displayed to him the world-astonishing golden image of Chandraprabha-svâmi, wrote commentaries in soft (or easy) Sanskrit on the various siddhânta and the six branches of âgama.'

Here comes in the first chûrṇi, introducing a most valuable quotation from Samantabhadra as to his life and travels. He states that he first beat the drum,[4] inviting to discussion, in Pâṭaliputra (the ancient Palibothra of the Greeks, the capital of Chandra Gupta ; now Patna, on the Ganges). He then went to Mâḷava (Malwa), Sindhu (Sindh) and the Ṭhakka country (the Panjâb) ; and even to the out-of-the-way Kañchi (Conjeveram), but could find no one to oppose him. At length he arrives at Karahâṭaka (Kolhapur in the South Mahratta country) and reproaches the king, whose name is not mentioned, that no one at his court will meet him in argument. The Râjâvaḷi-kathe, in quoting the same statements, introduces Karnâṭa before Karahâṭaka, and adds some lines referring to his being successively in Kâñchi, ? Lâmbusa, Daśapura (mentioned in the Pampa Râmâyaṇa, vii, 35, as near Ujjayini) and Vâṇârasi (Benares).[5]

As I have pointed out elsewhere,[6] Samantabhadra, with Kaviparimêshṭi and Pûjyapâda, always in this order, is invoked at the beginning of all the principal Jaina works in Haḷe Kannaḍa. Supposing him to have preceded at a greater or less distance the guru next mentioned, and that is the most natural inference, he might, in connection with the remarks made below, be placed in the 1st or 2nd century A.D. As a matter of fact Jaina tradition assigns him apparently to about S'aka 60 or A.D. 138.[7] Some further singular accounts about Samantabhadra will be quoted in connection with No. 105.

Then is introduced Simha-nandi, who, with the sword vouchsafed to him of the praise of Bhagavat Arhata, cut through the stone pillar of the hostile army—deadly sin (ghâti mala) ;[8] and then bestowed it on his disciple, who with it cut through the stone pillar which like a bolt barred the entry of the goddess of empire. These are singular statements, but if I am not mistaken may furnish the clue to a most important identification. The only mention of the feat of cutting through a stone pillar that I am acquainted with is in connection with Koṅguṇi-varmmâ, the first king of the Gaṅga line. Every one of the Gaṅga inscriptions ascribes to him, nearly always in the same words, the acquisition of high renown by cutting through a great pillar of stone with one stroke of his sword.[9] Now, singularly enough, this [4] It appears that a big drum was fixed in a public part of the city, and any learned man who desired to enter into discussion beat the drum as a challenge to whoever would meet him.

[5] These additional lines run thus ; there are obviously errors, but it is difficult to say what the correct version should be.

[8] The Jains it appears recognise two classes of karma, namely, ghâti and aghâti. The ghâti karma are jñânâvaraṇi, dars'anâvaraṇi, môhâvaraṇi, and antarâvaraṇi : the aghâti karma are vêdanîya, âyushya, nâma, and gôtra. The removal of both confers mukti ; the removal of only the former kaivalya. Thus in Nâgachandra or Abhinava Pampa's Râmachandra Charita Purâṇa (the Pampa Râmâyaṇa) we have the following verse (II, 56) :—

ghâtiyuman aghâtiyumam |
ghâtisi Kîrttidhara-yôgi muktige saldam |
ghâti-kshayadim kaiva- |

feat, which in the present inscription is associated with Simha-nandi, is, in a Bâṇa inscription published by the Revd. T. Foulkes[10], described in connection with both the names in such a way as, taking the several statements together, seems to leave no doubt what the relation was between Simha-nandi and Konguṇi-varmmâ, which, owing to a slight probable error in Mr. Foulkes' inscription, was entirely obscured. The following is the statement referred to :—

'Its founder the great muni Kaṇva, distinguished for his great austerities, born in the illustrious line of Kaśyapa ; having obtained increase from the king Siṃha-nandi ; that Gaṅga dynasty, the chief of conquerors—may it prosper. A king was in the earth in the abode of fortune the great city of Kuvaḷâla ; of the line of Kaṇva ; the first of all the Gaṅga race ; Koṅgaṇi by name ; who was consecrated for the conquest of the Bâṇa territory. By whom, (while yet) a little boy playing at big boy's games, a great stone pillar was cut in two with a single stroke of the supple sword he held in his hand' ;......

Now it seems to me that, in the light of the statements in the S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa inscription we are now considering, we are justified in altering Siṃha-Nandi-mahipa in the above lines (no such king being known and nothing more being said about him) to Siṃha-Nandi-munipa.[1] If this be correct, then it follows that the rise of the Gaṅga dynasty was in some way due to a muni named Siṃha-Nandi, by whose aid his disciple (i.e. Koṅguṇi-varmma) succeeded in cutting through the great stone pillar which for some reason seems to have been an obstacle to the entry of the goddess of empire, in other words, to the foundation of the Gaṅga kingdom. It becomes therefore a question what this śilâ-stambha or stone pillar was. I have elsewhere[2] thrown out a conjecture that the term may be a very natural corruption of the peculiar name śila-stambha (virtue-pillar) which it appears was given by Aśôka to the pillars on which he inscribed his edicts. None it is true have been found so far south as Kolar, but no reason appears why one may not have existed there, as Aśôka had relations with the south even as far as Ceylon, whither his own son went as a missionary of the Buddhist faith. We also know that a missionary was at the same time sent to Banavâsi and to Mahisha-maṇḍala or Mysore. But, even granting this, it does not appear how such a pillar would prevent the establishment of a royal line, nor how the cutting of it in two would promote the establishment of the line. At all events a supersession by Jainism of some other faith seems implied.

What then is the date to be assigned to Siṃha-Nandi ? Evidently the same as that of Koṅguṇi-varmmâ, the first king of the Gaṅga dynasty. The only direct information on this point is contained in the Tamil chronicle, the Koṅgu-dêśa-râjâkkal,[3] which, according to Dowson, states that he was installed in S'aka 111, the year Pramôdûta, (A.D. 188), and reigned for 51 years.[4] The nearest dates by which this statement can be confirmed from inscriptions are that the sixth (or ? seventh) king of the line came to the throne in A.D. 425, which is supported by the fact that his mother was the sister of the Kadamba king Krishṇa-varmmâ who is assigned to about the same period, and by the fact that his son Durvvinîta who came to the throne in A.D. 478 had for his preceptor the celebrated Pûjyapâda, who is assigned to the 5th century.[5] Now if the sixth king began to reign in A.D. 425 and the first king founded the dynasty in A.D. 188 we have 237 years for five kings, or an average of 45 for each reign, which is high: if there were six kings the average would be only 39. But the first king is said to have reigned 51 years; and the fourth king, Vishṇu Gôpa, from the statement that 'his mental energy was unimpaired to the end of life,' must have lived to a great age and therefore probably had a reign as long; the sixth king Avinîta reigned 53 years. The average of 45 is therefore not beyond the bounds of probability nor such as to discredit the history so far as we know it. There is accordingly no reason why Simha-Nandi should not be placed at the end of the 2nd century A.D. As regards the Bâṇa (or Mahâvali) kings we have an inscription[6] dated S'aka 261 (A.D. 339) which is the 23rd year of the reign and gives at least three generations preceding: this again would bring us to the beginning of the 3rd century.

[10] Manual of the Salem District, II, 369.

[1] That this is a clerical and not a royal name may be seen from No. 10 and the analogy of numerous names compounded with Nandi, apparently indicating members of the Nandi gaṇa.

We now pass on to Vakra-grîva, who, apparently by the help of the śâsana dêvatâ, composed in six months a work called Nava-śabda-vâchya, which was such as to put to shame the professors of other faiths. Each tîrthankara has a śâsana dêvî[7] but it is not clear here who is meant, nor is anything known of the work that is mentioned. Next are introduced Vajra-nandi, who composed a work called Nava-stôtra, in which was embodied the whole of the Jaina doctrines, and then Pâtra-kêsarî, who by the aid of Padmâvatî,—the śâsana dêvî of Pârśvanâtha, the 23rd tîrthankara,—rendered useless the ? tri-lakshaṇa. Nothing is known of any of these allusions. So also with Sumati dêva, next mentioned, who wrote the Sumati-saptakam.

Then comes Kumâra-sêna who migrated, presumably from the north, and died in the south of India. He is followed by Chintâmaṇi muni, who apparently was the author of a work called Chintâmaṇi. There is a commentary of this name on S'akaṭâyana's grammar, but the work here referred to was evidently of a different character. In the notes to the Translations is embodied information about the celebrated Tamil work of this name.

Next follows a notice of S'rîvarddha Dêva, stated to be the author of a great poem called Chûḍâmaṇi. But, what is of the highest importance, he is also said to have been eulogised by Daṇḍin, a well known Sanskrit poet, in a distich which is quoted. Now Daṇḍin is placed by the best authorities in the 6th century A.D. It follows that S'rîvarddha lived either at or before that period, and that the various authors mentioned above must be understood to have preceded him. As regards the Chûḍâmaṇi, it is mentioned by Bhaṭṭâkalanka in his Karṇâṭaka-S'abdânuśâsanam[8] as if the greatest poem in the Kannaḍa language. He describes it as being a commentary on the Tatvârtha-mahâśâstra, and containing 96,000 verses, but does not name its author. The work is referred to in the Râjâvaḷi-kathe, and there attributed to the Tumbulûr âchârya, its extent being given as 84,000 granthas: the other 12,000, I am told, formed a summary or index. The following is the passage:—Tumbulûr-âchâryyar embhatta-nâlku-sâsira-grantha-kartrigaḷâgi Karṇâṭaka-bhâsheyim Chûḍâmaṇi-vyâkhyânamam mâḍidar. I have been unable to trace the position of Tumbulûr but have an impression of having met with such a name near the Tungabhadra in the north-west of Mysore.

We next have mention of Mahêśvara muni, 'who was victorious in seventy great discussions which had been otherwise settled': followed by Akalanka. He is celebrated for his victory at Kâñchi over the Buddhists, who were in consequence banished to the island of Ceylon. This is the incident here principally mentioned regarding him, with the addition of a quotation from himself, explaining his motives, in a speech addressed to a king named Sâhasatunga, whom I am sorry I have not been able satisfactorily to identify. Wilson's account of the transaction is quoted at foot of p. 136 of the Translations. The occurrence took place at the court of a king named Himaśitala and is assigned by Wilson to the 8th century, i. e. of the Christian era. But the Jains have for the date the memorial sentence sapta-śailâdri, which gives 777 S'aka = 855 A.D. Himaśitala was no doubt a king of the Pallava line, who were Buddhists and had Kâñchi for their capital.

Akalanka's victory is in our inscription associated with the vanguishing of Târâ, 'secretly born in the earthen pot' (ghaṭa kuṭi). This allusion is explained in the course of the following history of Akalanka as contained in the Râjâvaḷi-kathe, the Akalanka-charita, Akalanka-stôtra and other Jaina works. It appears that the Bauddhas had completely suppressed the Jaina religion in Kâñchi, when Jinadâsa, a Jaina Brahman (Arhad deva) there, had by his wife Jinamati two sons, Akalanka and Niḥkalanka. There being no one of their sect to educate them, these youths secretly placed themselves under a Bauddha guru named Bhagavad Dâsa, who had 500 disciples in his maṭha (Wilson says it was at Ponnatagi). According to one account, they made such unusually rapid progress that the guru's suspicions were aroused and he resolved to find out who they were. So one night, while they were asleep, he placed a tooth (? of Buddha) on their chests, when they instantly sprang up ejaculating Jina siddha, and thus betrayed that they were Jains. Another account says that, on one occasion when the guru had to leave them for a few minutes, they managed to insert into the manuscript book from which he was teaching them the words that samyag-darśana-jñâna was the môksha-mârga. The guru, on discovering this interpolation, became aware that they were Jains. Whichever story was the real one, their death was resolved upon, and they fled to escape. Niḥkalanka allowed himself to be caught and slain in order that his brother might have time to get beyond his pursuers. This he did, being aided by some washermen who hid him under a bundle of clothes, and having taken dikshe, became the head of the Dêśi-gaṇa and was in Sudhâpura, Sode in North Kanara.

At this time the professors of various sects having suffered defeat in discussion with the Bauddhas, those of the Vîra S'aiva sect came to Akalanka enthroned at Sudhâpura and told him the state of the case, on which he resolved himself to go and encounter the Bauddhas. Concealing his fan of peacock's feathers, by which they would have known he was a Jaina yati, he contrived to make them believe he was a S'aiva, and having in this form overcome them in argument, he allowed his fan to be seen, on which they were greatly incensed at finding he was a Jaina. With the view therefore of putting an end once for all to the Jains, the Buddhists in Kâñchi induced their king Himaśîtala to send for Akalanka to argue with them, the compact being that whichever was defeated all of his sect should be ground in oil-mills. The preparations for this great controversy on the part of the Buddhists were somewhat peculiar, but are similarly described in all the traditions on the subject. They placed an earthen pot of toddy (the intoxicating fermented juice of the palmyra palm) behind a screen or curtain and having summoned into it their goddess Târâ (this is what the inscription refers to), caused her to reply seriatim to all the arguments advanced by Akalanka. This went on according to some accounts for seven and according to others for seventeen days during which Akalanka gained no advantage. He now began to feel anxiety as to the result, when Kûshmâṇḍini appeared to him in a dream and told him that if he put his questions in a different order he would be victorious. This he accordingly next day tried, when the goddess in the pot was unable to answer and victory was declared for the Jains. Akalaṅka then tore away the curtain, kicked over the pot with his left foot and smashed it. So interwoven is this story with all the accounts that the final words in the inscription Sugataḥ pâdêna visphôṭitaḥ are generally quoted as sa ghaṭaḥ pâdêna visphôṭitaḥ. It is difficult to understand after all what exactly is supposed to have occurred, but the accounts are all very circumstantial and to the same effect.[9] The upshot of the whole matter was that the king was disgusted at finding out the tricks the Buddhists relied on, and also witnessing how an elephant which got loose trampled on the Buddhist books but raised the Jaina books with its trunk and placed them on its head, ordered all the Buddhists to be ground in the oil-mills. But at the intercession of Akalaṅka, instead of putting them to death, he consented to banish them to a distant country, and so they were all transported to Kandy in Ceylon.[10] [9] There seems to be a curious and suggestive jumble of names and an intentional design to represent the affair in a manner to bring contempt on the Bauddhas. According to Hindu mythology Târâ (a star), here called a S'akti, was the wife of Bṛihaspati (Jupiter), variously described as the father and the preceptor of the gods. She was carried off by Sôma, a name of the moon, and also of the intoxicating juice of the moon-plant (asclepias acida) which was an object of the earliest worship in both Persia and India, and which occupies so prominent a place in the Rig-vêda. A tremendous war ensued between the gods and the asuras in which earth was shaken to her centre. Brahma however interposed and restored Târâ to her husband. But she bore a son, of whom, on being adjured by Brahma to speak the truth, she declared Sôma to be the father, and the child was called Budha (Mercury - not to be confounded with Buddha). Târî again (whence our word toddy) is a form of tâḷi, the spirituous juice of the tâla or palm.

The tradition that the Buddhists carried on religious discussions by means of talking images, or other objects animated for the purpose, is supported by the story of the origin of the Pustaka-gachcha among the Jains. For it is said that a Bauddha priest argued by means of a copper mask, whence he was known as Tâmra Bhâratî, with a Jaina priest who refuted him by means of his book (pustaka) and became the founder of the gachcha so called.

Next is mentioned Pushpasêna, a colleague or fellow-student of Akaḷaṅka's. And then Vimalachandra, who was a source of grief to the professors of other faiths on account of a writing he had fixed up on the door of his house in a very public street, in which he exposed the S'aivas, Pâśupatas, the followers of Tathâgata (or Bauddhas), Kâpâlikas, and Kâpilas. After this comes Indranandi, and then Paravâdi-malla, a quotation from whom is given containing the derivation of his name 'refuter of opponent speakers' as explained to Kṛishṇa Râja, doubtless a Râshṭrakûṭa or Raṭṭa king. There was one of this name, also called Akâla-varsha, who was ruling in S'aka 797 and 833[1] (A.D. 875—911), and may probably be the one.

Next follows Âryya Dêva, who was so imbued with Jaina principles that when, while performing his vow, his ears were tickled with grass by mischievous people, or he was roused out of sound sleep, he showed no annoyance or forgetfulness of his duty, but, taking it to be some insect, gently fanned it away and turned over on the other side, leaving a space under for the fancied insect to escape. Then we have Chandrakîrtti, Karmma-prakṛiti and S'rîpâla: followed by Matisâgara.

Then comes Hêmasêna, who binds himself in the king's assembly, what king is not stated, to overthrow the arguments of any one who will venture to oppose him: next Dayâpâla, a disciple of Matîsâgara's and a fellow-student of Vâdi-râja. Some verses regarding the latter are quoted 'from the poets' without naming any. From these it appears that he was without a rival in religious discussion in the city (or camp) of the Châḷukya emperor (probably either Taila or Satyâśraya).

Next are mentioned S'rîvijaya, Kamalabhadra and Dayâpâla. And then follows S'ânti Dêva, who was guru to the Poysaḷa king Vinayâditya and therefore belongs to about A.D. 1040. He received the title of Svâmi from the learned king of the Pâṇḍya country (perhaps Kubja or Sundara Pâṇḍya, known in Tamil as Kûna Pâṇḍiyan, who at one time became a Jaina), and the title of S'abda-chaturmukha in the court of king Âhava-malla, probably the Châḷukya king Sômêśvara or Trailokyamalla, who reigned A.D. 1040 to 1069.

We then have Guṇasêna, who was an ornament to the country around Mullûru (not identified); and Ajitasêna, from whom a quotation is given exhorting to a religious life. His disciples were S'ântinâtha, called Kavitâ-kânta, and Padmanâbha, called Vâdi-kôlâhala. Then follows Kumâra-sêna, and lastly Mallishêṇa Maladhâri, a disciple of Ajitasêna. After several verses devoted to his praise, his death at Dhavaḷa-sarôvara (i. e. Beḷgoḷa) is described.

Here comes in No. 68, which is a pillar erected by Chaddikabbe to the memory of her husband, a merchant named Hoysaḷa Seṭṭi, who died in S'aka 1039, the year Saumya. There must be some mistake in the figures, as Saumya corresponds with S'aka 1051 (A.D. 1129). Hoysaḷa Seṭṭi seems to have been a distinguished man, as he had the titles tribhuvana-malla and chaladaṅka-râva. The latter title, with the name of Hoysaḷa Seṭṭi, he procured for the son of a merchant who was in charge of the customs at Ayyâvole, whence it appears likely that he adopted the boy. Ayyâvole, now called Aihole, on the river Malprabhâ in the Kalâdgi district, is a place very frequently mentioned in inscriptions from an early period. There is an important Châḷukya inscription in the Meguti temple there, dated as far back as S'aka 556.[2] At a later period it is a prominent place in Liṅgâyt works. The serene and devout manner of Hoysaḷa Seṭṭi's death is described in terms beautiful from their simplicity. His wife, who was of the Pura-vaṃśa, seems to have had a son named Bûchana, whose death is also mentioned. Perhaps he died in early life and hence the necessity for an adoption.

Next we have No. 143. It is not dated, but records a grant during the reign of Vîra-Gaṅga Poysaḷa, that is, Vishṇu-varddhana, and of the senior daṇḍanâyaka, probably Gaṅga Râja, by Chaladaṅka râva and other merchants for the service of Gommaṭêśvara.

The next inscription, No. 59, is a very interesting and important one. It is engraved on four sides of a square pillar and contains a record of the death at Sivaganga of S'antala Dêvi, queen of the Hoysala king Vishṇu-varddhana, in S'aka 1053, the year Virôdhikrit, (A.D. 1131), and of her mother Mâchikabbe's performing sallêkhana in consequence and dying at Belagula. It was the composition of Bôkimayya, a lay-disciple of Chârukîrtti-dêva.

The opening verses give an account of the Poysala or Hoysala kings. Vinayâditya is represented as taking great pleasure in erecting tanks, temples, and other Jaina buildings, and forming populous nâḍs and towns. He had temples built for Jina on such a scale that "the pits dug for bricks became tanks; great mountains quarried for stone became level with the ground; the paths by which the mortar carts passed became ravines." This description naturally carries our thoughts to the splendidly carved temples at Haḷêbîḍ, the ancient Hoysaḷa capital, namely the Kêdârêśvara[3] and Hoysaḷêśvara. But till Vishṇu-varddhana changed the religion of the State the Hoysaḷas were so completely Jains that no ground exists for attributing the commencement of those S'aiva temples to so early a reign as Vinayâditya's, except that the Hoysaḷêśvara is a memorial to his predecessor, who was the founder of the line. There are, however, besides, large Jaina bastis at Haḷêbîḍ, though not sculptured in the florid style of the others, and according to tradition a very large number of others existed which were dismantled to provide stone for embanking the large tank.

Next is mentioned Ereyanga, and then 'greater than him' his son Biṭṭi Dêva or Vishṇu-varddhana. The epithets applied to the latter are very numerous. One describes him as "seeing further than to-morrow." After styling him "the capturer of Talekâḍu" the inscription says 'he was the sole supporter of the rise of Paṭṭi Perumâḷa's own kingdom'—a reference which is not understood. He is also spoken of, among other ascriptions, as a forest-fire to Chakragoṭṭa and to the country of the Toṇḍamaṇḍala chief; the capturer of Noḷambavâḍi; piercer to the heart of Adiyama (see No. 90); destroyer of the plans of the Beṅgi Râya; uprooter of Narasiṅga-varmma (see No. 90); capturer of Hânuṅgal; upholder of Nilagiri; a Mâri to the Koṅgas; terrifier of Tereyûru; trampler on Koyatûru; displacer of Heñjaru; pursuer of Pâṇḍya; capturer of Uchchaṅgi; taker up of Pombuchcha; roller over of Sâvimale; layer waste of the Ghats; dragger along of the Tuḷuvas; a terror to Gôyindavâḍi; plunderer of Râyarâyapura.[4] Some of these statements occur in other inscriptions and some are new. The string of epithets winds up with saying that he reduced the whole of the Gaṅgavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand as far as Lokkiguṇḍi (Lakkuṇḍi in Dharwar) to subjection to his orders.

His queen S'Antala Dêvi is singularly introduced with the phrase 'the dweller (i. e. like a bee) at his lotus feet' which is always used of an inferior. But as she is at the same time styled 'the senior queen and crowned consort' this must be a piece of humility. Her praises are given at some length, including the epithet 'a rutting elephant to co-wives' which seems to have been one of special significance in her case, showing that she would tolerate no rival. Some details are also given of her family, from which it appears that her father was the senior perggaḍe Mârasiṅga, a S'aiva, while her mother was Mâchikabbe, a devoted Jaina. The conflict between her own position as a Jaina and as the queen of the now Vaishṇava monarch Vishṇu-varddhana is reconciled by the statement that [3] This is the temple which by some strange mistake came to be referred to as the Kaiṭêś'vara, a name which Fergusson truly says was inexplicable. I myself, not then knowing better, called it, in my work on Mysore, Kaiṭabhêś'vara, which at least has a meaning.

[4] Toṇḍamaṇḍala is the country below the Eastern Ghats, west of Madras, and belonged first to the Pallavas and then to the Chôḷas; Noḷambavâḍi is the Chitaldroog district and adjacent parts; Hânuṅgal is in Dharwar; Nîlagiri the mountains so called; the Koṅga country was in Salem and Coimbatore; Tereyûr near Trichinopoly; Koyatûr is Coimbatore; Uchchaṅgi in the south-west of Bellary district; it was the capital of Noḷambavâḍi; its capture is always attributed to Vîra Ballâḷa; Pombuchcha is Humcha in Shimoga District; Sâvimale appears to be in Dharwar, it is mentioned in an inscription at Belur as the northern limit of Vishṇu-varddhana's territory; Tuluva was in South Canara; Râyarâyapura, was Mâliṅgi, on the Kâvêrî, opposite to Talekâḍ.

Jinanâtha was her favourite and Vishṇu her god. Altogether there was a singular mixture of religious creeds in the case of herself, her husband, her father and her mother.

Her death occurred it is said in the holy place of S'ivagaṅga. The only place of any note bearing that name is the well-known conical hill some 30 miles north-east of Bangalore. It is exclusively occupied by S'aiva temples and religious buildings and from its form could never have been a Jaina sacred place, as a dome-shaped hill is a sine quâ non with that sect. No particulars are given as to the circumstances of the queen's death, nor how she came to be in such a place at such a time. The death may therefore have been sudden and unexpected while she was on a visit to her father.

His death is related immediately after, and he seems to have expired in the performance of a vow in consequence of his daughter's death.

The mother Mâchikabbe alone was left, and she at once resolved to live no longer, nor survive the loss of her daughter the queen. She accordingly returned to Beḷgoḷa and, taking the vow of a sannyâsi, fasted for one month and so went to the world of gods. Several verses are devoted to glorifying her act of self-sacrifice and the severity of her sufferings while thus doing penance.

Then follows the genealogy of Mâchikabbe and S'ântala Dêvi and an account of a donation the latter had made eight years before her death, in S'aka 1045, the year S'ôbhakṛit, (A.D. 1123), of a village and certain lands to the Savati-gandha-vâraṇa basti she had erected at Beḷguḷa, presenting them through her guru Prabhâchandra, the disciple of Mêghachandra.

Vishṇu-varddhana, so far as we know, must have survived his queen S'ântala Dêvi by ten or more years, and it is evident that no heir to the throne had been born to them This would account for the king's probably desiring to take another queen, and the consequent ferocity with which S'ântala Dêvi gave prominence to the title she had assumed of Savati-gandha-vâraṇa. Moreover, an inscription at Harihar states that the next king, Narasiṃha, was born to Vishṇu-varddhana and Lakuma Dêvi,[5] and this event would seem, from an inscription at Haḷêbîḍ, to have occurred in A.D. 1136,[6] or five years after the death of S'ântala Dêvi. The king must therefore have married again.

Here we may put No 144. It is not dated, but evidently belongs to about A.D. 1135. Its object was to state that Boppa Dêva daṇḍanâyaka, the son of Gaṅga Râja, erected a monument to his brother (properly cousin) Êchi Râja daṇḍanâyaka, and made certain grants for repairing the temple which the latter had built. The inscription is set up near the entrance of a ruined temple in Jinanâthapura (now being rebuilt), but the temple referred to would seem, from the description of it as being in Beḷgoḷa and so highly sculptured, to be the Châmuṇḍa Râya basti (see No. 66).

The inscription is remarkable as being the only one which begins with an acknowledgment of allegiance by the Hoysaḷas to the Châḷukyas. It professes to belong to the reign of Tribhuvana Malla of the latter dynasty, whose reign was from 1076 to 1127.

Here may be introduced No. 66. It records the erection by Êchana, son of Gaṅga Râja, of, presumably, the Châmuṇḍa Râja basti in which it is inscribed. The statement is repeated in the second verse, adding that Êchana had another name Boppa. But from No. 144 it appears that Êcha or Êchi Râja was Gaṅga Râja's elder brother's son, and thus first cousin to Boppa, though, as is often the case among Hindus, he calls him his older brother. That this was not the case literally is evident from the genealogy and also from Boppa being described as Gaṅga Râja's eldest son. Moreover, from an inscription at Haḷêbîḍ, it is ascertained that Boppa was the son of Gaṅga Râya and Nâgala Dêvi. Gaṅga Râja must therefore have married again after the death of his wife Lakshmî in 1122 as recorded in No. 48 We also learn that Gaṅga Râja died in S'aka 1055 (A.D. 1133) and that Boppa erected a temple to his memory in Dorasamudra, that is Haḷâbiḍ. We must therefore suppose from this No. 66 that Boppa, Gaṅga's son, rebuilt on a larger scale the Châmuṇḍa Râya basti which had been originally erected by the son of Châmuṇḍa Râya, as recorded in No. 67. Moreover, that in order to perpetuate the name of his and his cousin's common grandfather Êchi Râja, he represented himself as being also called Êchana, which was really the name of his first cousin, the offspring of the elder branch, who was then dead. The inscription is not dated, but from the above considerations must belong to about 1135. This basti is the handsomest on the hill, being fully completed with upper storey and tower, and with numerous statues and sculptured ornaments round the cornice of the outer wall. Externally it is of rectangular form, 85 feet long by 87 feet broad. The entire space between the outer wall and the garbha-griham at the back, or about 12½ feet, seems to be filled up solid with earth and stones as a foundation or basement for the upper storey and tower.

[5] Mysore Inscriptions, p. 82.

As this is one of the finest specimens of the Jaina temples at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa, and from the illustrations given in his work the one which chiefly influenced the opinion of Fergusson regarding them, the following extract from him may be quoted here. "On a shoulder of the hill called Chandra-giri stand the Bastis, fifteen in number. As might be expected from their situation, they are all of the Dravidian style of architecture, and are consequently built in gradually receding storeys, each of which is ornamented with small simulated cells. No instance occurs among them of the curvilinear sikra or spire which is universal with the northern Jains, except in the instance of Ellora ... Their external appearance is more ornamental than that of the generality of northern Jaina temples. The outer wall of those in the north is almost always quite plain. The southern ones are as generally ornamented with pilasters and crowned with a row of ornamental cells. Inside is a court, probably square, and surrounded by cloisters, at the back of which rises the Vimâna over the cell which contains the principal image of the Tîrthaṅkar, surmounted by a small dome.

"It may be a vain speculation but it seems impossible not to be struck with the resemblance to the temples of southern Babylonia. The same division into storeys, with their cells; the backward position of the temple itself; the panelled or pilastered basement, are all points of resemblance it seems difficult to regard as purely accidental. The distance of time would seem to bar such an idea, but the combinations of men with bulls and lions, and the many similarities between the Pantheons of Babylonia and India, render the fact of the architecture of the one country influencing that of the other far from being impossible, though by some it may be considered improbable. I have long tried to shake off the idea as an untenable hypothesis, but every time I return to the study of the subject, its likelihood recurs with increasing strength."[7]

The inscription No. 115 has been placed next, as, although it is not dated, it seems to belong to this period. It is engraved on the rock at the side of the stone steps leading to the enclosure erected around the great statue, and is a record of the construction of the temples of Bharata and Bâhubali or Gummata which are one on each side at the foot of the steps, and of the erection of the grand stairs, by the general Bharata, the younger brother of Mariyâne daṇḍanâyaka. From an inscription at Sindigere[8] we know that there was a very long-standing intimate relation between this family and the Hoysaḷas Vinayâditya's queen had in A.D. 1039 married a lady of rank, perhaps her sister, to Mariyâne, conferring on him the lordship of Sindigere. In a later generation, in 1103, the prince Ballâḷa, the elder brother of Vishṇu-varddhana, married in one day the three accomplished daughters of Mariyâne. And he and his brother Bharata held high office under Vishṇu-varddhana, being described in 1138 as judges, treasurers and chief advisers. Some of the names given to his erections at Beḷgoḷa mentioned in the present inscription are not understood, nor have I succeeded in getting any explanation of them. Besides these, he is credited with having erected eighty virgin (? new) bastis throughout Gangavâḍi and repaired two hundred that were in ruins.

The next inscription, No. 52, records the death, in S'aka 1061, the year Siddhârthi, (A.D. 1139), of Singimayya, the son of Bala Dêva and Bâchikabbe. From No. 53 we know that he was uncle to S'ântala Dêvi, Vishṇu-varddhana's queen. His daughter and his wife, lay-disciples of Prabhâchandra, erected a tomb in his memory.

Inscription No. 57 is similar in character and relates how, a month later in the same year, Bala Dêva, son of Nâga Dêva and grandson of Bala Dêva, expired in the manner of a saunyâsi at the Moringere tîrtha. His mother and his sister erected a paddi-śâle, the meaning of which is not clear, in his memory, and endowed it with a tank and lands, through his guru Prabhâchandra. This Bala Dêva must have been S'ântala Dêvi's cousin.

We next come to No. 40, which is engraved on four sides of a square pillar, and was composed by Gangaṇṇa. It records the death in S'aka 1068, the year Krôdhana, (A.D. 1146), of Prabhâchandra, who was guru to the queen S'ântala Dêvi and her mother. The first part of the inscription corresponds almost exactly with No. 47, described above, and contains the same succession of gurus down to Mêghachandra. His colleague was S'ubhakîrtti, the son of Bâlachandra. Mêghachandra's disciple was Prabhâchandra, whose colleague was Vîranandi, the son of Mêghachandra. It is not stated who erected this monument.

We now come to No. 138, which is an important inscription, dated in S'aka 1082 (1081 having expired), the year Pramâdi, (A.D. 1160). It contains an account of the erection at Beḷgoḷa of the Bhaṇḍâri basti (now generally called Bhaṇḍâra basti) by Huḷḷa, the treasurer (bhaṇḍâri) and chief minister (sarvvâdhikâri) of the Hoysaḷa king Narasiṃha.

The opening account of the Hoysaḷa kings gives us information regarding Ereyanga which I have nowhere else met with, as he is generally dismissed with little more than the mention of his name and some conventional praises. He is here stated to have burnt Dhârâ, the city of the ruler of Mâlava; to have struck fear into the camp or city of Chôḷa, who was eager for war; to have laid waste Chakragoṭṭa, a name which has already occurred in connection with Vishṇu-varddhana; and to have broken the king of Kaḷinga. These statements imply a range of victorious expeditions or raids which extended far beyond what are generally supposed to have been the limits of the Hoysaḷa power at that early period. (But see the remarks farther on in connection with No. 137.)

Of his son, here simply called Vishṇu, there is a long account describing his victories in various quarters. Several of these have already been met with in other inscriptions. He cut in pieces Koyatûr, burnt Konga Râyarâyapura, closed the door of the Ghats, terrified Kañchi, trod to dust the fortress of the king of Virâṭa, i. e. Hânugal, desolated Vanavâsi, shook Vallûr and, with the dust raised by his army, covered up the river Mahâpahâriṇi, i. e. the Malapahâri or Malprabhâ, a tributary of the Kṛishṇa, which flows through the Belgaum and Kalâdgi districts. He also cut down Narasiṃha-varmma, brought to an end the bravery of Adiyama, smote through Vengiri and plundered Talavana-pura, having defeated the enemy there. He claims to have destroyed an army sent against him under Jagad Dêva, king of Mâlava, and others, by the Emperor, no doubt Vikrama of the Châḷukya line, to whom the Hoysaḷas at first paid a real or nominal allegiance; and after this to have subdued all the territory from the east to the west as far as the Kṛishṇa-vêṇi, and reduced the Vindhya mountains to powder. He also subdued the king Irungôḷa (see No. 42) and the Kadamba kings.

His wife is called Lakshmî Dêvi and the mother of Narasiṃha; she is therefore identical with his second wife called Lakumâ Dêvi in the Harihar inscription previously referred to.

Narasiṃha, on coming to the throne, defies the Barbbara, Chôḷa, Chêra and Gauḍa rulers. His minister and treasurer Hullapa, the son of Jakki Râya and Lôkâmbike, of the Vâji-vaṃśa, lay-disciple of Maladhâri, erected this basti ?as an abode for the twenty-four tîrthaṅkaras, on the occasion of his returning from a victorious expedition. He had the title given him of Bhavya-chûḍâmaṇi, and calls by that name the basti he had erected, for which the king Narasiṃha granted certain endowments.

We then come to No. 137, which includes three different grants, belonging respectively to about A.D. 1160, to S'aka 1200, the year Bahudhânya, (A.D. 1278), and to the year Durmukhi, (A.D. 1296). The first contains an account of the erection by Huḷḷa, the minister of Nârasiṃha Dêva, of a Jina temple in Beḷguḷa, and the others record grants to the same.

The opening portion is occupied with an account of the Hoysaḷa kings, in which the statements specially deserving notice are the following. Eṛeyaṅga is described as a right hand to the Châḷukya king (Châḷukya-bhûpâlana baladu bhujâ-daṇḍam). The reference must be either to Sômêśvara, called Bhuvanaika-malla, or to Vikrama, called Tribhuvana-malla, and it thus seems that Eṛeyaṅga was a feudatory and probably a principal commander in the Châḷukya army. After mentioning his three sons, it says that the middle one, Vishṇu, 'stretching out at once in the earth so as to unite the eastern and western oceans, solely by the exercise of the power of his own arm became the chief.' The fame of Koyatûr (Coimbatore), Talavanapura (Talakâḍ) and Râyarâyapura (Mâliṅgi) as the strongest of royal forts faded away in the flames of his glory. He captured so many forts, subdued so many kings, and raised to high station so many who submitted to him, that to describe them by number would bewilder even Brahma. His queen is mentioned as Lakshmâ Dêvi, the mother of Nârasiṃha.

Among the titles and epithets applied to the latter are that he consumed the Tuluva forces; that he was a wild-fire to rival heirs, which seems to indicate the existence of other claimants to the throne, perhaps connections of S'ântala Dêvi, Vishṇu-varddhana's first queen; and that he plundered the Chôḷa camp or capital. The conquests and titles of his father are also ascribed to him.

His minister was Huḷḷa, also called Pullappa, and Hullaṇa, who is described as having served under his father Vishṇu. Here occurs the verse already quoted in a former part of this Introduction, (p. 34). 'If it be asked who from the first were firm promoters of the Jaina doctrine:—Râya, the minister of king Râcha Malla; after him, Gaṅga, the minister of king Vishṇu; and after him, Huḷḷa, the minister of king Nṛisiṃha Dêva.'

The various meritorious works performed by Huḷḷa, whose guru was Kukkuṭâsana Maladhâri, are then recounted. He rebuilt two great Jina temples at Baṅkâpura which were completely in ruins, one built by ?the Uppaṭṭayta and the other by Kaliviṭa[9]; made grants of land in the great tîrtha of Kopana[10]; restored the celebrated original tîrtha of Kellaṅgere, formerly erected by the Gaṅgas, of which only the name remained; and built there five large bastis and five tanks.[1] He also built a temple at Beḷguḷa for the twenty-four tîrthaṅkaras (which it is the special object of the inscription

[9] Baṅkâpur has two temples, a Jaina basti of Raṅgasvâmi Nagarêś'vara and a S'aiva temple of Siddhês'vara. The Jain shrine, which is usually called Arvattu-kambhada basti, or the Sixty column temple, is a fine large old building, partly ruined and a good deal buried, Gaz. of Dhârwâr, 653.

Kali-Vitta is the name of a feudatory of the Raṭṭa king Kṛishṇa mentioned in a grant dated S'aka 868 (A.D. 946) at Kyâsanûr in Dharwar. He was of the Chellaketana family and had the government of the Banavâsi province. Fleet, Kan. Dyn. 37.

[10] This place is mentioned by Nṛipatuṅga or Amôgha-varsha (reigned 814 to 869 A.D.) in his Kavirâjamârgâlaṅkâra as mahâ-Kopana-nagara and one of the four cities in which the very pith (tiruḷ) of Kannada was spoken. It seems likely that it was situated at a hill near Mulgunda in Dharwar.

[1] According to No. 40, Kellaṅgere belonged to the Rûpa Nârâyaṇa basadi at Kollâpura and was therefore probably in that neighbourhood.

to record), and another large temple which, like Gommaṭa, was an ornament to Gommaṭapura, perhaps the Bhaṇḍâri basti mentioned above in No. 138.

For this temple of the twenty-four tîrthaṅkaras, as well as for Gommaṭa and Pârśvanâtha, the king Narasiṃha assigned the village of Savaṇêru and appointed Nayakîrtti as the âchâri of the temple. The uses to which the endowment is to be applied are then stated.

Inscription No. 80 is engraved on the rock on the right hand of the great image of Gommaṭêśvara. It briefly repeats that Huḷḷamayya, the minister of the Hoysaḷa king Narasiṃha, made a donation of lands to provide for the worship of Gommaṭêśvara, Pârśvanâtha and the twenty-four tîrthaṅkaras set up by himself as above described (No. 138).

The next on the list is No. 39, which records the death in S'aka 1085, the year Svabhânu, (A.D. 1163), of Dêvakîrtti muni, and names his three disciples who set up his tomb. It occupies the east face of a square pillar, of which the three other sides are filled with No. 40.

The latter, No. 40, contains an account of the erection of a tomb by Huḷḷa Râja for Dêvakîrtti, and its consecration by his three disciples Lâkhanandi, Mâdhava and Tribhuvana-dêva. The first part of the inscription gives an account of a succession of celebrated gurus corresponding to some extent with that contained in No. 47. But some of the information is new and of great importance.

After praise of Mahâvîra and Gautama, the S'ruta-Kêvali Bhadrabâhu and his disciple Chandra Gupta,—it mentions Padmanandi, stating that his second name was Koṇḍakunda. Then follow Umâsvâti, also called Griddhra-piñchha, the most learned Jaina of his time, and his disciple Balâka-piñchha. In his line arose Samantabhadra.

After him is mentioned Dêvanandi, no other than the famous Pûjyapâda,[2] so called because his feet were worshipped by the deities, and on account of his learning also known as Jinêndra-buddhi. He is stated to be the author of the Jainêndra grammar, the Sarvârtha-siddhi, and the Samâdhi-śataka, besides many other works which proclaim aloud his fame.

The inscription then mentions Akaḷaṅka (for particulars regarding whom see above under No. 54) and passes on to Gollâchârya, described (as in No. 47) as the "ruler of the Golla country, who for some reason (kênu cha hêtunâ) formerly took dîksho". His disciple was Traikâlya yôgi, whose disciple was Aviddha-karṇṇa Padmanandi, also called Kaumâra dêva. The epithet aviddha-karṇṇâ, 'with unpierced ears,' is a singular one, as the boring of the ears is one of the imperative essential caste ceremonies among all Hindus, so much so that aviddha-karṇṇa, 'having unpierced ears,' is a term often applied by them to the Musalmans. The reason why this saiddhântika had not conformed to the universal custom does not appear.

His disciple was Kulabhûshaṇa, whose colleague or ?fellow student (sadharmma) was Prabhâ-chandra, described as a celebrated author on logic (prathita-tarka-granthakârah). Kulabhûshaṇa's disciple was Kulachandra, whose disciple was Mâghanandi, who had a tîrtha made in Kollâpura (in the South Mahratta country). He had a disciple whose name is not made out, of whom two chiefs, Nimba Dêva and Kâma Dêva, were lay-disciples.

Then is mentioned Gaṇḍavimukta, to whom Mâghanandi was the guru, who had been preceptor to the general Bharata (see No. 55), and whose disciples were Bhânukîrtti and Dêvakîrtti. His colleague was S'rutakîrtti, who was the author of a Râghava-Pâṇḍavîya, a work which read one way (gata) would give the story of Râma, and read ?backwards (pratyâgata) give the story of the

[2] The period of this distinguished Jaina teacher may be deduced from the statement in the Hebbûr plates, that he (there mentioned as the author of the S'abdâvatâra) was the preceptor of the Ganga king Durvinîta, who came to the throne in A.D. 478. (See Coorg Inscriptions, Introd. p. 3). This corresponds with Dr. Bühler's conjecture (Ind. Ant. XIV, 355) that Pûjyapâda belonged to the 5th century A.D. That his name was Dêvanandi is confirmed by the Karṇâṭaka-S'abdânus'âsanam in which, under sûtra 3, Bhaṭṭâkalaṅka says—"Jainêndrê 'pi ...... tach-chhabdam prâyunakta Bhagavân Dêvanandi !"

Pâṇḍavas.[3] And his elder brothers were Kanakanandi and Dêvachandra, whose colleagues were Mâghanandi, S'ubhachandra the disciple of Dêvakîrtti, and Gaṇḍavimukta Vâdi-chaturmukha Râmachandra. Also Akalaṅka, whose lay-disciples were the treasurer Mariyâne, the minister Bharatamayya, and the chiefs Bhûchimayya and Kôrayya.

Hulla Râja's family is then mentioned. His father was Yaksha Râja (Jakki Râja in No. 138, Jakki being a tadbhava of Yaksha), of the Vâji vaṃśa; h's mother Lôkâmbike. He was minister, sarvvâdhikâri and senior treasurer to the king Nârasiṅga, and is styled a new Gaṅga Râja, that is, as a minister and in promoting Jaina works of merit. He rebuilt the town of Kellaṅgere, which belonged to the basadi of his guru Rûpa-Nârâyaṇa of Kollâpura; erected a dâna-śâle of stone in Jinanâthapura; and set up this tomb for Dêvakîrtti.

The next inscription, No. 81, is dated in the year Khara, (A.D. 1171), in the reign of the Hoysaḷa king Nârasiṃha Dêva, and records a grant by a merchant named Gommaṭa Seṭṭi for the worship of Gommaṭêśvara and the 24 Tîrthaṅkaras.

The inscription No. 42 records the death in S'aka 1099, the year Durmukhi, (A.D. 1177), of Nayakîrtti and the erection of a tomb in his memory by Nâga Dêva his lay-disciple.

The first part is taken up with a succession of gurus from Mahâvîra, corresponding with that already given in No. 47 as far as Kaladhauta. His disciple was Sampûrṇṇa-chandra, proficient in solar and lunar astronomy (ravi-chandra-siddhânta-vidar). The list of gurus which follows may be seen in the abstract translation. At the end an account is introduced of Nayakîrtti, who was the disciple and son of Guṇachandra, and guru to Iruṅgôḷa. The name of this king occurs in the inscriptions relating to Vishṇu-varddhana as subdued by him. Nayakîrtti's disciples are next mentioned and his lay-disciples were the senior treasurer and chief minister Hulla and the head accountant Nâga Dêva. The latter was son of Bamma Dêva and Jôgâmbâ; his wife was Chaṇḍâmbikâ; and he had a son Mallinâtha, who was chief of Kâmalatâ-sutâ-pura, evidently a translation of some local name combined with Magaḷûr.

Next has been placed No. 113. It is engraved on the rock at the side of the main entrance to the grand stairs erected by Bharata (see No. 115) in such a way that it could hardly have been there before they were made. The only date given is the year Hêbaṇandi, that is Hêviḷambi, which would correspond with A.D. 1177. The object of the inscription is to record the visit of a great company of gurus, with nuns and many bands of disciples to the festival of Gommaṭa Dêva. Nothing is stated as to where they came from, but the names of the chief persons are mentioned. Two or three of the same are mentioned in No. 122. The greater part of the inscription is taken up with a description of their orthodox good qualities as Jaina yatis, several of the epithets being cumulative in the order of the numbers from one up to thirteen.

Inscription No. 85, though not dated, evidently belongs to this period. It was the work of a poet styled Sujanôttaṃsaṃ, whose real name was Boppa, and who, as he states, had the title Kannaḍa-gavi-bappa, 'a polish to the Kannaḍa poets', evidently a play on his name. We know however that he was a poet of distinction, for he is mentioned by Kêśi Râja, at the beginning of the S'abdamaṇidarpaṇa, along with Ponna, Pampa and other celebrated Kannaḍa poets.

The inscription is entirely in Kannaḍa verse, and from it is obtained an unimpeachable account of who Gommaṭa was, and of how and by whom his colossal image was erected at Beḷgoḷa. As most of this information has already been quoted and made use of in a previous part of this Introduction it is unnecessary here to go over the same ground again. But in addition to that a good many of the verses are devoted to describing the beauty and loftiness of the image, and the effect it produced on the beholders around, followed by exhortations to acceptance of the Jaina faith as exemplified by Gommața Dêva.

[3] There is a work of this name in Sanskrit by Kavi Râja: also one in Telugu by Tenâḷi Râma Krishṇa, buffoon at the court of Krishṇa Râya of Vijayanagar. In these all the verses can be interpreted in two ways, so that one meaning yields the Râmâyaṇa story and the other the Mahâ Bhârata story. S'rutakîrtti's work is mentioned in the Pampa Râmâyaṇa in the same terms as above.

No. 104, which is put next, is inscribed on the pedestal of the female figure, holding a gulla-kâyi, which stands before the entrance to the inner enclosure round the colossal image. The figure is known as Kûshmâṇḍinî, and is said to represent the faithful woman in whose guise the goddess Padmâvatî appeared at the consecration of the great statue and the acceptance of whose simple offering rebuked the pride with which Châmuṇḍa Râya was elated at the accomplishment of his vast undertaking, a feeling which had prevented his anointing from being effectual. (See the story already given p. 26). The figure is described in the inscription as merely a Yakshi dêvati, a class of beings who seem to be celestial attendants on deified Jaina saints. Their images are placed at or near the door, as in the present case and in that of the Chandra Gupta basti. This figure now under notice was made by order of a merchant, Bamma Seṭṭi, a lay-disciple of Bâlachandra, and is 4 ft. 9½ in. high without the pedestal. Probably it was intended to represent a woman exactly life size. The illustration will show its merits as a work of art.

No. 110 has been placed here as it refers to a somewhat similar erection, that of a Yaksha for the Tyâgada Brahma Dêva pillar. There is no clue as to its date. The pillar itself, which is supported from above in such a way that a handkerchief can be passed under it, is a beautiful work of art, and has been illustrated in connection with No. 109, which occupies the north side of the base. The present inscription is on the south base and occupies only two lines and a half. But the chief named Kanna, whoever he was, that had it engraved, is entitled to execration, for it is evident that in order to inscribe his brief notice he had the inscription which filled three sides of the base defaced, thus, to judge from what remains in No. 109, depriving the world of what was probably most interesting information regarding the erection of the colossal image. The Yaksha set up by him, too, seems to have been a paltry figure, of no account, erected on the top of the highly ornamental and classically sculptured pillar. The figure was enclosed in a little plain building with four brick walls, now in ruins. The Tyâgada kambha (in Kannaḍa chhâgada kambha) was, as its name indicates, the place where distribution was made of the sacred gifts. A Yaksha is a demi-god attendant on Kubêra, the god of wealth.

The next inscription is No. 122, belonging to about A.D. 1178. It states that Nâga Dêva, son of Bamma Dêva, constructed a tank called Nâgasamudra, and presented it with a garden and other gifts, in the presence of several gurus named, among others Bâlachandra, for the worship of Gommața Dêva.

We now come to No. 90, which is not dated, but is of about the same period. Its object is to record the confirmation by Vira Ballâḷa, at the instance of the (? former) minister Huḷḷa, of certain grants made by Vishṇu-varddhana and Nârasimha for Gommața Dêva, Pârśva Dêva and the twenty-four tîrthankaras. It also incidentally mentions that Nayakîrtti, the guru of Huḷḷa, had died, and that his disciple Bâlachandra had erected a tomb and constructed some tanks in his memory.

But though this is the object of the inscription it is principally taken up with a very important account of the exploits of Gaṅga Râja, the minister of Vishṇu-varddhana, who was apparently the first to obtain a royal endowment for Gommața-nâtha.

After an account of Gaṅga Râja's father and mother, and his ability as a minister, it goes on to say that Gaṅga Râja appeared before Talakâḍ, the frontier station of Gaṅgavâḍi above the Ghats, and summoned Adiyama, the feudatory whom Chôḷa had placed in camp there, to surrender. The latter refused to give up the country of which Chôḷa had placed him in charge, and said 'Fight and take it (if you can).' The two forces met in battle and Gaṅga Râja gained a great victory, defeating Adiyama and putting to flight the Tiguḷa or Tamil chief named Dâman, who barely escaped with his life as Gaṅga Râja was just about to cut him through the belt on his back, showing that he had already turned to flee, as if, says the inscription, he meant to reach (that is, with his face towards or in the direction of) Kañchi, (the Chôḷa capital). Gaṅga Râja followed up this success with such vigour that he recovered not only Talakâḍ, the former capital of his line, but drove off Narasiṅga-varmma (often mentioned in Vishṇu-varddhana's inscriptions, possibly a Pallava king) and all the feudatories of Chôḷa above the Ghats. In connection with Talakâḍ it is further said that he discovered the chief named Dâmôdara hiding there in the disguise of a S'aiva ascetic, carrying in a basket some food that a dog would not eat. Him he approached alone and on foot and sent him flying.

This important conquest of Talakâḍ and the adjacent country, which had fallen into the hands of the Chôḷas and been formed into petty states, Gaṅga Râja at once loyally made over to his sovereign Vishṇu-varddhana. And this is the event I conceive which is referred to among the epithets applied elsewhere to Gaṅga Râja, where he is described as 'causing Vishṇu-varddhana to stand erect,' and as being 'the full vessel for his coronation-anointing.' In fact it would seem that he was the main instrument in making Vishṇu-varddhana independent, by freeing him from Chôḷa domination on the south, so that he was able to throw off his subordination to the Châḷukyas in the north. This victory of Gaṅga Râja's is related in almost the same words in an inscription at Tippur.

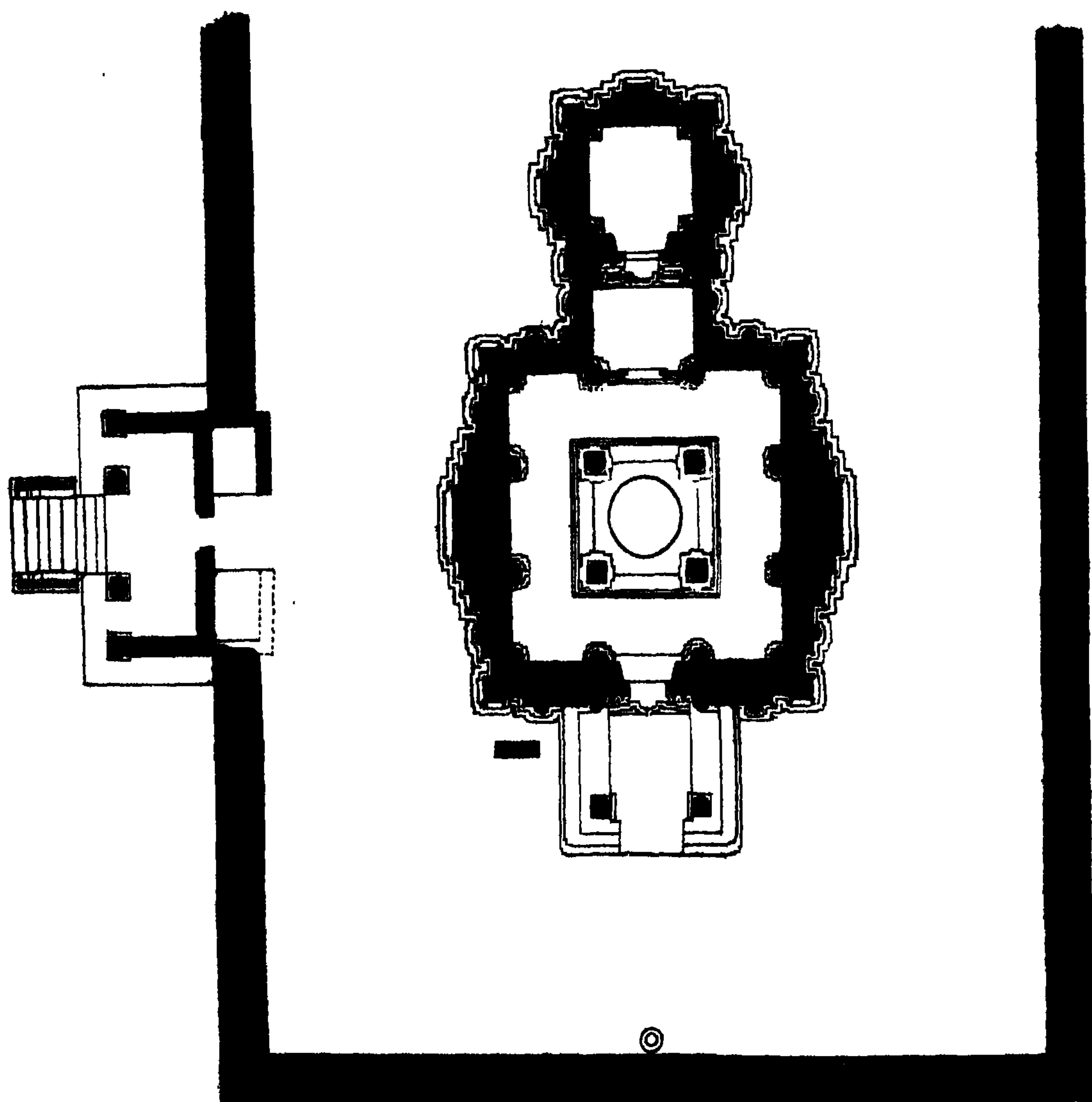

The king, highly gratified at the valour and success of his general, bid him name some reward, on which, Gaṅga Râja, not taking too much advantage as he might have done, begged for Gôvindavâḍi,[4] and that only for the purpose of presenting it for the worship of Gommaṭa Dêva After mention of his guru S'ubhachandra, the disciple of Kukkuṭâsana Maladhâri, a verse is introduced in praise of Gaṅga which has already been met with in No. 45 above—how he restored all the bastis of Gaṅgavâḍi however many there were ; had the cloisters made around Gommaṭa Dêva, described as of Gaṅgavâḍi ; and putting to flight the Tiguḷas who were in Gaṅgavâḍi, caused Vîra Gaṅga, that is, Vishṇu-varddhana to stand erect ; thus proving himself a Gaṅga Râja a hundred times more fortunate than the former Râja of the Gaṅgas, or Gaṅga Râja, (under whom the Gaṅga line was overthrown by the Chôḷas).

Then follows a brief notice of Nayakîrtti, the son of Guṇachandra, and the grant to him by Narasiṃha of certain villages for Gommaṭa-nâtha, Pârśva-nâtha and the twenty-four tîrthankaras.

Narasiṃha's son Vîra Ballâḷa is next mentioned and his great exploit, the capture of the impregnable hill-fortress of Uchchaṅgi, as already related in No. 124 above. The old minister Huḷḷa, lay-disciple of Nayakîrtti, applied to Vîra Ballâḷa to confirm the gifts formerly made, which he did. Huḷḷa thus lived during three reigns, and this is his last appearance in these inscriptions. Bâlachandra, the disciple of Nayakîrtti, apparently succeeded the latter as trustee for the endowments, and erected a tomb and some tanks in memory of his guru, and set up a great śâsana, perhaps the present one.

Nos. 91 and 92 are on the same stone as the above, and probably belong to about the same period. In the former, the ? jeweller citizens of Beḷuguḷa assign certain dues payable on coral and sapphires to provide the offering of flowers for the gods Gommaṭa and Pârśva. In the latter, certain merchants purchase and grant lands for the same purpose, making them over to the mâmalagâra, probably a manager of the temple affairs, such as is now called an amildar.

[4] There is a village of this name near the Jaina establishment at Maleyur in Chamrajnagar taluq.

AKKANA BASTI

Scale 10 5 foot

We next came to No. 124, which is dated in S'aka 1104, the year Plava, (A.D. 1182). It brings us into the reign of Vîra Ballâḷa and introduces us to his minister Chandramauḷi. The object of the inscription is to record the erection at Beḷguḷa of the Pârśvanâtha basti (now called Akkana basti) by Âchala Dêvi, (or Âchiyakka, see below) the wife of Chandramauḷi.

The first part contains an account of the Hoysaḷa kings almost the same as that in No. 137 above, but carried on to Vîra Ballâḷa. On his ascending the throne, Lâḷa, Gurjjara, Gauḷa, Pallava, and Chôḷa were all terrified. The principal exploit related of this king is his capture of Uchchaṅgi, 'for a long time considered impregnable by kings', (but this was a stock expression, see No. 38, east face, where it was used of the same place 200 years before in the time of Guttiya Gaṅga). Its king, called Pâṇḍya and Kâma Dêva, was taken prisoner, together with another king called Oḍeyarasa (or ?Sanda Oḍeyar). apparently his father, with all their women, treasury and horses, and the place given up to plunder.

The titles and epithets applied to Vîra Ballâḷa are the same as those given to Nârasiṃha in No. 137, with the addition of S'anivâra-siddi, Giridurga-malla, which occur in most of his inscriptions.

Chandramauḷi—described as a learned Brahman, worshipper of Hara (S'iva), whose father was S'ambhu Dêva, and his mother Akkavve—became minister to Vîra Ballâḷa.

His wife was Âchiyakka, descended from a Jaina family of Mâsavâḍi nâḍ, her genealogy being given in detail: and they had a son Sôma. Her guru was Nayakîrtti's disciple Bâlachandra, whose father and disciples are mentioned. She had a temple erected for Pârśva Dêva in Beḷuguḷa (the Akkana basti)

Chandramauḷi applied to the king for an endowment of the temple, and Vîra Ballâḷa presented to it the village of Bammeyanahaḷḷi; while the local chiefs and merchants assigned certain dues for the support of the worship.

The inscription which follows, No. 107, consists of only a couple of lines, stating that on the beautiful Âchala Dêvi, wife of Chandramauḷi, begging for a grant for Gommaṭa-nâtha of Beḷguḷa, the generous Vîra Ballâḷa gave her the village of Bekka. It is curiously enough engraved after and on the same stone as two more recent inscriptions, Nos. 105, dated A.D. 1398, and 106, dated 1409. This is inexplicable, unless it has been copied from some stone no longer in existence.

Nos. 70 and 69 are two fragments of stones containing in the bits of inscriptions now remaining on them praises of Adhyâtmi-Bâlachandra, the disciple of Nayakîrtti. They therefore belong to about this period.

The next inscription is No. 130, dated in S'aka 1118, the year Râkshasa, (A.D. 1196). It records the erection, by Nâga Dêva, of some additions to the Pârśvanâtha basti, (no doubt the Akkana basti), of a tomb and other memorials of Nayakîrtti, and of the Nagara Jinâlaya.

It commences with a brief account of the Hoysaḷa kings, down to Vîra Ballâḷa, of whom are repeated the verses given in No. 124 as to the terror he created in neighbouring kingdoms, and his capture of Uchchaṅgi.

An account is then given of Nayakîrtti and his disciples, and of the genealogy of Nâga Dêva.

Inscription No. 78 has been placed next. It is engraved on the rock at the left hand of the great image, and though not dated apparently belongs to about A.D. 1196. For it states that Basavi Seṭṭi, who had the wall round the cloisters and the twenty-four tîrthaṅkaras made, was a disciple of Naya-kîrtti, who from No. 42 we know died in 1177, and now Basavi Seṭṭi's sons had latticed windows made for these images. In the succeeding inscriptions, 86 and 87, we find various donations made to these very images. From No. 86 we learn that Basavi Seṭṭi was a vaḍḍa byavahâri of Mosale. The title vaḍḍa byavahâri is one often applied to a chief merchant in the oldest inscriptions, but its meaning is not very clear, unless it is something equivalent to army contractor.

Next have been put four rock inscriptions recording the visits of distinguished persons, Nos. 120, 22, 73 and 74. There is no clue to their dates except the style of the letters and the years Îśvara and Parâbhava given for the last two, which would correspond with A.D. 1217 and 1246. In 120 Vîra Pallava Râya's son,...... Siṅghara Nâyaka is mentioned; in 22 Kottayya, lay-disciple of Abhayanandi; in 73 Malayâla Saṅkara; and in 74 Mariyâṇa Permmaḍi Nâyaka.

Next come Nos. 88 and 89, recording grants by merchants for the worship of Gommaṭa, in the years Naḷa and Kâḷayukti respectively. As these grants were made over to Chandraprabha, disciple of Nayakîrtti, to whom also the grants in No. 96 were made over, and as the latter is dated S'aka 1195, the dates of 88 and 89 are fixed as S'aka 1178 and 1180, or A.D. 1256 for the one and 1258 for the other.

Our next inscription is No 128, belonging to the year Akshaya, which corresponds with A.D. 1266. It brings us to the reign of the Hoysaḷa king Sômêśvara, called here the son (kumâra) of Vîra Ballâḷa, but according to all the received accounts his grandson. The Jaina influence was evidently now becoming weakened, and the merchants and citizens who had formerly bound themselves to make over certain dues for the support of religion were trying to evade payment. The authority of Râma Dêva Nâyaka (evidently not a Jaina), senior treasurer to the king Sômêśvara, was invoked to settle the matters in dispute, and in his presence Nayakîrtti, a disciple of Nêmichandra, who was the disciple of the former Nayakîrtti, wrote this śâsana for the citizens, regulating the payments to be made for the future. Certain of the details are not very clear, but some compromise seems to have been the object of the agreement.

Inscription No 96, which comes next, is dated in S'aka 1191 (a mistake for 1195), the year S'rîmukha, (A.D. 1273), and records a grant in the reign of Narasiṃha III by Sabhû Dêva and other merchants, made to Chandraprabha, disciple of (? the second) Nayakîrtti, for the worship of Gommaṭanâtha and the twenty-four tîrthaṅkaras of the cloisters (see No. 78.)

Nos. 93 to 95 and 97 are grants by merchants for the worship of Gommaṭa, engraved on the same stone as the above. All but 95, which mentions no date, are of the year Bhâva and they may therefore be assigned to A.D. 1274.

Here comes in the second part of No. 137, dated in S'aka 1200, the year Bahudhânya, (A.D. 1278), in which certain grants are made, among others by a son of Chandraprabha, for the worship of S'rîvallabha-dêva, the god of the Bhaṇḍâri basti.

Next comes No. 131, which contains two grants made at different times, one in S'aka 1213, the year Pramâdhi, (A.D. 1280), and the other in the year Sarvadhâri, (A.D. 1288). Both are grants for Âdi-dêva the god of the Nagara-Jinâlaya. The first is by the citizens of Beḷguḷa and the second by those of Jinanâthapura, the latter also making provision for repairs of the temple.

No. 129 which follows is dated in S'aka 1205, the year Chitrabhânu, (A.D. 1283). It is also a grant for the god of the Nagara-Jinâlaya by citizens who were lay-disciples of Mâghanandi-siddhânta-chakravarti, described as the royal guru of the Hoysaḷa king, who at this time must have been Narasiṃha III.

The last part of No. 137 is here to be mentioned, dated in the year Durmukhi, (? A.D. 1296), in which the royal gurus and chief citizens unite to put a stop to some embezzlement which had apparently been going on of the funds arising from the endowments of S'ri-vallabha-dêva and other gods.

Inscription No. 41 comes next, dated in S'aka 1235, the year Pramâdi, a mistake for Pramâdicha, (A.D. 1313). It is a memorial of the death of S'ubhachandra, a disciple in the fourth descent from Maladhâri Râmachandra. He was originally a chief called Bôgâra Râja, or else head of the Bôgâras or braziers.[5] The chief of Beḷukere, called Gummaṭa Râya, had a tomb erected for him, and his disciples Padmanandi and Mâdhavachandra consecrated it.

With inscription No. 82, which is the next, we are brought in contact with the rising power of Vijayanagar, which had now taken the place of the Hoysaḷas. It is dated in the year S'ubhakṛit, (A.D. 1362), in the reign of Bukka Râya. Irugapa, the grandson of his minister Chaicha, seems to have made a fresh grant of Beḷguḷa for the worship of Gummaṭês'vara. The inscription is entirely in Sanskrit and enters upon a new and more modern phase of composition.

We now come to No. 136, an inscription (known as Râmânujâchâri's inscription) which was originally published in 1809 by Colonel Mackenzie[6] and which, owing to misinterpretation, was supposed to establish the identity of the creeds of Jina and Vishṇu. It is dated in S'aka 1290, the year Kîlaka, (A.D. 1368), and is the record of a compact which was personally made by Vîra Bukka Râya of Vijayanagar between the Vaishṇavas and the Jainas in order to put down the persecution to which the latter were being subjected by the former. It is in the Kannaḍa language, in prose, and contains a variety of interesting details, as will be seen on reference to the notes. The settlement made by Bukka Râya, who had summoned all the chief representatives of the various Vaishṇava sects for the occasion, was—that the Jainas were to be at liberty to carry their customary symbols and play the five big drums in their religious processions in the same way as the Vaishṇavas, that in this respect no difference could be allowed. and that the one would be protected equally with the other.

This agreement was made in writing, and ratified by his taking the hand of the Jainas and placing it in the hand of the Vaishṇavas, the decree being ordered to be engraved on stone and set up at all the bastis in the kingdom. Moreover the Jainas agreed to contribute a certain sum for each house, which the Vaishṇava tâtas of Tirumale (the sacred hill of Tripati) were to apply in providing a body-guard of twenty men for the protection of the god of Beḷuguḷa (the colossal image of Gommaṭês'vara) and in repairing the ruined Jaina buildings.

The Jainas are throughout called the bhavya-jana or blessed people, while the S'ri-Vaishṇavas are called the bhaktas or the faithful.

How long the latter part of the agreement continued in force, or whether it was ever acted upon at all, there is nothing to show. It seems however that the Jains were not again molested at Beḷgoḷa. But in proof that hostile feelings between these sects regarding the right of procession were not confined to the south of India, the following passages may be quoted from a speech recently made at the Royal Asiatic Society's meeting by Colonel Sir William Davies. "Not long after the transfer of the Dehli territory to the Panjab, which took place in the year following the mutinies, the leading men of the Vaishṇavas, a sect far more numerous and powerful than the Jains, or, as they are there called, Sâraogis, succeeded in convincing the then Commissioner, Colonel Hamilton, that it would be dangerous to the public peace to allow the Sâraogis to have their procession, and he refused to allow it to take place, and on appeal his action was supported by the Local Government. This was, I think, in 1863. The Sâraogis naturally felt themselves greatly aggrieved at this decision, and left no stone unturned to have the order set aside. They memorialized the Government of India and the Secretary of State, but all in vain. This state of things continued till I went to Dehli as Commissioner in 1876. They of course appealed to me as they had done to all my predecessors, to obtain a reconsideration of the order prohibiting the procession. On thinking over the matter it seemed to me only fair that if the Vaishṇavas were allowed to celebrate their Râm Lilâ, the Sâraogis should be permitted to have their Rath-jâtra...... It seemed to me that it was the duty of a strong and civilized government like ours to insist upon toleration being displayed by the Vaishṇavas towards the Sâraogis. I accordingly addressed the Local Government. My appeal was strongly supported by the then Secretary to the Government, Mr. (now Sir Lepel) Griffin, and he succeeded in obtaining the consent of the Lieut. Governor, Sir Robert Egerton, to the rescission of the order prohibiting the procession. Soon after, on the 20th July 1877, the procession, after an interval of fourteen years, took place, and as very complete precautions had been taken against the occurrence of disturbance on the part of the Vaishṇavas, everything passed off quietly, and since then the Sâraogis have had their Rath-jâtra regularly every year.

"The relations between the members of these two sects had never been very cordial, but the stoppage of the Sâraogi procession for so long a period naturally intensified the ill-feeling, and all social intercourse between them had gradually ceased. When, however this bone of contention was removed, their differences were gradually reconciled, and I succeeded in inducing the Sâraogis once more to forego their objections to giving their daughters in marriage to the sons of Vaishṇavas, and on ceremonial occasions even to partake of food prepared by the latter sect. By degrees the old social intercourse between them was completely resumed, and very few of the traces of the former bitter feeling I hear now remain."[7]

No. 111, dated S'aka 1295, the year Paridhâvi, (A.D. 1373) comes next. It is engraved in large characters on a big boulder at the foot of the stairway leading to the great image, and is surmounted by figures of rows upon rows of siddis. The inscription states that it was executed by Vârdhamâna svâmi whose descent is given in a long line of gurus, but some parts have become illegible.

No. 112 is engraved immediately below the above and probably belongs to about the same period. It is to the memory of Hêmachandra-kirtti-dêva.

On a separate stone, erected against the above, is No. 114, dated in Naḷa, no doubt corresponding with A.D. 1376 It records the death of Padmanandi-dêva, disciple of Traividya-dêva.

Inscription No. 132 has been placed next and, taken in connection with 133 and 105, assigned to about A.D. 1390. It records the erection of what is now called the Mangâyi basti, but in the inscription receives the name of Tribhuvana-chûḍâmaṇi chaityâlaya. Mangâyi was a woman of Beḷuguḷa, a lay-disciple of Abhinava Chârukirtti paṇḍita, a title borne by the Jain gurus at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa from the time of the Hoysaḷa kings. She is stated to have been adorned with the ornaments of agreeableness and to have been high in the royal favour. No other particulars are given.

No. 133 relates how certain gauḍas, lay-disciples of Paṇḍita dêva, made some grants for the basti erected by Mangâyi.

7 R. A. S. J. XX, 297.

The next inscription, No. 105, is an important one, composed by Arhad-dâsa. It is dated in S'aka 1320, the year Îsvara, (A.D. 1398) and its object is to record the death of Paṇḍita, or it may be conjectured Chârukirtti Paṇḍita, the name borne by all the gurus at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa for a long time past. But it contains a lengthy account of a succession of gurus in the style of the old inscriptions Nos. 40, 50 and others.

After invocation of the Tirthankaras, the Gaṇadharas, the Kêvalis, the S'ruta-kêvalis, the Daśapûrvadharas, the Êkadaśâṅgadharas, Âchârâṅgas and Sûris, all except the last enumerated and named, the inscription introduces Kuṇḍakunda (called in No. 40 'the first famous muniśvara'), and states that he 'moved about leaving a space of four inches between himself and the earth under his feet.' This amounts to saying that he was perfect in yôga. The highest aim of yôga is union with the one eternal Spirit, but it is also supposed to confer supernatural powers by which the body can at will be liberated from all the restraints of nature. A similar statement is made of Pûjyapâda in the Châmuṇḍa Râya Purâṇa, which says that he was able to fly through the air (gagana-gamana-sâmartthar). The Yôga philosophy is very ancient and ascribed to Patañjali, according to Lassen about 200 B.C., but it has been followed in India in all ages and has abundant devotees down to the present day

Next is mentioned Umâsvâti, who published (prakaṭichakâra) the Tatvârttha-sûtra; followed by Gṛiddhra-piñchha and Balâka-piñchha. Then come Samantabhadra and his disciple S'ivakôṭi Sûri, who illustrated (alañchakâra) the Tatvârttha-sûtra. Regarding these two the following particulars are given in the Râjâvaḷi-kathe.—Samantabhadra, it is said, was born in Utkalikâ grâma and was engaged in penance in Manuvakahaḷḷi when he was attacked by a disease called bhasmaka (see No. 54), which is characterized by a morbid voracious appetite and constant craving for food together with general decay. Unable to get it cured, he resolved to end his life and applied to his guru to let him perform the vow of sallêkhana, quoting the verses given above, p. 15. But his guru, foreseeing that he was destined to be a great promoter of the faith, refused permission, and directed him instead to go to any place where he could eat till his appetite was appeased and then to take dikshe again. He accordingly made his way to Kâñchi and presented himself before S'ivakôṭi mahârâja, who had set up a crore of liṅgas and who made a daily distribution of 12 khaṇḍugas of rice at the temple of Bhîma-liṅga. The king, being struck with his appearance, did obeisance to him as if S'iva, and on his asking the king what works of merit he was engaged in, the latter told him of all the temples he had erected and of the distribution of food he daily made. On which Samantabhadra said, "Your works of merit and that food I will make to be an acceptable offering (otherwise an offering to S'iva)."

Accordingly he took up his place in the temple with the 12 khaṇḍugas of cooked rice and other necessary articles, and closing the door, ordered all to retire. Immediately he was alone he fell to and ate up the whole of the rice so that not a grain was left. Great was the surprise of the king when the door was opened to find it all gone. The next day Samantabhadra left a half and the following day a quarter of the food, explaining that the god had granted it for prasâda. The king's suspicions being aroused, on the fifth day he surrounded the temple with his forces and gave orders to burst open the door. Samantabhadra, aware of the danger that threatened him, began to call earnestly upon Sarvajña and all the Tirthankaras. When he came to the praise of the eighth tirthankara, behold! Chandraprabhâ himself appeared in his full glory, of the stature of three men, in the place of the Bhîma-liṅga, surrounded with all his attendants. Samantabhadra at once threw open the door. The king, lost in astonishment, fell at his feet and begged for instruction in the Jaina faith. Eventually, making over the kingdom to his son S'rikaṇṭha, the king S'ivakôṭi took Jina dikshe, and as S'ivakôty-âchârya wrote the Ratnamâlâ and other works which converted many to the Jaina faith.

Samantabhadra, having again taken dikshe, composed the Ratna-karandaka and other Jinâgama-purâṇas and became a professor of the syâd-vâda.[8] Then follow the verses, already quoted in connection with No. 54, relating to his wanderings over India for purposes of discussion. It will be seen in the remarks on that inscription that Chandraprabhâ appeared to him on another occasion in Kauśambi to remove his doubts. Further reference may be made to what has there been said about this distinguished Jaina, who in No. 108 is called the author of the Jina s'âsana.

The inscription then mentions Dêvanandi, called Pûjyapâda on account of the forest deities worshipping his two feet; Akalaṅka or Bhaṭṭâkalaṅka (see remarks in connection with No. 54); Jinasêna, Guṇabhadra, and another, whose name is defaced but whose disciples were Pushpadanta and Bhûtabali.

Then an important statement is made that Arhadbali formed four saṅghas,—the Sêna, Nandi, Dêva, and Simha saṅghas—with the view of promoting harmony in the Koṇḍakundânvaya and to separate them entirely from the Sitâmbaras or Svêtâmbaras. A somewhat more general account is given of these events in No. 108.

The inscription goes on to name several distinguished gurus of the Iṅgulêśvara line belonging to the Nandi saṅgha, the Dêsi-gaṇa and the Pustaka-gachcha. Then follow Nêmichandra, Mâghanandi, Abhayachandra and S'rutamuni. In the line of the disciples' disciples of the latter was an Abhinava S'rutamuni, who is compared with Pûjyapâda in his knowledge of grammar, with Dêva (either Samantabhadra or Akalaṅka) in logic, with Gautama or Koṇḍakunda in siddhânta, and with Varddhamâna in adhyâtma. Then are mentioned another Abhayachandra, his brother S'rutakîrtti, and S'rutakîrtti's son Chârukîrtti.

Simhanâryya is next introduced, who is said to have cured the powerful king Ballâla of a severe illness through which he was as if among the dead; and also to have brought Abhayasûri through a dangerous illness, of the serious nature of which the patient was fully aware. This Ballâḷa was the eldest son of the Hoysala king Ereyaṅga and the elder brother of Vishṇu-varddhana. So far as we know he never came to the throne, and a reason may perhaps be found in the mortal sickness thus referred to, whatever it may have been, from which he was for the time cured as here stated. Simhanâryya's disciple was Paṇḍita or Chârukîrtti who took up his residence in Beḷugula. The mention of this place gives occasion for referring to the colossal statue set up by Châmuṇḍa Râya and the buildings erected by Bharatamayya. Two kings or local chieftains, Hariyana and Mâṇikya Dêva, were Pura Paṇḍita's lay-disciples, and he died in S'aka 1320, the year Îśvara, (A.D. 1398). His disciple Abhinava Paṇḍita Dêva Sûri and others set up his tomb, and Arhad-dâsa composed this inscription in his honour.

No. 126, which comes next, is a brief statement in two lines that Harihara Râya, that is, the second king of Vijayanagar of that name, died in the year Târaṇa. This would be equivalent to A.D. 1404. But according to the received accounts Harihara II ended his reign in 1401. The present inscription is therefore of special importance.

We now come to No. 106, dated in S'aka 1331, the year Virôdhi, (A.D. 1409). It records a grant for the worship of Gommaṭa by Mâyaṇṇa, who belonged to Gangavati, a place in Jayatipura (perhaps Jayantipura or Banavasi), in the Karṇâṭaka country.

The next inscription is No. 108, dated in S'aka 1355, the year Paridhâvi, (A.D. 1433). Its object is to record the death of S'rutamuni and the erection of his tomb, but it contains a long account of gurus from the beginning corresponding generally with that given in No 105 already described. It was the composition of the poet Mauga Râja. He is known from his work the Manga Râja Nighaṇṭu, written in A.D. 1398, and is distinguished as Abhinava Manga Râja from a Manga Râja who wrote a Harivamśa and other works about two centuries before.

One of the earlier verses contains a curious comparison of the Jaina faith with a ship, and mentions its bilge water, its cabins, its painted sides, and its wells or tanks of water. This is a somewhat earlier date than we should expect to find an acquaintance with such particulars, as it was not till 1498 that the earliest European expedition under Vasco de Gama arrived off the Indian coast at Calicut. And even the embassy to Vijayanagar of the Persian ambassador Abd-ur-Razzâk, who also came to Calicut, was not till 1442.

In the account of Pûjyapâda, the inscription gives some new information in stating that he was unrivalled as a dispenser of medicine (upratimaushadharddhih), and that the water in which his feet were bathed could turn iron into gold. A reference is also made to his visit to Videha (Tirhut in Behar), already described at p. 42

The origin of the four sanghas is not definitely attributed to Arhadbali as in No. 105, but they are said to have been formed by the body of yôgis who arose in the line of Akalanka. The cure of king Ballâla by Chârukirtti (as stated in No. 105) is mentioned, but it is further added that diseases were healed from contact of the air which had but touched his body. Paṇḍita is described as not only taking up his residence at Belgoḷa but as being specially attached to the Nagara Jinâlaya.

Nos. 127 and 125 come next. They are probably the same, but 127 was commenced and not completed. From 125 we learn that Dêva Rât, that is Dêva Râya, the king so named of Vijayanagar, died in the year Kshaya, which would correspond with A.D. 1446. But according to the received accounts Dêva Râya reigned till 1451. Here again, as in 126, we have important information.

The next inscription, No. 103, is dated S'aka 1432, the year S'ukla, (A.D. 1510). It states that Channa Bommarasa, supporter of the bhavya-jana, the blessed, (i. e. the Jains) in Nañjarâyapaṭṇa,[9] brother of the minister to king Changâla Dêva,[10] repaired the upper storey (baḷḷi-vâḍava) of the buildings attached to Gommaṭa svâmi.

[9] In the east of Coorg.

[10] This is the king of whom the story resembling that of Midas is related, that his right ear was like that of an ass, a secret known to none but himself and the barber who shaved him. The possession of the secret so troubled the latter that to relieve himself he whispered it to the sandal tree in the courtyard of the palace, under which the king was accustomed to be shaved. Some time after, the king being pleased with the performance of some tumblers, at their request presented them with the sandal tree in the courtyard for the purpose of making a drum. They cut down the tree and made the drum. But when it was beaten it gave forth no other sound than the words the barber had whispered to the tree and thus the secret became everywhere known. See Mysore and Coorg, Vol. II, 234 under Beṭṭadpur.

No. 134 is dated in Nandana, probably A.D. 1532. It relates how Gommaṭaṇṇa, disciple of the hiri-Âryya of Gerasoppe, had repairs done to five bastis, namely the Chikka basti on the small hill (it is not clear what basti this means), three in Baḍagavâgil (or perhaps at the north gate), and the Muṅgâyi basti.

Nos. 99 to 102 are short inscriptions, dated S'aka 1459, the year Viḷambi, (A.D. 1537), recording grants made by various mortgagees in consideration of their mortgages being released by a merchant named Chauṇḍa Seṭṭi of Gerasoppe.

In No. 135 is the record of the visit of some holy women from Gerasoppe in the year Vikâri, probably A.D. 1539.

Nos. 84 and 140 are alike, the former being engraved on stone and the latter on copper. With them we are brought to the time of the Mysore Râjas. They are dated in S'aka 1556, the year Bhâva, (A.D. 1634). Châma Râja Woḍeyar of Mysore, finding that the temple lands of Beḷgoḷa had been for a long .time mortgaged to certain Jaina merchants, sent for the latter and proposed to pay off the mortgage, the effect of which would of course be that the lands would be escheated to the State. To escape from the odium of having caused such an alienation, the merchants unanimously agreed to release the mortgages as a work of merit and to grant them for the support of their faith.

The whole transaction is related somewhat more in detail in the version on the copper plate, No. 140, while a strict prohibition is added against any of the priests mortgaging the temple lands in future and against any one who should grant them mortgages thereon, calling upon the rulers of the country to interfere to prevent it.

No. 142, engraved on the rock near the burning ground of the deceased gurus, is dated in S'aka 1565, the year Sobhânu, (A.D. 1643). It records the death there of Chârukirtti-paṇḍita-yati, also called Traividya-chakrêśvara.

No. 118 is in Nâgarî characters, and dated S'aka 1570, the year Sarvadhâri, (A.D. 1648). The language is Mahratti or Gujarati, and the object of the inscription is to record the erection of the Chovvisa-tîrthaṅkara basti, also called the Hosa-basti or new basti, an insignificant little building on the big hill.

Inscription No. 117 consists of a few lines cut on the rock to record the visit of some devotee in the year Saumya (? A.D. 1669).

No 116 is of the same character and is dated in S'aka 1602, the year Siddhârthi, (A.D. 1680).

Inscription No. 83 is dated in S'aka 1645, the year S'ôbhakṛit, (A.D. 1723), and states how Doḍḍa Krishṇa Râja Woḍeyar of Mysore paid a visit to Beḷgoḷa and, being greatly struck with the image of Gommaṭa Jina, renewed to it the grant of Beḷguḷa and presented other villages.

No. 121 records the erection in the year Siddhârthi, (probably A.D. 1739), of a little maṇṭapa called the Brahma Dêva maṇṭapa, situated near the beginning of the ascent up the big hill. It was built by a gauḍa of Hirisâṛi, perhaps the present village of Hiresâve, a few miles to the north-east of S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa.

Inscription No. 72 is cut on the rock a little distance in front of Bhadrabâhu's cave. It is dated in S'aka 1731, the year S'ukla, (A.D. 1809), and states that Ajitakirtti expired at that spot after fasting for a month. This is the latest recorded instance at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa of the performance of sallêkhana.

No. 128 relates that Channaṇṇa, the son of a merchant, erected the maṇṭapa and a pond named Âdi-tîrtha. The inscription is a most degenerate production and quite unworthy of a place among so many beautiful specimens of composition. Its date may be about A.D. 1810.

No. 98 is dated in S'aka 1748, the year Vyaya, (A.D. 1826), and is a grant made in the reign of Kṛishṇa Râja Woḍeyar of Mysore by Puṭṭa Dêvarâjai arasa, son of Dêvarâjai arasa, bakshi of the body-guard, kandâchâr and savâr kachêri, that is, head of the military department, in commemoration of the death of his father, which took place on the day for the head anointing of Gommaṭêśvara.[1]

We at length come to No. 141, the latest of these interesting inscriptions, dated in S'aka 1752, the year Vikṛiti, (A.D. 1830). It is also stated to be 2,493 years after the final beatitude (or death) of Varddhamâna and the year 1888 of Vikramârka. The former date would give us B.C. 663 as the date of Varddhamâna's decease, which is the traditional date. But on this point see above, p. 11.

The grant is one made by Kṛishṇa Râja Woḍeyar of Mysore, confirming to the use of Gommaṭêśa and of the various Jaina temples and guru's maṭha at Beḷguḷa four villages which during his minority had been granted by Pûrṇâryya, (the well known Dewan Pûrṇaiya or Poorniah).

In describing the donee, Chârukîrtti paṇḍita, he is called occupant of the throne of the Dilli, Hêmâdri, Sudhâ, Saṅgîta, Svêtâpura, Kshêmavêṇu and Beḷguḷa samsthânas. The mandates of the guru are in fact to this day issued to these places, which are identified as follows. Dilli is Delhi, where there are many Jainas (see above under No. 136); Hêmâdri, also called Kanakâdri, is Maleyur in Châmrâjnagar taluq; Sudhâ is Sôḍe in North Kanara; Saṅgîtapura is the Sanskrit of Hâḍuvalli, a place in Dharwar; Svêtâpura is Bilige in North Kanara; Kshêmavêṇu is Mûḍu Bidari in South Kanara.

A few other inscriptions, roughly cut on the pavement close to the enclosure occupied by the colossal image, are apparently in Gujarati and are believed to contain records of some modern unimportant donations to the god. These have not been translated, but the accompanying illustration represents two of the best engraved.

6. Avinîta, Koṅgaṇi .. .. 425—478 crowned while an infant in his mother's lap married the daughter of Skanda-Varmmâ, Râjâ of Punnâḍ like Vaivasvata Manu in protecting the South in the maintenance of castes and religious orders.

[1] These names are assumed as titles by all the kings of the dynasty to the end.

The name Koṅguṇi takes the forms Koṅgu(ṇi) (used by the grammarian Nâga-Varmmâ), Koṅgoṇi, Koṅgiṇi, and Koṅgaṇi, the last the most common.

Each king is the son of his predecessor unless otherwise stated.

Date A.D.

7. Durvvinîta, Kongaṇi-vṛiddha .. .. 478—513..
taught by the author of S'abdâvatâra, i. e. Pûjyapâda

Prabhûta-varsha or Gôvinda, [illegible] Nirupama, releases him, but has to confine him again on account of his hostility 807

[1] The inscriptions are not clear as to the history at this point. The achievements here put down to Mârasiṃha may perhaps belong to his predecessor S'ivamâra (No. 11).

[2] Also there may have been two kings called Pṛithivîpati, one immediately before and one immediately after Mârasiṃha. But S'rî Purusha is said to be the grandson of S'ivamâra.

Date A.D.

Châki Râja, ? viceroy of the Râshṭrakûṭas, ruling the Gaṅga maṇḍala in (or ?till) 813

S'ivamâra, (? having escaped), defeats the combined Râshṭrakûṭa, Châḷukya and Haihaya army, encamped at Mudugundûr under Vallabha, i. e. Gôvinda

the two anointed kings, Gôvinda of the Râshṭrakûṭa line (whose reign ended in 814 A.D.) and Nandi-varmmâ of the Pallava line, unite in the coronation-anointing of S'ivamâra, and with their own hands place a diadem on his brow a long war took place between the Eastern Châḷukyas and the allied Gaṅgas and Raṭṭas, in which 108 battles were fought in 12 years.

15. Vijayaditya .. .. —869
the brother of S'ivamâra.

16. Raja Malla, Satya Vakya, Koṅgaṇi-Varmmâ, Dharmma-mahârâjâdhirâja, Permmanaḍi[3] .. 869—? 893

lord of the city of Kôvaḷâla, lord of Nandagiri[3]

he recovered from the Râshṭrakûṭas the world which they had stolen and kept for a long time a son called Raṇa-Vikramayya was perhaps the same.

Bûtarasa was yuva-râja in 870

17. Niti-Margga, Satya Vâkya, Râcha-malla, Nanniya Ganga .. .. ? 893—? 916
Noḷambâdhirâja of the Pallava line was a governor under him.

18. Ereyappa, Râja Malla, Râcha Malla .. .. ? 916—921

19. Satya Vakya, Racha Malla, Nanniya Gaṅga, Jayad-uttaraṅga, Gaṅga Gâṅgêya[4] 921—963

his daughter was married to the son of the Râshṭrakûṭa king Krishṇa Râja or Kannara Dêva the Gaṅga territory extended to the north over Banavase, Belvola and other provinces, by the favour of Krishṇa Râja, whose governor Bûtuga rebelled against him and was slain.

20. Marasimha, Satya Vâkya, Noḷamba-kulântaka-Dêva.. .. .. 963—974 made an expedition against the Gurjjara Râja, at the request of the Chôḷântaka king Krishṇa Râja Râshṭrakûṭa was a terror to the Châḷukya prince Râjâditya.

21. Raja Malla, Râcha Malla, Satya Vâkya .. .. 974—984

his younger brother Rakkasa, aṇṇana banṭa, was governor under him his minister Châmuṇḍa Râya, erected the colossal statue of Gommaṭêśvara at S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa.

22. Gaṅga, Rakkasa, Râcha Malla .. .. 984—999

23. Niti-Margga, Jayad-ankakâra, Koṅgaṇi-vedeṅga, Kâvêri-vallabha .. 999—

---

[3] The succeeding kings, to the end, take one or all of these names and titles: the original Dharmma-mahâdhirâja from this time becomes in every case Dharmma-mahârâjâdhirâja. But even at an earlier period we find an occasional use of a similar title, for S'ivamâra (No. 14) and somewhat later, Niti Mârgga (No. 17) are called mahârâjâdhirâja paramês'vara.

[4] These titles are taken indiscriminately by the succeeding kings, but Jayad-uttaraṅga is varied into Jagad-uttaraṅga, Jasal-uttaraṅga, &c.

Date A.D.

24. Gaṅgarasa, Satya Vâkya .. .. 1022—1064
the Gaṅga princess Mailala Dêvî was the chief queen of the Châḷukya monarch Sômês'vara, who ruled 1042—1068; and his two sons by her take all the Gaṅga titles.

The Gaṅga empire was overthrown by the conquests of Râjêndra Chôḷa, whose army took the capital city of Talakâḍ about 1064.

Gaṅgarasa a governor under the Hoysaḷas 1065

Udayâditya, Gaṅga Permmanaḍi, Bhuvanaika-vîra, was a distinguished general and governor under the two Châḷukya kings whose mother was a Gaṅga princess as above mentioned, namely Bhuvanaika Malla and Vikramâditya Tribhuvana Malla .. .. 1070—1102..

Gaṅga Râja, minister and general under the Hoysaḷa king Vishṇu-varddhana, recovered Talakâḍ by attacking and defeating Adiyama the Chôḷa governor of the place, and handed it over to Vishṇu-varddhana, who thence assumed the title of Vîra Gaṅga.
He also defeated the army of Châḷukya Tribhuvana Malla in a night attack at Kannegâla and was instrumental in making the Hoysaḷa king independent .. .. 1113—1133

Ekkalarasa, a moon in raising the fortunes of the Gaṅga family mentioned under the Kalachurya king Bijjala .. .. .. —1158

Tailaha Dêvarasa, his son, with same title mentioned under the Kalachurya kings Sankama Dêva and Âhava Malla .. .. 1158—1181

Uttama Chôḷa-Gaṅga, Kâvêri-Vallabha, Gaṅga Perumâḷ, Vîra Gaṅga, lord of the city of Kuvaḷâla, lord of Nandagiri established himself in the east of Mysore .. .. .. 1217—1225
His sons were Vikrama Gaṅga and Mârappa

Meanwhile Chôḷa-Gaṅga founded the line of Gaṅga or Gâṅga kings in Kaḷiṅga in 1077 or 1132 and they held the sovereignty of that country down to 1534
Also a Chôla-Gaṅga[5] from Kaliṅga was ruling in Ceylon in 1196.

Ganga Râja founded the principality of Sivasamudram about . .. 1550 he was succeeded by Nandi Râja, and he by Ganga Râja, with whom the name disappears from history.

[5] He was the nephew of Nissanka Malla, from Kaliṅga, who was ruling in Ceylon in 1187. The latter was succeeded in Ceylon by his brother, Vikrama Bâhu, ruling in 1196, and he by his son Chôḷa Gaṅga, ruling in the same year. After him came Lîlâvatî, widow of a former king Parâkrama Bâhu, in 1197, and then Sâhasa-Malla, ? brother of Nissaṅka Malla, in 1200, followed by Kalyâṇavatî, widow of Nissaṅka Malla, in 1202 (Rhys Davids, Ancient coins and measures of Ceylon, in International Numismata Orientalia).

* The correct date is sâsirada nalvattaydaneya, but the engraver, having by mistake omitted nalvatt and inscribed sâsiradaydaneya, has corrected it as best he could by turning the da of sâsirada into 40, which as read gives the right result but looks strange to the eye.

Inscriptions on Chandra-giri.

Size 15′ 3″ × 4′ 7″.

Two Vases[2] decorated with leaves.

Be it well.

Success through the adorable Varddhamâna, the fortunate establisher of the science of merit;
an embodiment of the nectar of the peace of acquired siddhi (the fruit of penance).
Support of both the upper and lower worlds, being himself all things moveable and immoveable;
by his own power of discerning both spirit and mind, pervading all.
Having obtained inconceivable greatness and supreme honour throughout the world; having acquired the great arhantya in the group of worthies who have become tîrthaṅkaras.
Moreover, whose indisputable doctrine, overcoming those of the other disputing sects, is supreme in śri Viśâlâ,[3] and a security to the world.

After the great sun Mahâvîra had gone down,—an abode of glorious qualities which illuminated all worlds; a great orb of a thousand brilliant rays which, dispersing the darkness, caused to unfold the lotus of the blessed people[4] multiplying in the lake of the supreme Jaina faith:—(there arose) the adorable great Rishi Gautama-gaṇadhara, his personal disciple Lôhârya, Jambu, Vishṇu-dêva, Aparâjita, Gôvarddhana, Bhadrabâhu, Viśâkha, Prôshṭhila, Kshatrikârya, Jayanâma, Siddhârtha, Dhṛitishêna, Buddhila, and other gurus.

Bhadrabâhu-svâmin, of the illustrious line of this regular order of great men, who by virtue of his severe penance had acquired the essence of knowledge, having, by his power of discovering the past, present and future, foretold in Ujjayinî a period of twelve years of dire calamity (or famine),—the whole of the saṅgha, leaving the northern regions, took their way to the south. And the ṛishi company arrived at a country counting many hundreds of villages, completely filled with the increase of people, money, gold, grain, cows, buffaloes and goats.

Whereupon, at a mountain with lofty peaks, whose name was Kaṭavapra,[5]—an ornament to the earth; the ground around which was variegated with the brilliant hues of the clustres of gay flowers fallen from the beautiful trees; the rocks on which were dark as the great rain-clouds filled with water; abounding with wild boars, panthers, tigers, bears, hyænas, serpents and deer; filled with caves, caverns, large ravines and forests;—the âchâri, with Prabhâchandra[6] also[7], perceiving that but little time remained for him to live, and fearing on account of the road (or journey), announced his desire to do the penance before death, and having dismissed the entire saṅgha, he, with one single

2. It is not clear whether these belong to the inscription, but they seem to. At either end above the inscription are two lamp-stands, which appear to be later additions. Between the vase to the right and the lamp-stand on that side is a large circle with figures of leaves, which is certainly more modern.
3. An ancient name of Ujjayinî.
4. Bhavya jana, a term appropriated by the Jains to express their own sect.
5. "having matted sides."—In the Kannaḍa inscriptions it appears as Kaḷvappu and Kaḷbappu.
6. Explained as the clerical name assumed by Chandra Gupta.
7. The construction is stated to be Prabhâchandrêṇa+amâ+avanitala &c. [amâ saha-samîpê cha—Amara Kôśa.]

disciple, worshipping on cold stones covered with grass, quitted his body and in this manner attained to the state (or, gained the adoration) of the seven hundred ṛishis.

May it prosper, the Jina s'âsana.

Nâgamati-ganti,[9] the (female) disciple of the excellent Silent guru [10] of Chittûr in Âdeyaṟe nâḍ,[1] having kept the vow three months, expired.[2]

3

The dense smoke of iniquity spreading wide and filling all space like the huge mountain of ignorance, the fool who is entangled in the great and delusive troubles of family, falling under the power of kings, goes to ruin. The friend of heavenly wisdom named Charita S'ri, in (the mountain) called Kaḷbappi praised by the munis of svarga, performing the vows of a muni, attained to the condition of a happy man.

5

Be it well. The fortunate (lady) Jambû Nâygi, having kept the vow a month, expired.

The fortunate Silent bhaṭṭâra of Nôdubomṟe, having kept the vow, expired.

7

Bala Dêva guru, disciple of .... Dharmma Sêna guru of Kittûru, having kept the vow of a sannyâsi, expired.

Ugra Sêna guru, disciple of Paddini guru of Mâlenûru, having kept the vow of a sannyâsi one month, expired.

8 Originally published by me, with Nos. 5 to 11, 13, 14 and 16, in 1873 (Ind. Ant. II, 323.)

9 Kanti, or, by euphony in a compound, ganti, was the designation of a Jaina nun or female devotee.

10 Guruvaḍigaḷ, literally the 'guru feet': a similar use of aḍi, foot, is seen in Dimmaḍigaḷ, No. 16, Permmanaḍigaḷ and Permmaḍigaḷ, or their singulars, as titles of the Gaṅga kings (see Nos. 2, 3 and 4, Coorg Inscriptions) and of the Châḷukya kings (see Nos. 45 and 59 in this volume). This use is not now retained in Kannaḍa, but appears to be known in Tamil and Malayâḷam. The idea of 'worshipful' seems associated with aḍi, as it is with pâda in Sanskrit, in the expression tâta-pâda, also used of gurus. Though this sense of the word is not found in the dictionaries, there is a rule quoted by Mâdhva Brahmans as follows:—Uttamânâm svarûpan tu pâda-s'abdêna bhaṇyatê.

1 This name occurs as Adeyâra-râshṭra in a grant of the Pallava king Nandi-Varmma, and, with reference to its being on the Pâlâr, as As'raya-nadi-vishaya in a grant of Nandi-Varmma Pallava-Malla. Chittur is also Sanskritized as Anupura. These coincidences were pointed out by Mr. Foulkes, who published the grants in 1879. (Ind. Ant. VIII, 167, 273: see also Salem Manual, II, 354.)

2 Muḍippidar, a term peculiar to the Jains, with which most of this class of inscriptions terminate. Muḍi is given among the Kannaḍa verbal roots in Kês'i Râja's S'abdamaṇi-darpaṇa, and is explained by kês'a-bandhanê nirvahaṇê cha, to bind the hair, and to end. On the analogy of maḍi, maraṇê (to die), and maḍipu, maraṇa-karaṇê (to kill or cause death) in the same list, muḍipu would be the causal form of muḍi and equivalent to nirvahaṇa-karaṇê, to procure nirvahaṇa or one's end. The latter word is derived from nirvah, to which Benfey gives the meanings 'to extricate oneself, to pass away'—the first on the authority of Lassen. Muḍippidar appears in these inscriptions to include all these ideas of ceasing (to live), liberating oneself and passing away. I have translated it by "expired" proceeding on the evident analogy between nirvahaṇa and the Buddhist term nirvâṇa, derived from nirvâ, to be extinguished. The Amara Kôśa explains the latter thus—nirvâṇo muni-vahny-âdau, which means 'blown out or gone out'—applied either to a sage or to fire; extinct.

His wife was Pôchikabbe, the mother of Gaṅga Râja.

This celebrated Pôchâmbike, having erected many chaityâlayas in Beḷuguḷa and many other tîrthas, and presented large gifts to them ; forsaking household and the life of a woman, thinking on the verse "Namô Vîta-râgâya," she by means of the sallêkhana triumphed over the troubles of this present time, and with ease took hold on the seat of the gods.

The son of that mother of the world ; entitled to the five great drums ; lord over the great feudatories ; victor over the fear of his enemies ; purifier of his gôtra ; friend of the wise ; a moon in raising the waters of the ocean of the good Jaina dharmma ; a jewel mine of good qualities ; delighting in gifts of food, shelter, medicine and learning ; rejoicing the hearts of the blessed ; the full vessel for the coronation-anointing of the Poysaḷa râja Vishṇu-varddhana ; a foundation-pillar for the palace of merit ; punisher of those who break their word ; driver out of the enemy ; a mill stone to traitors ; possessed of these and many other titles :—the auspicious great minister and daṇḍanâyaka Gaṅga Râja, on his mother Pôchala Dêvi ascending to the skies, raised a tomb to her memory, and caused it to be set up and consecrated with great gifts and sacred ceremonies.

Perggaḍe Bâva Râja, a lay disciple of Prabhâchandra siddhânta dêva, wrote this, and Varddhamânâchâri, son of Hoysaḷâchâri, engraved it.

(After praise of the Jina śâsana, proceeds)—While, entitled to the five great drums, the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, lord of the city of Dvârâvati, sun in the sky of the Yâdava kula, a perfect head-jewel, champion over the Malapas, adorned with these and many other titles, the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, Tribhuvana-malla, the capturer of Taḷakâḍu, the strong-armed Vîra-Gaṅga Vishṇu-varddhana Hoysaḷa Dêva's victorious kingdom was increasing, to continue as long as sun, moon and stars :—

The dweller at his lotus feet,—Êcham (with genealogy as given in 44) and his wife Pôchikabbe had a son. As the thunderbolt to the thunderer (Indra), as the plough to the plough-bearer (Bala Râma), as the discus to the discus-bearer (Vishṇu), as the śakti to the śakti-bearer (Rudra), as the bow Gâṇḍîva to the owner of Gâṇḍîva (Arjuna), even so, devoted to the affairs of king Vishṇu, was he—Gaṅga, whose rising fame was like the waves of the Ganges: how by such as us can he be praised.

This auspicious great minister and daṇḍanâyaka, a mill-stone to traitors, Gaṅga Râja, when the army of the Châḷukya emperor Tribhuvana-Malla Permmâḍi-Dêva, including twelve tributary chiefs, was left in camp at Kaṇṇegâla ; (saying) Let go ! and springing on to his horse, caring not for its being a fight by night, went with speed and with the sword in his arm carried terror into the panic-stricken army.

Thus, as if it were a sport, having defeated all the feudatories, he brought the whole collection of their stores and vehicles and presented them to his own lord; who, saying 'I am delighted, delighted, with the prowess of your own arm; Ask (what you will)'—

Having gained supreme favour, he asked not at all for kingdom or wealth, but, his mind fixed on the worship of Arhad, he asked for Parama.[6]

And having so asked—

He presented it for the worship of the Jinâlaya which his mother Pôchala-dêvi had made and the Jinâlaya which his wife Lakshmî-dêvi had made.

Of the Ârhata samaya, which was from the beginning, the Mûla-sangha, and the Koṇḍakundânvaya, of the Dêśiga gaṇa and Pustaka-gachchha, was Kukkuṭâsana Maladhâri dêva; whose famous disciple was S'ubhachandra siddhânta dêva; whose lay disciple was Ganga chamûpati.

The basadis of Gangavâḍi, however many there were, he restored; for the Gommaṭa dêva of Gangavâḍi he had the cloisters round made; driving out the Tigulas[7] from Gangavâḍi, he caused Vîra-Ganga to stand upright:—Ganga Râja, a hundred times more fortunate than that former Râja of the Gangas.

Fortune to the Jina śâsana.

May he prevail, far from sin, his fame celebrated as that of the milk ocean or the pearl garland, śrî S'ubhêndu bratiśa; an ocean to the jewels of good qualities, the friend only of the good, a blossom for the bees the wise, the remover of the trouble of Manmatha.

As from the birth of Lakshmî, moonlight and the tree of plenty, the woman the sea-shore acquired greatness; so, blameless, skilful, of good character, beauty and grace— the daṇḍanâyakiti Lakkala dêviti, on the birth of this lord called Bûchi Râja, obtained greatness and acquired fame.

To describe the son of that lady :—

Be it well.—Of a countenance which brought happiness like the sun to the lotuses the faces of the fair ones in the most illustrious abodes in all worlds; of a body like that of the lord of love himself; delighting in bestowal of gifts of food, shelter, medicine and learning; a balm for the sorrows of all the world; adorned with the jewels of all good qualities; his refuge the feet of Jina: such was Bûchana.

As of modesty the country, of virtue the birth-place, of purity the native land, thus do people ever praise him: a moon in unfolding the waterlilies the wise, the famous Bûchi in generosity to others was a new Dadhîchi, in valour which carried terror into the stoutest warriors an Arjuna.

That elder brother (or friend), in the S'aka year 1035, the year Vijaya, the 10th of the bright fortnight of Vaiśâkha, Sunday, having severed all associations, expired.

Liberality to be the worthiest of all; courage to be its younger brother; and fortitude its friend; excess of pride to be an enemy; intelligence to be the ornament of the wise; such and all other qualities to be the sole abode of merit; virtue to be the best beloved: thus did Bûchana cause them to be esteemed: what can not the skilful accomplish?

He who in courage had attained to lionhood, in great liberality to the state of a tree of plenty in the earth, in profundity to oceanhood, in grandeur to the state of Mêru : that Bûchana, at his end, with a peaceful mind so much desired by the wise, attained to godhead.

In order to perpetuate the fame of the qualities of Bûcha, as being Manmatha embodied, as the most renowned, as possessed of highest fortune, as having acquired the state of the power of Indra, as the exceeding wise;—the dearly beloved (wife) of the general Ganga, equal to Lakshmî, caused a stone-pillar to be erected.

The earth lost weight, the assembly of the great and the good was without a protector, the lady speech of the present world became distasteful to all ; while thus the minds of the blessed were filled with grief, the unrivalled and renowned Bûchiya reached the world of gods.

The monument of Bûchana, lay disciple of S'ubhachandra siddhânta dêva, of the śrî-Mula-sangha, Dêśiga-gaṇa and Pustaka-gachcha.

In the S'aka year 1037, the year Manmatha, the 14th of the bright fortnight of Mârgaśira, under the sign Sagittarius, 6 ghaliges of the forenoon having passed, śrî-Mêghachandra traividya dêva, knowing it was the time of his death, being in the palyankâsana, meditating on spirit, attained to the world of gods.

To describe that meditation :—fixing the mind on eternal truth and the essence of spirit was the cause of his leaving (the body): the traividya muni Mêghachandra, a mine of instruction, went to the superior paradise.

His chief disciple, Prabhâchandra siddhânta dêva's lay disciple, in memory of the passing away of his guru, in the Kabbappu tîrtha—Lakshmîmati daṇḍanâyakiti, —wife of the supporter of king Vishṇu-varddhana the Hoysaḷa mahârâja's kingdom, the great minister and daṇḍanâyaka Gaṅga Râja, having caused a monument to be erected by wealthy people with great splendour and consecrated at the time of a fortunate conjunction :

the glory of the penance of that great muni at this monument was as follows :—(praise of Prabhâchandra).

Written by Bhâva Râja.

Praise of Gaṅga daṇḍanâtha, through whose repairing of the ruined Jina temples the Gaṅgavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand became a ? Kopana. Praise of Lakshmîmati, for her gifts of food, shelter, medicine and instruction.

(Abstract):—Praise of S'ubhêndu vratiśa: praise of Lakkala dêviti, who acquired great fame from the birth of Bûchi Râja. Her daughter was Dêmiyakka, the wife of Châmuṇḍa Seṭṭi, who protected the merchants from the râkshasa the Kali age.

By bestowal of gifts of food, shelter, medicine and learning, with her mind fixed on Arhad Dêva, she became a heavenly woman. She was the chief wife among the wives of the merchant Châmuṇḍa, who was beloved by many kings. Only to promote chaityâlayas and chaityâlaya worship in the world had she descended from svarga; and having made gifts of food, shelter, medicine and learning, she returned by penance to her own place again.

For her victory over the king of the Kali age, the enemy of merit, a stone pillar (for her) as if a pillar of victory, did Lakshmî erect.

The lay disciple of S'ubhachandra siddhânta dêva, of the śri-Mûla-saṅgha, the Dêśiga-gaṇa and Pustaka-gachcha; in the S'aka year 1042, the year Vikâri, the 11th of the bright fortnight of Phâlguṇa, on Thursday;—Dêmiyakka expired in the manner of a sannyâsi.

A jewel-ornament to the Yâdava line, jewel-protector of kings, jewel in the garland of Lakshmi, a head-jewel among kings,—may he prevail—a jewel-mirror reflecting the path of virtue, the only head-jewel of the world,—the auspicious Vishṇu, revered through esteem, a jewel of good qualities, a perfect head-jewel.

To the man who asks, a celestial tree of plenty; to him who claims protection, an adamantine refuge; to others' wives, a Hanuman; to those who withstand him in battle, death:—was Vinayâditya.

How many tanks and temples, how many Jaina dwellings, how many nâḍs, towns and populations, did he with pleasure make, king Vinayâditya! Poysaḷa alone obtained a fame above that of Balîndra, who can praise so great and profound a hero?

The pits dug for bricks became tanks, the great mountains quarried for stone became level with the ground, the paths by which the mortar-carts passed became ravines;—in such wise did he cause the abodes of Jina Râja to be fitly erected—Poysaḷa: who can praise the king over the Male Râjas?

To that king Poysaḷa—a head-jewel of royal princes, lord of fortune, lord of the earth conquered by his own arm—was born the hero king Ereyaṅga.

The son of king Vinayâditya, the only tree of plenty to the people of the world, walking in the path of Manu, the sole hero in the world, was the king Ereyaṅga: greater than whom was his son, destroyer of the pride of hostile kings, the king Vishṇu-varddhana, who shone in the world as a lion among kings.

That famous king Ereyaṅga's son, a mighty destroyer of his enemies, lord of all the earth, a Karṇa to the needy, was king Vishṇu born.

Smiter on the heads of hostile kings, destroyer of the pride of the boasting hostile chiefs, sole ornament of his race, was this king the auspicious Biṭṭi Dêva.

Be it well.—Entitled to the five great drums, mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, lord of the good city of Dvârâvati, sun in the sky of the Yâdava kula, a perfect head-jewel, champion over the Malapas, heavy punisher of hatred, seeing farther than to-morrow, displayer of valour, capturer of Talekâḍu, bold among champions, the sole supporter of the rise of Paṭṭi Perumâḷa's own kingdom, punisher of kings without respect, a forest-fire to the wood Chakragoṭṭa, the last fire to unfriendly chiefs, a fierce forest-fire to the country of the Toṇḍamaṇḍala chief, a cause of destruction to the mighty forces of the enemy, subduer of the pride of haughty chiefs, capturer of Noḷambavâḍi[10], seizer of the falling fortune of hostile kings, misleader of those who deceive, kisser of the lady victory, sitter down on the fierce, exemplar of valour, his strong right arm embraced by the wives of heroes, piercing the heart of Adiyama[1], eager to embrace the lady bravery, an elephant to the uplifted lotuses the enemy, a cage of adamant to those who claim protection, a banner of fame to his comrades, a banner of victory in battle, destroyer of the purpose of Beṅgi Râya, companion of the brave, uprooter of Narasiṅga-Varmma[2], a fire of the last day to the quarrelsome, the capturer of Hânuṅgallu[3], champion over Brahma, a skilful Brahma, Shaṇmukha in war, an earring to Sarasvatî, a portion of the mighty Vishṇu, not slaying those who tremble at the arrows of the king's mind, fond of making gifts, giving joy like the champaka, upholder of the chit-samaya, an ornament of the brave, in intelligence a Nârâyaṇa, the perfection of a hero, in literature a Vidyâdhara, fierce in war, sun to the Poysaḷa dynasty, a cow of plenty to poets, the monarch of the Kali yuga, punisher of the evil, Râma in battle, Bhîma in boldness, to horses Vatsa-râja, to women Manmatha, to lusty elephants Bhagadatta, a new Chârudatta, upholder of the Nîlagiri, a jewel of champions, Mâri to the Koṅgas[4], smiter on the heads of the families of kings, terrifier of Tereyûru, trampler on Koyatûru[5], displacer of Heñjaru, certain in war, pursuer of Pâṇḍya, capturer of Uchchaṅgi, undoubted hero, master of war, taker up of Pombuchcha[6], roller over of Sâvimale, a fire of the last day to enemies, a forest fire to the unfriendly, displacer of hostile kings, crowner of friendly kings, layer waste of the Ghâṭs, dragger along of the Tuḷuvas, a terror to Gôyindavâḍi, S'aṅkhara to unfriendly forces, trampler on those who oppose him, seizer of adulterers, plunderer of Râyarâyapura[7], breaker down of the enemy, in valour Nârâyaṇa, perfect in bravery, worshipper of the feet of the holy god Kêśava, subduer of hostile chiefs,—adorned with these and many other titles, having captured without trouble hill forts, forest forts, water forts and many other forts, and with conspicuous valour made the Gaṅgavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand as far as Lakkigoṇḍi[8] subject to his orders :—Moreover,

Penetrating into the countries of the evil in the earth and of hostile kings he drove them out, and by the power of his arm having brought the entire territory into subjection, and taken it into union with him as Gaṅga-maṇḍala, so that his order was everywhere obeyed, Vishṇu Poysaḷa was in security in the possession of kingdom and continual happiness :—

Wherever he attacked, there the opposing kings, shaking with fear at sight of him, gave up all their possessions and, receiving back their government, remained in service around him : when so many who were before him had not (attained) such glory, who is he that can praise king Vishṇu ?

Thus, while Tribhuvana-Malla, the capturer of Talekâḍu, the strong-armed Vîra-Gaṅga Vishṇuvarddhana Poysaḷa Dêva's victorious kingdom was continually increasing to endure as long as sun, moon and stars—the dweller at his lotus feet, the senior queen and crowned consort S'ântala Dêvî :—

of praise to the world, in affection for her husband famous as Sîtâ, a jewel to those who respect her, a perfect head-jewel, a lusty elephant to the haughty co-wives, a cause for the promotion of merit, a banner of victory to the king Manmatha, a light from her own brilliance, a mistress of song and music, a secure rampart to the Jina faith, delighting in the relation of the stories of Jina merit, loving to bestow gifts of food, shelter, medicine and learning, pure in Jina works of merit, a friend to the blessed, her head purified by the Jina holy water :—

Desire of the heart and eyes to the famous king Vishṇu, her ringlets as black as the shining bee, her face like the moon, even as Rati to Kâma was she the like, the equal, the fellow, the same—S'ântala Dêvi.

In war a Lakshmî of victory to king Vishṇu, a Lakshmî of all-pervading brightness ever with love resting in supremest joy on his breast, a Lakshmî of fame stretching to the walls the points of the compass,—when all in the world speak thus of her, who can praise S'ântala Dêvi.

As if on the breast of Vishṇu of the Kali age, the Lakshmî of the Kali age were reposing, such was the beauty of S'ântala Dêvi—let him who says I can describe it, describe it.

Being the equal of Sarasvatî, Pârvatî and Lakshmî, can other women be compared with S'ântala Dêvi, the virtuous, the beautiful and fortunate ?

Her guru being Prabhâchandra-siddhânta-dêva ; the mother who bore her, the mine of good qualities, Mâchikabbe ; the senior pêrggaḍe Mârasiṅgayya, her father ; her uncle, the pêrggaḍe Siṅgimayya ; her king Vishṇu-varddhana ; her favourite, Jinanâtha ; Vishṇu her god :—to describe the greatness of S'ântala Dêvi is it possible in the world ?

In the S'aka year 1053, the year Virôdhikṛit, the 5th of the bright fortnight of Chaitra, on Monday, in the holy place of S'ivagaṅga she expired and went to svarga.

The Bṛihaspati to munis in this Kali age, an asylum for the bards, in the form of a terrestrial cow of plenty, the revered, the great lord, a refuge for the learned, the praise of all who behold him, adorned with a mine of good qualities, the sole donor in the world, a minister without anxiety ;—thus does the world applaud the pêrggaḍe Mârasiṅga.

Who in this age is superior to the pêrggaḍe, the lord Mârasiṅga . . . . in objects of human desire, in great liberality, in pleasure in religious works, in devotion to the lotus feet of Hara (S'iva), in uprightness, in virtue :—thus esteemed, the king went from this world performing a vow, did he not ? while all the earth applauded.

Joyfully the incomparable S'ântala Dêvi, her father Mârasiṅgayya, and her mother Mâchikabbe, so many expiring together, attained to svarga.

The writer Bôkimayya.

(West face.)

"The queen has attained to godhead ; it has fallen to me to remain", thus saying, she came and in Beḷaguḷa by severe penance this mature Mâchikabbe herself quitted (her body.)

With eyes half closed, repeating the five words (or phrases)[8], glorious with meditating on Jinêndra, magnanimous in parting from relatives, absorbed in the vow of a sannyâsi, fasting for one month, Mâchikabbe herself attained godhead by means of her penance in the presence of all the blessed.

[8] See No. 44, n. 4.

That Mârasiṅga's wife, devoted to the feet of Jina, a union of all good qualities, of great attachment to her husband, thus praised by all the world, did Mâchikabbe shine.

Devoted to the feet of Jina, worshipped by his friends, a cow of plenty to dependents, like the wife of Kâma, great in good qualities, loving to give, ever devoted to the lotus feet of munis, a praise to the people,—such was Mârasiṅga's wife, thus to praise Mâchikabbe did the world ever love.

Jinanâtha being her favourite; Bala Dêva, her father; the chief of women Bâchikabbe, the mother who bore her; her younger brother, Siṅga;—possessed of such greatness, the distinguished Mâchikabbe went to the world of gods amid the continual praises of all the earth: whoso can describe her (fitly), he alone can describe her.

Among women who took the vow of a sannyâsi, who was able to endure like this? while all were thus saying, she chose with joy the glory of fearful severe penance:—while learning shone in her mind, praising the lotus feet of Jina, amid the plaudits of the world, Mâchikabbe with exultation attained to godhead.

Untold gifts did she bestow, saying Who is richer than who ?[10] and praising Jina in her mind, she expired—what more can I say of the singular greatness of Mâchikabbe.

Thus, in the presence of her gurus Prabhâchandra-siddhânta-dêva, Varddhamâna-dêva, Ravichandra-dêva, and all the blessed, did she embrace the vow of a sannyâsi, and attentive to their instructions, passed away.

What pandit in this world by his death obtained such glory as Mâchikabbe, performing unbroken fearful severe penance?

The descent of her family was as follows:—

Pure in Jina faith, a resting place for the blessed, an asylum of good qualities, of a character like Manu, a bee at the lotus feet of munis, beloved of the people, was Nâga-Varmma-daṇḍâdhîśa.

A moon to the auspicious line of nâthas, honoured in Indra's assembly, of a growing clustre of brightness, removing the darkness of the world by filling it with the sweet nectar of his doctrine, his widening glory of the ocean of pure merit ever increasing, master of the good,—the holy Varddhamâna Jina, may he protect the circle of the chakôras the blessed.

May he prevail, bearing in the gaṇa the illustrious name of artthayuta Indrabhûti, the svâmi Gautama, having by the seven mahardhis drawn the three worlds to his feet, the unfettered Ganges of whose doctrine descending from the sides of the Himavat mountain Vîra, and entering the ocean of his instruction, is absorbed by the clouds the learned and purifies the world.

In the guru (line) were next six, having a thousand eyes, in the form of confident instruction, the S'rutakêvali Indras, worshipped by the heads of gods and the learned, severe in splitting with the thunderbolt of their speech the mountain of evil sects.

Worthy is it not of being described, the greatness of Bhadrabâhu, say,—stout of arm in subduing the pride of the great wrestler ignorance, through the merit obtained from discipleship to whom that Chandra-Gupta was for a long time served by the forest deities.

Worthy of being reverenced by whom in this world is not the lord Koṇḍakunda, all regions adorned with his fame as if with the glory of the blooming jasmine, a bee to (whom minister) the lotuses the hands of beautiful angels, he who caused the doctrine to be widely established in Bharata.

Worthy of reverence is he, the skilled in subduing morbid desire, of a rank bestowed by the goddess Padmâvatî, who by the spell of his own word summoned Chandraprabha, that âchâri Samanta-bhadra, upholder of the gaṇa, through whom in this Kali age the Jaina path became samanta bhadra (ever fortunate) from its being time upon time fortunate on all sides.

Whose own statement as follows displays his eagerness to enter into argument :—

"At first in the town of Pâṭaliputra[2] was the drum beaten by me[3]; afterwards in the Mâḷava, Sindhu and Ṭhakka[4] country, and in the far off city of Kâñchî[5]; arrived at Karahâṭaka[6],—strong in warriors, great in learning, small in extent,—I roam about, O king, like a tiger in sport (sârdûla-vikrîḍita, i. e. unopposed.)[7]

"Even the tongue,—clear, quick and voluble—of Dhûrjjaṭi (S'iva) turns back hastily into its cavity, the speaker Samanta-bhadra being in thy assembly : what manner of court is this, O king?"

Of Vakragrîva muni, can even the thousand-throated Ahîndra (Âdisêsha) praise as it is the force of his eloquence in breaking down the group of opponent speakers : who, favoured by the S'âsana dêvatâ, having caused the opponent speakers to bend their necks with shame, in six months delivered (or ? wrote) the Nava-śabda-vâchya.

[8] The only reference I have met with relating to such a feat is in the inscriptions of the Ganga kings, which uniformly describe the first king, Kongunivarmma, as having gained great fame by cutting through a stone pillar with a single stroke of his sword.

[9] Samantabhadra is said to have written a Chintâmani-ṭippaṇi, or commentary on the Chintâmani, and Abhinava Manga Râja is said to have written a Chintâmani pratipada, or word for word translation of it. (See Intro to Karṇâṭaka-Bhâshâ Bhûshanam, pp. 12, 27) These are the only instances in which I have met with the name in Kannaḍa literature There is also a Chintâmani which is a commentary on the grammar of S'âkaṭâyana But in Tamil there is a Chintâmani of which Dr. Caldwell says (Gram Drav Lang. Intro, p 132) it is "a brilliant romantic epic, containing 15,000 lines, and the most celebrated Tamil poem written by an avowedly Jaina author. Partly from its Jaina origin, partly from the difficulty of its style, it is little known." He also adds, " the name of the author is unknown... ...It would be a remarkable circumstance if it were capable of being clearly proved that the Chintâmani, which is without doubt the greatest epic poem in the Tamil language, is also the oldest Tamil composition of any extent now extant."

[10] The only mention I have met with of this unknown poem is in Bhaṭṭakalanka Dêva's Karnâṭaka-S'abdânuśâsanam, where he names it as if the first poem in the language and describes it as being a commentary on the Tattvârtha mahâśâstra, containing 96,000 verses His words are—na chaisha (Karṇâṭaka) Bhâshâ śâstânupayôginî | Tattvârtha-mahâśâstra-vyâkhyânasya shaṇ-navati-sahasra-pramita-grantha-sandarbha-rûpasya Chûḍâmany-abhidhânasya mahâśâstrasyânyeshâm cha śabdâgama-yuktyâgama-paramâgama-vishayâṇâm tathâ kâvya-nâṭakâlankâra kalâśâstra-vishayâṇâm cha bahûnâm granthânâm api Bhâshâ kṛitânâm upalabhyamânatvât |— ' Nor is it (Karṇâṭaka) a language that can boast of no literature. For in it was written the great work called Chûḍâmaṇi, containing 96,000 verses, a commentary on the Tattvârtha-mahâśâstra (perhaps the Tattvârtha sûtras of Umâsvâti) ; also works on s'abdâgama, yuktyâgama and paramâgama ; as well as numberless books of poetry, the drama, rhetoric and the fine arts.'

[1] Daṇḍi or Daṇḍin, the author of the Das'a kumâra-charita and of Kâvyâdars'a, lived in the sixth century A.D. (Weber's Hist. Ind. Lit. 212, 232.)

with him, who bearing unbroken wisdom (not a half moon), the celestial Ganges of whose fame shone on the heads of the regents of the eight quarters (not like the Ganges flowing in only one direction), this Mahêśvara muni, by whom will he not be praised ?

He who overcame in seventy great discussions which had been otherwise settled, reverenced in the assembly of Brahma, that Mahêśvara muni is worthy of reverence.

He by whom Târâ, secretly (or obscurely) born in the earthen pot (ghaṭa kuṭi), was vanquished together with the Bauddhas ; troubler of the false professors ; doing reverence only to the gods ; he who forced Sugata as penance for his faults to perform ablution with the pollen of his lotus feet ;—such was Dêvâkalaṅka paṇḍita, to whom is he not a refuge ?

Whose incomparable learning is heard in his own description (of himself) as follows :—

"O king Sâhasatuṅga,[2] kings who bear a white canopy there are many, but to find any equal to you as a victor in war and as a liberal donor is impossible : so learned men there are, but no poets, masters of learning, eloquent speakers, experts from researches into many various sciences, in the Kali age like me.

East face.

"As you, O king, are distinguished for putting down the boasting of all your enemies, so am I famed in this world for subduing the pride of all the pandits : if not, here I am, there are many great men in your assembly, whoso has ability to discuss with me, having acquainted himself with all science, let him speak.

"Not with the desire of gratifying pride, nor through enmity, but through my pity for the people being led astray by the teaching that there was no Spirit (or God), did I, O king, in the court of Himaśitala overcome all the learned proud Bauddhas and spurn Sugata with my feet."[3]

Great was the rank of Pushpasêna muni, who, O dêva (i. e. Akalaṅka), was a colleague (sadharmma) of your honour (bhavân) ; was he not even as a delightful residence for fortune, a sun who among the flowers was a friend to the lotus ?

Vimalachandra munîndra guru, recognizing his feet as having dispersed the pride of hostile disputants, should not his directions be followed by pandits ?

That is to say, he whose is the (? following) ślôka beginning with "patra", which was a grief (śôka) to the mind of opponent speakers.

"This leaf (or writing) did he fix on the big door of his house—terrible to enemies—where were ever passing many different kings, groups of fine elephants and troops of horses—describing the S'aivas, Pâśupatas, the sons of Tâthâgata(Bauddhas), Kâpâlikas and Kâpilas : thus with an eager mind did the Digambara Vimalachandra out of respect."

Ye who are in fear of being brought within the grip of sin, serve, ye blessed ones, the holy muni Indranandi, worshipped by great kings.

Understanding (how to meet) the striving disputants in numberless assemblies, eloquent among the learned, was Paravâdi-malla dêva, a dêva without doubt.

By whom the following explanation of his own name was given in an audience with Krishna Râja.[4]

[2] I have not been able to identify this king.

[3] Wilson, in his Introduction to the Mackenzie Collection, has the following :—"The Bauddhas are said to have come from Benares in the third century of the Christian era and to have settled about Kanchi, where they flourished for some centuries ; at last, in the eighth century, Akalaṅka, a Jain teacher from Sravana Belligola, and who had been partly educated in the Bauddha College at Ponataga (near Trivatur), disputed with them in the presence of the last Bauddha prince, Hemasitala, and having confuted them, the Prince became a Jain and the Bauddhas were banished to Kandy."

[4] Doubtless one of the Rashtrakuta or Ratta kings, several of whom bore this name.

"The opposite (or antithesis) of a proposition (or thesis) advanced is para; those who argue for it are paravâdis; the refuter of such is paravâdi-malla; and that name is my name say the learned."

Worthy among the worthy, the yati Âryya Dêva, ? founder of the siddhânta, place ye on your heads;—who devoting himself (to a vow) to forsake the body for the journey to the happy region of svarga, passed out of the body.

(Even) when they tickled his ears with grass, in order to test his penance, and he was roused out of sound sleep, he carefully fanned his ears with the peacock's tail, and gently turning over so as to allow a way for the (fancied) insect, went to sleep (again) did he not?

He who,—even as with wisdom keen as a blade of grass the faith was built up with great glory by the gaṇadharas,—with a small portion of the scripture covered the earth out of kindness to disciples having but little knowledge in this age; the good speaker Chandrakîrtti, head of the gaṇa, equal to the moon in glory, him, O learned, do ye praise with your voices.

He by obeisance to whom the terrible bond of action (karma) is released, he whose body was in subjection; him, named Karmma-prakṛiti bhaṭṭâraka, who had seen the utmost bounds of science, let us revere.

He who had himself acquired all learning, who also was honoured with the name traividya—S'rîpâla Dêva, skilful in expounding the tatva, him let the good uphold.

S'rî Matisâgara guru made the whole world a holy tîrtha, by his glory dispersing the darkness of ignorance, of a worthy mind, increaser of fortune, promoter of the shining jewels (? the three jewels), his favour an ornament on the heads of the kings of the earth.

Unruffled by accusers, of a form like the placid beautiful moon, and a place of fortune, having attained the wealth of learning and the path of victory, a man of purity—such was the mahâ muni Hêmasêna.

Whose verse (as follows), pledging himself in the king's assembly, caused the world of opponent speakers to take refuge in the inaccessible mountain—the fear they had of being thrown to earth.

"In logic and grammar having taken great pains, being also well trained and raised above men of mediocrity, the proposition stated by me before the king whosoever replies to, the argument of so learned a man will I without fail break down:—such, O king, understand, is the Haimasêna creed."

He by whom the desired form of siddhi was with worthy words ensured to friendly men, that Dayâpâla muni, who by his greatness was ever present on the heads of good men, do ye with words revere.

He to whom S'rî Matisâgara was the guru, that creator of moon-like fame; he to whom the worshipful Vâdirâja, head of the gaṇa, was a fellow student (sa-brahmachâri);—that Dayâpâla vrati was the only fortunate one, in whose mind was the desire to impart to others a portion of his own form.

His doctrine a lamp to the world . . . . that which had been revealed only by Jina:—thus did Vâdirâja shine.

The canopy of whose fame, touching the sky, mingled with the rays of the moon,—his speech as pleasing in the ears as the fanning of a châmara; worthy to be served; possessing the greatness of a lion throne; of great glory bestowing victory over all the opponent speakers:—such is the learned Vâdirâja.

Regarding whose qualities there is the following saying of the poets :—

"In the victorious camp (or ? capital) of the Chálukya emperor—a birthplace for the Speech-goddess—does the ? Nishâṇḍa drum (diṇḍima) of the victorious Vâdirâja wander about with its pleasant sound : proud speaker, yield ; learned man, give up your pride ; man eager to dispute, shut up ; poet of sweet sounding verses, be silent.

"In Pâtâḷa stops Vyâḷa Râja (Âdisêsha) famed for his thousand tongues ; unable to come out of svarga is Dhishaṇa (Bṛihaspati) whose disciple is Vajrabhṛit (Indra) ; by the fortune of their places they continue to live : of other speakers who are there that have not given up their pride and done obeisance in the royal assembly to the victorious Vâdirâja ?"

"The Speech-goddess, full of all embracing affection, does Vâdirâja bring to my side : oh, oh, look, look, is this right for a yati ?" such are the holy words of Purâtana muni, may they protect you.

The moons of the nails of his feet illuminated as with the hues of evening from the jewels in the crown of the Gaṅga king, was he whose name was first the word S'ri, followed by the famous Vijaya ; learned, of superhuman qualities, of a glory dispersing ignorance.

Praised also has he been (as follows) by the great Vâdirâja Dêva :—

"Both the learning and the penance gained by long practice which were formerly in Hêmasêna muni, passed in full to S'rivijaya who occupied his throne : if not, how did he so soon combine them ?"

The increase of learning he had, yet had not pride ; penance he had, yet had not cruelty ; wealth he had, yet had not arrogance : by dependence on whom Kamalabhadra munîsvara obtained fame in this world for qualities which are the destruction of sin.

Him, by only thinking on whom my mind becomes a tîrtha for the good, that pure lake Kamalabhadra (or, of auspicious lotuses) do I serve for my own purity.

The highly fortunate one whom the learned Bhâratî (Sarasvatî) had embraced with every part of her body, glorious with clustres of ornaments the jewels good qualities, head of the yôgis, that great sûri adorned with the name of Dayâpâla, on whom moreover the degree of pandit is worthily bestowed, him do ye mighty learned good men praise.

Victorious over the pride of Manmatha, the holy Dayâpâla Dêva prevails, skilled in all science, victor over all disputants, who by his widespread fame filled all the circuit of the points of the compass, his feet reddened with the radiance of the jewels in the crowns of bending kings.

He whose pair of pure lotus feet the Poysaḷa king Vinayâditya having served was brought into the possession of great fortune, the place of implicit commands, that S'ânti Dêva muni's ability who is worthy to describe as this much or that much ; are they not rare, the possessors of such surpassing glory ?

He who from the king of the Pâṇḍya country, who had acquired great fame for learning,[5] received of his own favour the name of Svâmi ; fortunate was that muni, who in the court of king Âhava-malla[6] was famous by the name of S'abda-chaturmmukha.

A jewel to the country around the great place Mullûru, a combination of unequalled qualities, reverenced by the heads of a great crowd of kings, worthy of worship is that Guṇasêna pandit chief from people who desire good, who by the perfume of his teachings attain to a condition free from trouble.

[5] The Pâṇḍya chronology is so uncertain that it is difficult to identify h is learned king.

[6] Probably the Western Châḷukya king Sômês'vara or Trailôkya-malla.

He who is esteemed by those skilled in the syâd vâda learning, another sun to the world, removing by his own glory the darkness of ignorance, him do I with affection worship day by day, he who is served with faith by those who do him reverence, the unclosing lotus of whose minds become by contact with him the abode of surpassing glory.

Give up lying words as an ornament .... repeat the syâd vâda, revere with humility the lion to the elephants opponent speakers, if not you will become terrified by fear at the sound of his victorious qualities and going off quickly fall like the elephants the opponent speakers into the pit of some old ruined well.

His qualities emulating the beautiful waving blossoms, the fame of his speech full of affection like a boat on the ocean of nectar, the nails of his feet glorious as the moon, delightful to the chakôras the group of kings, what praises will not be appropriate to him—Ajitasêna vrati.

His lotus feet surrounded by the crowns decked with jewels placed on the heads of all the bending kings, splitter of the skull the pride of all the great elephants the opponent speakers, the upholder of the gaṇa, Ajitasêna shines a lion to the elephant opponent speakers.

Whose own words testify as follows to the glory of the renunciation of family cares :—

" The holy Jina doctrine, difficult of acquisition by the beings of the three worlds, has been obtained (by you), which resembles a saving hand held out to those who are drowning in the ocean of family, with which glory of all wisdom not desired by others you have become adorned, therefore what trouble have you? why fear ? or what desire here in the body ?

" Of the wondrous form of the eternal instruction what do you now know? fix your minds on the acquisition of that ; give up a thirst for the pleasures of Indra and the delights of Vishṇu ; enough, enough, of such uncertain ends, beyond the sight, known only by report.

" An ignorant man, manifestly corrupting his mind with passion and enmity, may fail in devotion to the Spirit, the form of all wisdom, the ever peaceful ; but how can a wise man for a moment strive for any other end ?"

(West face.)

Of the unlimited learning and qualities of whose two disciples—S'ântinâtha and Padmanâbha, otherwise called respectively Kavitâ-kânta and Vâdi-kôḷâhaḷa—the following is an imperfect description :—

" Putting themselves under thee, great sage, what experts, learned in all wisdom, of worthy qualities, have from a long time gone forth with words filled with all knowledge, O S'ânti, whose fame is ever at the bounds of all the points of the compass ; not (even) the great Sarasvatî can express this, how then can it be stated by us ?

" The elephants the opponent speakers, giving up their growing pride and forgetting their envy and mischief, with humble voices filled with fear, how they run when they scent the infuriated elephant Padmanâbha !"

He by whose assumption of Jaina penance—the cure of cares—both dîksha (renunciation) and śiksha (discipline) are obtained by yatis, that Kumâra-sêna, may he protect us, whose pure character is an example in the path of happiness.

A lion in splitting in two the lusty elephant Smara eager to swallow up the power of the world, his feet adorned by the heads of kings, a form of the twice six qualities (?), a rising sun in devotion to penance, the guru Mallishêṇa Maladhâri Dêva, may he have favour on me.

That Maladhâri munipati do I reverence, of a heart which drives away the elephant ignorance, possessor of the fortune of virtuous penance, even the mire on whose body clears away the dirt of the evil in the minds of the faithful.

Like a wild fire to the forest the birth-place of the lotus the clouds of great darkness, a glory to great penance, the lotus pond of his feet surrounded by the bees the blessed, Mallishêṇa munirât, may he ever dwell in the house of my mind.

Who for the purification of the world covered his body with mire, to enrich all the three worlds became poor, to remove the great trouble (of family cares) .... a mountain of mines for the jewels good qualities—to be reverenced is Mallishêṇa guru, by the example of whose character the earth is made holy.

In whom unequalled patience rejoices, in whom kindness has no limit, whom impartiality loves, whom absence of desire desires, through love loving salvation, though in his own esteem low yet the head of the yôgis, by his character an âchâri—śrî-Mallishêṇa muni—him let us reverence.

He who is worshipped in the world, whom the good ever with affection praise, by whom the bow of Manmatha was subdued, for whom all munis offer reverence, through whom the âgama was established, whose is kindness to life, in which Maladhâri vratipati is merit—him do ye revere.[7]

In the Dhavaḷa-sarasa (Beḷagoḷa) tîrtha, this great sannyâsi, absorbed in perfect penance, with a mind full of joy, quitted his body as if to prevent the birth of Manmatha (who is without a body), receiving the worship of the Mûla (? the Jains or Mûla-saṅgha).

By him, a bee at the divine lotus feet of Ajitasêna paṇḍita dêva, magnanimous, while abandoning his body by means of the sallêkhana famous in the Jainâgama, so that all the saṅgha rejoiced at sight of the nature of his penance, was delivered impromptu this perfect verse, displaying the ripeness of his mind :—

"Having worshipped the three jewels named in the âgama, having lived so that all living creatures have received no injury, and having acquired patience, we leave (this) our body at the feet of Jina and enter svarga."

In the S'aka year reckoned by śûnya, śara, ambara, avani (1050), the year Kîlaka, the month Phâlguṇi, on the 3rd day of the dark fortnight, Sunday, under (the asterism) Svâti (Arcturus), in Svêta-sarôvara (Beḷagoḷa) he departed to the city of the gods, the chief of yatis, at noon, having fasted three days—śrî-Mallishêṇa muni.

(Abstract) :—Praise of the Jina doctrine ; able in promoting the principles of Varddhamâna was Koṇḍakunda, head of the Mûla-saṅgha. In his line, in the Dêsika gaṇa, was born Dêvêndra saiddhânta dêva, reverenced (even) by Dêvêndra.

His disciple was Chaturmmukha dêva : by fasting for eight days at each point of the compass and thus reducing his body, he gained distinction, and when the month had passed, he obtained, amid songs of praise from all the people, the name Chatur-mmukha. He had eighty-four disciples ; among whom Gôpanandi gained a great name in the Vakra-gachcha, and was head of the Dêsiga gaṇa. He accomplished what had been impossible to any one ; for he caused the Jina dharmma, which had for a long time been at a stand-still, to prosper through the wealth of the Gaṅga king (or kings) of that time. He was like an infuriated elephant to the Sâṅkhya, Bhautika, Bauddha, Vaishṇava, and Charvvâka professors.

(South face.)

"While Jaimini bolted, Vaiśêshika turning round fled, Sugata instead of running beat his breast, Akshapâda with affection came near, Lôkâyata attempted to leave, and Sâṅkhya pushed away—Gôpanandi, a lusty elephant like the elephant at the points of the compass, roamed through the paths of the six schools of logic."

His colleague (sa-dharmma), whose feet were worshipped by Bhôja Râja, the king of Dhâra, was Prabhâchandra, disciple of Chaturmmukha dêva. His colleague was Dâmanandi, who overcame the great speaker Vishṇu-bhaṭṭa. His colleague was Maladhâri múni, also called Guṇachandra, worshipper of the feet of S'ântiśa in Balipura. His colleague was Mâghanandi siddhânta dêva, head of the Vakra-gachcha. His colleague—in Jainêndra Pûjyapâda, in all logic Bhaṭṭâkalaṅka, in poetry Bhâravi—was Jinachandra.

His colleague, the Baṅkâpura munîndra, was Dêvêndra. His colleague was Vâsavachandra munîndra, celebrated in the midst of the Châlukya camp (or capital) as Bâla-Sarasvati. His brother and colleague was Yaśaḥkirtti, whose feet were reverenced by the king of Siṃhala (Ceylon.)

His colleague was Trimushṭi munîndra, satisfied with his vowed food of three handfuls (mushṭi traya), disciple of Gôpanandi yati. His colleague was Maladhâri, Hêmachandra, Gaṇḍavimukta, and Gauḷa muni by name, disciple of Gôpanandi yatipati. His colleague, of the Mûla-saṅgha, Dêśi-gaṇa and Vakra-gachcha, was S'ubhakîrtti. His colleague was Mâghanandi, whose son was Mêghachandra, who had a daughter celebrated in the world as Abhayachandrikâ.

His colleague was Kalyâṇa-kîrtti, able in removing the spells of S'âkini and others. His colleague was Bâlachandra muni, head of the Vakra-gachcha.

(So far is in verse : then follows a summary in prose).—(North face.)

In the line of the śri-Mûla-saṅgha, the Dêśi-gaṇa, the Vakra-gachcha and the Koṇḍakundânvaya was Vaḍḍa dêva's (?) disciple Dêvêndra siddhânta dêva ; his disciple was Chaturmmukha dêva, whose name was Vṛishabhanandy-âchâri ; his disciple was Gôpanandi paṇḍita dêva ; his colleagues were Mahêndra-chandra paṇḍita dêva, Dêvêndra siddhânta dêva, S'ubhakîrtti paṇḍita dêva, Mâghanandi siddhânta dêva, Jinachandra paṇḍita dêva, (and) Guṇachandra Maladhâri dêva.

Among them Mâghanandi siddhânta dêva's disciple was Ratnanandi bhaṭṭâraka dêva ; whose colleagues were Kalyâṇakîrtti bhaṭṭâraka dêva, Mêghachandra paṇḍita dêva, (and) Bâlachandra siddhânta dêva.

That Gôpanandi paṇḍita dêva's disciples were S'ubhakîrtti paṇḍita dêva, Vâsavachandra paṇḍita dêva, Chandranandi paṇḍita dêva, Gauḷa dêva whose name was Hêmachandra Maladhâri Gaṇḍavimukta, (and) Trimushṭi dêva.

Born from the ocean of nectar good penance—Mêghachandra traividya (i.e. his disciple)—of a body purified by the (performance of) perfect unfading vows, praised as a joy to the learned, the glory of his fame being spread through the three worlds, he who is freed from all faults, increaser of the ocean of siddhânta, he prevails—the perfect Prabhâchandra.[8]

From (Brahma) the offspring of the lotus navel of Vishṇu sprung Atri; from Atri was born the Moon; whose son was Budha; whose son was Purûrava; from him Âyu; from him Nahusha; from Nahusha Yayâti; from him Yadu: and in the Yadu kula were many.

Celebrated among them was a king of whom it is related that once on a time a certain muni, unmoved (in penance) in a forest, said to him with reference to a fierce tiger poy Sala (strike, Sala!), which words of the muni became his name ....

Thence the lords of Dvârâvatî were (called) Poysalas, and had a tiger crest. Among them in S'aśapura was born the king Vinayâditya.

He, increaser of fortune, having endeared himself to the people of the world, ruled the earth, causing Lakshmî for long to take up her abode in the thousand-leaved lotus his white umbrella, and the Lakshmî of valour to dance in his long arm able in subduing kings, scattering his fame in all directions, having punished kings and obtained great glory.

A brilliant jewel of the Yâdava vaṃśa, a talismanic jewel for kings, a jewel for the neck of Lakshmî, a towering bright jewel on the heads of kings, may he prevail, the jewel mirror to the path of virtue, the only crown-jewel in the world, a jewel of qualities worshipped by his dependants as holy Vishṇu, the perfect diadem jewel.

To the man who asked a tree of plenty, to him who claimed protection a cage of adamant, to others wives Hanumân, to him who opposes him in fight death—is Vinayâditya.

On the heads of the Malepas (hill chiefs) who growing proud oppose him, he lays his sword; on the heads of the Malepas who filled with fear do not grow proud or oppose him, he at once lays his hand—Vinayâditya.

To that Poysala king was born a head-jewel of princes, lord of fortune, by his own arm reducing kings to obedience, the valiant king Ereyaṅga.

Of unparalleled fame, a third Mâruti, a fourth (sacrificial) flame, a fifth ocean, a sixth arrow of flowers, a seventh emperor, an eighth chain of mountains, a ninth regent elephant at the point of the compass, a tenth mine of treasure,—who can compare with Ereyaṅga Dêva.[9]

In the city of his enemies dagad dhagil dandhagil, on the heads of hostile kings garil garigari garil, in the bowels of opposing kings chimil chimichimi chimil—thus do the flames of his anger burn, who can fight without fear against Ereyaṅga Dêva.

That famous king Ere's son, subduer of mighty enemies, lord of all the earth, a Karna to those who beg from him, was the victorious Vishṇu-varddhana.

As soon as ever he was born, the growth of all royal power greatly increased, the destroyer of the might of proud hostile kings, the astounding king Vishṇu-varddhana.

Some he plucked up and shook their roots; of some he cut off the heads in battle; of some he trod on their heads and (then) anointed them—fierce terrible one: those who opposed and grew proud he reduced to servitude and spared, and by the might of his arms freed the kingdom of his power from all troubles—the high mighty Vishṇu, victorious and famous.

[8] All the epithets have a double meaning, one referring to the moon (chandra) and the other to Prabhâ-chandra.

[9] Each of these figures represents one addition to the generally received number.

A discus weapon to the mountains hostile kings was king Vishṇu: on his (merely) roaring and slightly wounding them, they turn and flee, rushing about with fear, saying "there he comes! here he comes!" All the world thus displaying his form to the eyes of kings, all the world was as if pervaded by Vishṇu (Vishṇu maya)—what a phenomenon was this?

Be it well.—While, entitled to the five great drums, the mahâ-maṇḍalesvara, lord of the good city of Dvârâvatî, sun in the sky of the Yâdava kula, a perfect head-jewel, champion over the Malepas,—adorned with these and many other titles.—Moreover having captured without trouble Chakragoṭṭi, Taḷakâḍu, Nîlagiri, Kongu, Nangali, Kôḷâla, Tereyûru, Koyatûru, Kongali, Uchchangi, Taleyûru, Pomburchcha, Vantâsura-chauka, Baleyapaṭṭaṇa,—these and many other fortresses of the three kinds,—and having with great glory made the Gangavâḍi Ninety-six Thousand obedient to his word, he was ruling the kingdom in peace—(and) the auspicious mahâ-maṇḍalesvara, Tribhuvana-Malla, capturer of Talakâḍu, the mighty armed Vîra-Ganga Vishṇu-varddhana Poysaḷa Dêva's victorious kingdom was continually increasing, to endure as long as sun, moon and stars:—

Beloved to the heart and eyes of the famous king Vishṇu, with shining dark locks like moving bees, her face a moon, like Rati to Kâma—behold her perfect likeness—S'ântala Dêvi.

Resembling Mâchikabbe, the beloved to the heart and eyes of the incomparable Mârasinga, she gained unequalled fame, their elder daughter, the peerless favourite of the heart of Vishṇu-varddhana—who can describe her, unrivalled as Lakshmî, such was the esteemed S'ântala Dêvi's growth of fortune.

In war to king Vishṇu as a Lakshmî of victory, on his breast ever with supreme joy resting devoted, a great promoter of his glory, like a Lakshmî of fame beckoning to the walls of the points of the compass,—whoso in this world can fitly describe S'ântala Dêvî, let him describe her.

S'ântala Dêvi's qualities, S'ântala Dêvi's great liberality, S'ântala Dêvi's immeasurable virtues, made her the sole wishing-jewel of the world.

Be it well.—Sharer in a hundred thousand pleasures sprung from continual supreme good fortune, like a second Lakshmî, skilled in all learning, a new Rukmiṇî Dêvî, a Satyabhâmâ in love to her husband, a Bṛihaspatî in intelligence, an accomplished Vâchaspatî, gentle to munis and dependants, a celebrated Sîtâ in devotion to her husband, a jewel to all her friends, a perfect head-jewel, a rutting elephant to co-wives, the cause of prosperity to the four classes, a banner of victory for the god of love, a lamp to her own family, perfect in song, music and dancing, a supporter of the Jina faith, delighting in gifts of food, shelter, medicine and learning,—Vishṇu-varddhana Poysaḷa Dêva's chief queen and crowned consort S'ântala Dêvi—in the S'aka year 1045, the year S'ôbhakrit, the 1st of the bright fortnight of Chaitra, Thursday, caused to be erected in Srî-Beḷgoḷa-tîrtha the Savati Gandha-vâraṇa Jina temple: and having performed divine worship, to provide for gifts of food to the assembly of rishis, presented Maṭṭa Navile in Kalkaṇi nâḍ, free of all imposts, having washed the feet of her guru Prabhâchandra siddhânta dêva, disciple of Mêghachandra traividya dêva, of the Srî-Mûla-sangha, Dêsi-gaṇa, and Pustaka-gachcha.

To the man who with affection maintains this will accrue long life and great fortune. To the sinner who destroys instead of maintaining it will attach the guilt of slaying in Kurukshêtra and Bâraṇâsi seven crores of munis learned in the vêdas, and cows. In assurance of which is this in perpetuity engraved on stone.

Whoso seizes a gift made by himself or by another shall be born a worm in ordure for sixty thousand years.

Having constructed the Yeḍasana kaṭṭe as a tank, the queen presented it to the Savati Gandha-vâraṇa basadi.

The chief queen and crowned consort S'ântala Dêvi, having obtained permission from Vishṇu-varddhana Poysala Dêva presented to the Savati Gandha-vâraṇa basadi which she had made, a garden of 50 koḷagas of paddy-land in the central plain below Gaṅgasamudra, free of all imposts, with pouring of water and washing the feet of Prabhâchandra siddhânta dêva.

Whoso destroys this is guilty of the great crime of slaying eighteen crores of cows on the banks of the Ganges.

Great good fortune.

Sahasra-kirtti dêva, disciple of Prabhâchandra siddhânta dêva, had 313 brass vessels made, and presented them to S'ântala Dêvi's basadi.

Great good fortune.

(North face.)

The upright round trees mankind, in the middle of the forest of family (cares), does Yama the carpenter select and cut down.

The son's son of the illustrious Krishṇa Râjêndra[10], adorned with virtue and purity, the son of Gauga Gâṅgêya's daughter, the abode of the Lakshmî of victory, the son-in-law of Râja Chûḍâmaṇi [1],—what glory was this, say : thus described in full by the whole world, greatly celebrated was śrî Raṭṭa Kandarppa Dêva.

A terror to hostile kings, able in destroying with his sword the kings who came against him, great in valour, causing destruction to the allies of kings who were his enemies, devoted to victory in war, a fire in consuming the hostile kings—was the might of the arms of śrî-Râja-mârttâṇḍa.

There are who can destroy the enemy but have no generosity, or who are generous but cannot subdue their foes ; but that he possessed both valour and generosity, that he could without fear attack the enemy and at the same time display the highest generosity, all were agreed : who is able to describe the courage and magnanimity of śrî-Râja-mârttâṇḍa?

Resolved to be himself the abode of unblemished glory, resolved to take out (treasure) from the hole and give it away, resolved not to lie, resolved not to desire the wives of others, resolved to shelter those who took refuge with him, resolved to subdue the pride of the enemy's forces by attacking and destroying them, resolved to govern—such was Chalad-aṅkakârana.

That he was more liberal in gifts than the tree of plenty—thus did the world praise him ; his word firmer than mount Mêru, his valour fiercer than the rays of the sun—the nature of his genuine courage was so great who can describe it—the Chalad-aṅkakârana.

[1] No doubt the Raṭṭa or a Râshṭrakûṭa king of that name, also styled Kannara, Nirupama and Akâlavarsha. There are inscriptions of his reign dating from 945 to 956 A.D. In 947 he was ruling at Mânyakhêṭa. (See Fleet's Kan. Dys. 87.)

[1] See No. 59.

(East face.)

A tree of plenty to the destitute, a lion in splitting the temples of the elephants the hostile kings, a garland between the breasts of lovely women, a swan to the lake the minds of great poets—thus does all the world praise Indra Râja.

Given to lying, borrowing and hesitating to return, desiring the wives of others, caring only for themselves, skilled only in pretending friendship and deceiving—such being the present race of kings, how can he be brought into comparison with them—Indra Râja?

All the kings bowing before him—their faces were reflected like the lotuses, their eyes like the waterlilies, their curly front locks like the bees, in the lake the brilliant toe-nails of the feet of this Yama to his foes.

Never to utter a falsehood no matter what troubles ensued—how wonderful was this, the greatness of his courage, magnanimity and confidence—the Chalad-aggaḷe.

From its brilliance as of the autumn moon, from its diffusion through all matter, from the praises of the people of the world—glorious as if the form of Îsvara himself, was the fame of Kirtti-Nârâyaṇa.

Themselves bragging of their courage, filled with pride, swaying hither and thither, if asked for charity grinding their teeth, proclaiming themselves to be the object of worship to all, desiring the wives of others according to their own inclination, their speech filled with falsehood—thus are the sham braves of the Kali age: are such braves to be compared with this brave among the braves?

To fortune, to victory, to learning, to generosity, to valour, to glory, to greatness—to all of these an abode; thus praised in renowned works (or poems), was he not—the mighty among braves (bîrara ballam.)[2]

[The verses have a double meaning, one referring to war and the other to penance.] Indra Râja, alone (or unaided), subdued the hosts of his enemies who had formed themselves into a chakra-vyûham (see v. 8 of this face) or a formation resembling a cart-wheel, (otherwise, he overcame the temptations of the senses)—was there any equal to him in the world?

There are two branches of fighting—defence (ota-sâdhaka), including 9 cuts, which, made to the right and left hands, come to 18; and attack (hora-sâdhaka). The chakra-vyûha can be attacked on the 4 sides and above; these 5 cuts, made with the 32 kinds of weapons, give 160; which again made to the right and left hands, come to 320. These 338 kinds of blows or cuts did he deliver, varying them in a crore of ways. (Otherwise, temptations arise internally from the mind and externally from the 5 senses; these, according to the modes in which they present themselves, and according to whether they act rapidly or slowly &c., may be shown to give 336 varieties, which he similarly overcame in a crore of ways)—this miracle of generosity.

In this manner attacking the chakra-vyûha like a chakra-bearer by going round it, leaping on it, penetrating it here and there, he was unequalled in receiving no injury; and having overcome every danger on the hill, he came down, when Girige who was there descended also, fearing that her end had come. (Otherwise, in performing sallêkhana on the hill he withstood all distractions)—this Raṭṭa Cupid.

[2] Of the verses which follow, down to the last but one on the west face, though they have been submitted to the best Kannada scholars in Mysore, Bangalore and other places, neither the metre nor any connected sense has been satisfactorily made out. But a Jaina pandit has furnished a version, which has been adopted in separating the words in the Roman character, and is given for what it is worth.

The people in the world knew not his power, for when Girige having fallen in love with him and he was attracted to her, on finding she was the wife of Kallâra (see v. 2, west face) he repelled her, and defeated the conspirators who in consequence fell upon him. (Otherwise, he showed himself proof against the wiles of women)—this Kirtti Nârâyaṇa.

Of what use to unite with Girige for this day? the loss of four friends[3] would be a small thing, but going after others' wives is one of the seven deadly sorrows; it would disable me to fight the chakra-vyûhaṃ: greater than the enemies on the hill are the enemies on the hill-slope, and still greater than those are the enemies below the hill—thus thinking, he was not one to leave unsubdued the 18 countries—this Indra Râja.

When, still not losing courage, she, displaying her charms, drew near to him in such guise that all people were spell-bound in the snare of her beauty, he gave one glance to bring her into his power.

And ruling over many lands subject to Girige and to himself above and below the ghats, he without effort escaped the net of the chakra-vyûhaṃ and gained great fame for his purity in all the world (having brought her, the wife of another, into his power without falling into sin)—this miracle of generosity.

(West face.)

Eraga his cousin (jñâti), seeing her youth and beauty, and the endeavours she made to gain the affection of Indra Râja which were in so many ways rejected, burned with passion for her.

But although he fell at her feet and she spoke to him kindly, Indra Râja, knowing his mind, deadened his desires.

The holy Gommaṭa Jina,—worshipped by men, nâgas, gods, demons and celestials ; destroyer of Smara by the fire of his penance ; worthy of praise from yôgis ; the immeasurable,—will I praise.

So that his body might not (suddenly) wither and dry up, he was gradually forsaking speech ; but the realm which he possessed becoming inglorious, he was seized with shame, and giving up his kingdom to his elder brother, he went forth and by his penance destroyed the enemy karma,—the great son of Puru, Bâhubali : was there any equal to him in honour ?

An image 525 bows in height, in the form of the victorious Bâhubali Kêvali, did Bharata, the son of Puru Dêva, with joy of mind, surrounded by all the kings he had conquered, have made near to Pôdana-pura.

After a long time had elapsed, a world-terrifying mass of innumerable kukkuṭa-sarpa[2] having sprung up in the region around that Jina, the image obtained the name of Kukkuṭêśvara. Afterwards it became invisible to the common people and was seen only by those skilled in spells and charms (mantra tantra) and a few others.

There might be heard the sound of the heavenly drums, what words can describe it?—there might be seen the gods assembling for worship; those who attentively gazed into the mirror of splendour in the nails growing from his feet might see the exact forms of their former births; thus the great glory of that god was heard throughout all the world.

Hearing from people the glory of that Jina, a desire arose in his mind to go and see it, but he was informed by the wise that the site of that city was very far and inaccessible: whereupon, saying 'I will make an image of that god,' he had this god Gommaṭa made.

Combining in himself wisdom, religion, glory, high character and valour, the moon of the Gaṅga kula, was Râcha Malla, famed in all the world. That king's second in glory (his minister) Châmuṇḍa Râya, equal to Manu, was it not he that had this Gommaṭa made by his own effort?

An image may be very lofty and yet have no beauty; or it may be lofty and of real beauty, but have no dignity: but height, true beauty and exceeding dignity being all united in him, how highly is he worthy of worship in the world, Gommaṭêśvara, the very form of Jina himself.

Should Maya address himself to drawing a likeness, the chief of Nâka-lôka (Indra) to look on it or the lord of serpents (Âdiśêsha) to praise it, is unequal: this being so, who else are able to draw the likeness, to look fully upon or praise the unequalled form of the southern Kukkuṭêśa with its wondrous beauty.

The flocks of birds, unable even in forgetfulness to fly over it, on issuing from under its two armpits, shine with the golden-red of Kâsmîra, which double wonder the people of the three worlds have noticed: who can rightly praise Gommaṭêśvara-Jina's holy form?

His foundation that nâga-lôka, his base the earth, the points of the compass his walls, the sky his roof, the cars of the gods above its pinnacles, and the glorious constellations its jewelled points,—the abode of the holy Gommaṭêśa was like the three worlds ascribed to Jina.

Of unequalled beauty, superior to Manmatha, victor over kings, of great bounty, having subdued the whole world he gave it away: of great kindness, engaged in penance, his two feet given to the earth, possessed of perfect wisdom, freed from the bonds of action, how great is Bâhubalîśa.

Unchanging friendship may he grant to us, who is of superlative glory; good fortune, he who is the destroyer of Manmatha's power and of the pride of emperors, Bâhubali: freedom from desire, the experience of the kingdom of penance, final beatitude, the possession of eternal happiness (may he grant us) the holy Gommaṭa Jina.

While in glittering white glory and all pervading purity he fills all points of the compass, the gods shower upon the divine head of Gommaṭêśvara, chief of gods, the blossoms of the nameru (Alexandrian laurel): this has all the world seen,—such honour to such a god is it any wonder?

'I saw it'—'I was not able'—'did you see it? say'—thus (talking) have women, children, old men and cowherds witnessed it: and from love of it, coming every day as long as they can, ever do they behold the gods showering the flowers upon the lofty head of Gommaṭa Jina, filling their eyes with the glorious sight.

As though the shining stars were worshipping at the feet of this supreme lord with faith, so did the bright stream of flowers fall upon the earth and, filling with joy the open eyes, rest at the lotus feet of Gommaṭa-nâtha of Beḷgoḷa.

As at the time when wrestling with the primeval emperor Bharata, he overcame him,—and at the time when bursting the all powerful bond of sin, he obtained the knowledge of a Kêvali,—the crowd of gods made a rain of flowers, thus did the rain of flowers descend in beauty on the lord Bâhubalîśa.

Why this affection for the various dying chiefs of the country, saying like fools these are our gods? and why, man, forsaking sense, do you weary to embrace them? In the forest of family troubles think on Gommaṭa Dêva in the form of supreme Spirit and be rid of the sorrow of birth and old age.

That murder, lying, theft, adultery, covetousness, if permitted, are ruin to men here and hereafter,—this as if proclaiming does Gommaṭa Dêva stand on high, behold (him).

Us, this spring season, the moon, Manmatha's arrows,—reducing all these to have none effect and casting them away, applying thyself to penance, what greater state wilt thou attain? We are become insensible Gommaṭa Dêva, from not obtaining thine ear,—who so cruel as thou art?

Why is this thou hast forsaken us?—as if thus saying, the earth and women had come with weeping and tightly embraced him, so do the nests of the white ants on his body and the tangled pushing pressing creepers show how he has brought his body under command, Gommaṭa Dêva, revered by Âdiśêsha, Indra and great munis.

'Younger brother, all my brothers have gone to penance; if you too go to this penance, I care not for this wealth: go not'. Heeding not thine elder brother who spoke thus, thou didst take dikshe, Gommaṭa Dêva; who is equal to thee in sacrifice, Gommaṭa?

'Say not thy feet are in my land, the land it is both thine and mine, it cannot be divided: the highest merit is the power of imparting knowledge, thus is it said in the divine word';—from thy elder brother's thus saying hast thou cast away the desire of self-glory, Gommaṭa Dêva.

'Younger brother, those ascetics who by the growth of an evil mode of penance attach their bodies to union with women (in family ties) truly create but an enemy to all excellence in themselves and in others; but a cause of unfading happiness to thyself and to others, Gommaṭa Dêva, is thy penance, which results in the power of instructing.

Thou having fixed thy mind unshaken on the indwelling spirit, love and all the desires of sense have fled away, the happiness of perfect spiritual knowledge increases, and by the complete destruction of sin thou hast attained the state of final beatitude, Gommaṭa Dêva, and unending happiness.'

Those who worship thy lotus feet with sweet-smelling wild flowers, and looking on thy form circumambulate it, and as much as they are able give their minds to thy praise, how fortunate are they: how happy then must those be who like Indra knowing thee are ever worshipping thee, Gommaṭa Dêva.

Though Manmatha had formerly obtained in him the mastery of the empire of desire, and he was connected with the empire of the world—the discus weapon, resembling the sun, discharged from the hand of Bharata having struck on his powerful long arm, he forsook all, and for the sake of gaining the happiness of the empire of mukti, he took dikshe, Bâhubali: how do the worthy abandon all, saying what is it?

Thinking I will be rid of however many sins I have formerly committed in thought, word and body; filled with this intention, did he thus praise Gommaṭa Jina—Sujanôttamsam. From the good (su-jana) being ever his honoured ones, and from his surpassing (uttamsa) wisdom, was Boppa known as Sujanôttamsam: think not it was because he was 'chief among the good'.

This inscription in Jina's praise, this Jina śâsana, did the victor by his wisdom over his sins, the praised by the assembly of good poets, the greatly celebrated Sujanôttamsam, create.

The eminent saiddhântika emperor Nayakîrti vratîndra's disciple was, the skilled in self-knowledge, the proficient in divine knowledge, the widely famed Bâlachandra munîndra.

By direction of that muni—

Beppaṇa Paṇḍita, known as "a polish to the Kannaḍa poets" (Kannaḍa-gavi-bappa), approving of (the proposal to compose) the śâsana praising the qualities of Gommaṭa Jinêndra, lord of the earth, and having finished it; by Kavaḍamayya Dêva's order, Bâgaḍage Rudra with affection caused it to be engraved and erected.

May the honourable supreme profound syâd-vâda, a token of unfailing success, the doctrine of the lord of the three worlds, the Jina doctrine, prevail.

Prosperity to the Jina doctrine, powerful against opposition, splitting open the head of the infuriated elephant opponent speakers, able in bestowing fortune.

To the lord of the three worlds obeisance, the destroyer of birth, by the rays of his speech which establishes the truth overpowering the darkness of ignorance,—S'ânti. Obeisance to Jina.

Be it well. While the mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, entitled to the five big drums, lord of the good city of Dvârâvati, sun in the sky of the Yâdava race, head-jewel of goodness, champion among the Malapas, adorned with these and many other titles, the auspicious mahâ-maṇḍalêśvara, Tribhuvana-Malla, capturer of Taḷakâḍu, the strong-armed Vîra-Gaṅga Vishṇu-Varddhana Hoysaḷa Dêva's victorious kingdom was increasing and extending to endure as long as sun, moon and stars :—

The dweller at his lotus-feet :—

A protector of the people, generous, keeping far from others' wives, a garland between the breasts of Sarasvati, brave in fierce war—Mâra, what (more) can you say? being his father; Mâchakabbe, devoted to works of merit, applauded by the wise, of noble character, his mother; how fortunate was Êcham.

A terror to evil, a friend of the learned, purifier of the Brahman race, was Êcham, honoured in the world, a spade to the roots of the race of his enemies, of the Kauṇḍinya gôtra, of pure character.

In conduct like Manu, in Êchiga's house were ever groups of munis and of the learned, Jina worship, Jina reverence, the stories of Jina glory.

As if all the highest qualities had embodied themselves in the form of a woman, thus did all the world raise their hands to the clustre of good qualities in the world, Pôchikabbe, such merit had she gained.

The son of Êchi Râja and Pôchikabbe thus esteemed, possessed of perfect wisdom from listening till his hair stood up with pleasure to the best histories of all the tîrthakaras and of the supreme deity; his sword eager in breaking down the pride of hostile kings the most devoted to indulging in the spirit of unequalled war; bestower of gifts of food, shelter, medicine, and learning; remover of the sorrows of all the world.

As the thunderbolt to the bearer of the thunderbolt (Indra), as the plough to the plough-bearer (Balarâma), as the discus to the discus-bearer (Vishṇu), as the śakti to the śakti-bearer (Kumâra-svâmi), as the bow Gâṇḍîva to the owner of Gâṇḍîva (Arjuna)—thus was he in transacting the affairs of king Vishṇu: how by such as us can Gaṅga, glorious as the shining waves of the Ganges, be praised?

Thus esteemed, the great minister and daṇḍanâyaka, a hand-mill for (grinding) the evil, Gaṅga Râja—when Chôḷa's feudatory Adiyama, being with an army in the camp of Talakâḍu, the frontier (gaḍi) of Gaṅgavâḍi nâḍ above the Ghâts, refused to surrender the country which Chôḷa had given him, saying 'Fight and take it (if you can)'—filled with the desire of victory, caused the two armies to approach one another.

In this part of the country why should the praise of your valour be (left) to others, Gaṅga champa? When, eager for victory, the point of the sharp sword upraised in your hand was lifting the belt at his back, he fled—Dâman, and ran in the direction of Kañchi, as if he would reach it, did he not?

His body unable in battle to stop the path of your sword, slipped away, still thinking and thinking upon it, Gaṅga. While the breasts of the women who had trusted him shrunk up with fright, he took refuge night and day in the forest, more frightened than the frightened deer, the Tiguḷa Dâman.

Having put to flight many in battles with such valour that all exclaimed O! there still remained in Taḷakâḍu, dreading the blows of the sword of Gaṅga Râja, turning his back on the fight, carrying some food that a dog would not eat in a basket, (disguised) like a S'aiva ascetic, the feudatory Dâmôdara.

Him, approaching alone and on foot, taunting and showing up his cowardice, he made to flee. Moreover, having put to flight Narasiṅga-Varmma and all the other feudatories of Chôḷa above the Ghâts, and brought all that had become nâḍs under the dominion of one umbrella, king Vishṇu was highly delighted, and said 'Ask (what you will).'

Not (taking advantage and) thinking like these and those (or ordinary people) 'the king will give me (whatever I ask),' without asking for any other thing, the earnest worshipper of Jina, in a way that all the world applauded, begged for Gôvindavâḍi.[3]

As if the assembly of munis had whispered 'Gommaṭa,' being glad at heart and his joy increasing, he willingly gave it for Gommaṭa Dêva's worship, did he not, the brave and generous one.

First in the Ârhata-samaya was the Mûla-saṅgha Koṇḍakundânvaya, which increased in reputation in regular descent. In it, of the Dêsiga-gaṇa and Pustaka-gachcha, famed for his teaching, was Kukkuṭâsana Maladhâri Dêva ; whose disciple, from a long time greatly celebrated, was S'ubhachandra siddhânta dêva ; whose follower was Gaṅga chamûpati.

The bastis of Gaṅgavâḍi, however many there were, he had renewed ; for Gommaṭa Dêva of Gaṅgavâḍi he had the cloisters around made ; putting to flight the Tiguḷas of Gaṅgavâḍi he caused Vîra Gaṅga to stand erect—Gaṅga Râja, a hundred times more fortunate than that former king of the Gaṅgas.

By dharmma does the world stand fast, it subdues all enemies ; by it do all acquire the highest qualities.

A moon in raising the tide of the Jaina doctrine, a hidden treasure of poetry and learning, a lion to the head of the elephant the gliding Manmatha, he, son of Guṇachandra Dêva, the birth-place of goodness, may he stand, Nayakîrtti-Dêva-munipa, the siddhânta chief emperor.

When coming on his victorious march, king Narasiṃha on seeing him, made a gift for the Jinas Gommaṭa and Pârisvanâtha and for the abode of these twenty-four images with joy of mind, the unequalled chief presenting Savanêra Bekka[4] and Kaggere for as long as the ages shall last—

Narasiṃha as a Himâdri caused to flow from the deep cavern of the uplifted kalaśa, the hand of Hulla, a Ganges stream which ran to the middle of the lake the feet of Nayakîrtti muniśa.

As Manmatha, the foremost in female pleasure, was born to Vishṇu and to his beautiful wife S'rî,—so to king Narasiṃha and his wife Êchala Dêvî, was born, of a character to increase the merit of others, a destroyer of the race of powerful enemies, the victorious-armed Ballâḷa bhûpâlaka.

Laying seige to Uchchaṅgi[5] , for a long time considered impregnable by kings, the mine of great glory plundered and took its king Kâma Dêva, the king Sanda Vaḍeya, his treasury and women, the troops of horses, he seized them all—Ballâḷa bhûpâlaka.

Be it well. The follower of Nayakîrtti siddhânta chakravartti, the great minister for all affairs and senior treasurer, Hullayya, begging them at the hands of the mighty emperor Vîra Ballâḷa Dêva, for the eight kinds of worship of Gommaṭa Dêva, Pârisva Dêva and the twenty-four tîrthakaras, and for the gift of food to the ṛishis,— presented Savaṇêra Bekka and Kaggere.

A moon to the ocean of paramâgama, disciple of the siddhânta emperor Nayakîrtti yamîsvara, celebrated for the purity of his disposition, was Adhyâtmi Bâlachandra munîndra.

May it prevail, the auspicious supreme profound syâd-vâda, a token of unfailing success, the doctrine of the lord of the three worlds, the Jina śâsana.

The holy Nâbhêya (Rishabha), Ajita, Sambhava, Nimi, Vimala, Suvrata, Ananta, Dharmma, Chandrâṅka (Chandraprabha), S′ânti, Kunthu, Sumati, Suvidhi (Pushpadanta), Sîtala, Vâsupûjya, Malli, S′rêya, Supârśva, Jalajaruchi (Padmaprabha), Ara, Nandana, Pârśva, Nêmi, the holy Vîra, may these twenty-four gods grant us fortune in the world.

Vîra, whom the three worlds praise saying he grants every thing to his worshipper, the destroyer of karma, the all-seeing, may he—the last tîrthakara—protect us.

In the company of that Vîra Jina were the siddhas (? with coiled-up hair) the Gaṇadharas, eleven in number, who adopt the teaching of an auspicious faith, having abandoned the three false notions.

Indra(bhûti) and Agnibhûti, Vâyubhûti, Akampana; Maurya, Sudharmma and Putra; Maitrêya and Maṇḍya; also Andhavôḷa and Prabhâsaka were their names.

Acquainted with their former births, having attained the summit, possessing all manner of knowledge, do I not serve the accomplishers of their task, the yati teachers, though they have obtained beatitude? Thus existing, fire (3), ocean (4) and three more, with the lord of night (the moon, 1); a hundred; and Rudra (11) less than 100 and mountains (7)[9] —including these were seven permanent gaṇas.

When Vîra Jina went to siddhi, only three remained, who were called Kêvalis,—Gautama, and then Sudharmma and Jambu,—through whom the name Kêvali became established in this world.

Vishṇu; Aparâjita and Nandimitra; Gôvarddhana the guru, with Bhadrabâhu, these five being like the Kêvalis in knowledge of all things, hence by them, the S′rutakêvalis, may my mind be purified.

In imparting the knowledge received, in their own acquired learning, and in the purity of their conduct being undivided, those who have acquired the ten pûrvvas, them do I reverence, the whole of the undivided Daśapûrvadharas.

They had the names Kshatriya, Prôshṭhila and Raṅga Dêva, Jaya, Sudharmma, Vijaya, Viśâkha, the holy Buddhila, besides Dhṛitishêṇa and Nâga (and) Siddhârtthaka.

Nakshatra and Pâṇḍu, Jayapâla and Kaṃsâchârya, the holy Dhṛitishêṇa also, famed for the acquisition of the eleven aṅgas, these five Ekâdaśâṅgidharas may they be in my mind.

Having the designation of ? âchârâṅga were Lôha, Subhadra, Jayabhadra, also Yaśôbâhu, who were foundation-pillars in the jewelled palace of the Jinêndrâgama.

The honourable Kumbha, Vinîta (or Avinîta), Haladhara, Vasudêva, Achala, Mêrudhira, Sarvvajña, Sarvvagupta, Mahîdhara and Dhanapâla, Mahâvîra and Vîra. These and many other sûris having obtained a good degree (su-padam) by accepting the glory of penance and the scriptures, there was born for the merit of the world, the yatindra Kuṇḍakunda.

[9] The object of these numerical items is not understood: they give apparently three separate numbers, namely, 1343, 100, and 107—11=96.

It was in order to show that both within and without he could not be assailed by rajas (passion, or dust), methinks, that the yati moved about leaving a space of four inches between himself and the earth under his feet.

The honourable Umâsvâti, he was the yatîśa who published (prakaṭichakâra) the Tatvârttha Sûtra, which is a guide to the worthy in following the path that leads to mukti.

After him was his disciple Griddhrapiñchha, the second to whom was Balâkapiñchha, the jewels of whose discourse were as ornaments to the lady mukti.

Samantabhadra, long may he prosper, the collection of whose sayings was as a goad to the elephant opponent speakers, and its power such that the very name of evil speech ceased to exist in all the world.

The bright jewelled lamp of the discourse of Samantabhadra lights up the whole palace of the three worlds filled with the all-meaning syâd-vâda, freeing it from the darkness of evil discussion.

His disciple S'vakôṭi sûri, whose body was as a prop for supporting the vine of penance, illustrated (alañchakâra) the Tatvârttha Sûtra, which is a raft for (crossing) the ocean of family (cares).

Dêvanandi, whose wisdom, great in bestowing confidence, was equal to the wisdom of Jinêndra, was called by the wise the holy Pûjyapâda on account of the forest deities worshipping his two feet.

Bhaṭṭâkalaṅka made the earth, which was soiled with the mire of the evil discourse of the Saugatas and others, as spotless as his name, so that it came to have the same meaning of being without spot (akalaṅka).

Jinasêna sûri, may he prosper in the world, by the mirror of whose bright discourse the whole world is illuminated, and faithful men see ? what is meritorious and what is ancient.

Devoted to the maintenance of faith, the sole friend in the world of the wholy, of a character praised by the wise, the elder son of Gaṇêndra, bestower of fortune on the world, freed from desire and sleep, do ye obeisance to Guṇabhadra, who has crossed the ocean of wisdom.

Who by reason of his knowledge of worldly omens.......................................
.... could see plainly all the three times (past, present and future), joy and sorrow, success and failure.

Who by his two disciples Pushpadanta and Bhûtabali was made illustrious, as if the tree of plenty had put forth two new shoots to give fruit to the world.

Arhadbali, he formed from the Mûla-saṅgha of the Koṇḍakundânvaya four divisions of saṅgha, in order to lessen (the chance of) enmity and other (such evils) springing up among them in course of time.

The Sitâmbara and others being contradictory in form, vain, disunited, may the difference betwixt us increase : but whoso thinks of it in the Sêna, Nandi, Dêva[10] and Siṃha saṅghas is a sinner.

Among these saṅghas, in the three—gaṇa, gachchha and vali—as collyrium to the eye and an aid to the discernment of the world, in the Nandi-saṅgha, the Dêsi-gaṇa and pure Pustaka-gachcha, was the Iṅgulêśvara-vali (or line), long may it prosper.

In it were Nâga Dêva, Udayaravi, Jina, Mêghaprabha, Bâlachandra, the celebrated Bhânuchandra, S'ruta, Naya, Guṇadharmma and other famous dêvas ; the celebrated Chandradharmmêndra and other learned men, ornaments to the race in character and penance ; (also) Vidyâdhâmêndra, Padmâ, (and) of the highest qualities, Mâṇikya-nandi.

Destroyers of sin, breakers of the tusks of the elephants opponent speakers, of bright and varied ...., bees to the lotuses of all learning, of bodies which had overcome the temptations of Manmatha, their feet ...., celebrated as having abandoned family cares.

[10] Trdivêś'a in the original : from No. 108 it appears that this stands for Dêva.

May he prosper, the holy Nêmichandra ...., daily skilled in averting injury from his faith, able in promoting its glory, who by the rays of his discourse gives tranquillity like the moon, punisher of deception in works of merit, himself the tire of the wheel of his desires.

The learned Mâghanandi established in the world the truth of his name (mâ agha nandi, having no pleasure in sin) from not being subdued by the sin prevailing in the world nor having pleasure in iniquity.

Like him in greatness, in being a lion to the fleeing (opponent) speakers, in descent as a guru and in high family and gôtra, was born, the world delighting in serving at his feet, Abhayachandra dêva.

Ever may he prosper, the conqueror of the enemy sin, the forsaker of multiplied offences, the seat of all learning, the abode of Lakshmi, ever associated with victory, possessing the good will of his friends,—Abhayachandra, the jewelled lamp of the assembly of the good.

His son, S'rutamuni, head of the gaṇa, of a body bound in penance, praising Jinêśa, was born from him ; through the Jinêndra teaching having no desire for the things of sense, filling all the ends of the earth with the fame of himself.

A fire to the forest of family (cares), a sun to the lotus of the blessed, the summit of uplifted honour, the cow of plenty in bestowing wealth, remover of the sorrows of those in the power of the enemies sin and ignorance, was S'rutamuni, the chief sûri, pure in morals, untouched by women.

The long tri-daṇḍa[1] which is the seat of supreme happiness ; the seed of sin (namely) good estates, jewels, houses ; the three kinds of action........... which destroys pride ; the ruin of perfect peace of body ; .... the three thorns : he, the opener of the eyes by his discourse, S'rutamuni munipa, was the only one who had abandoned the three faults.

In the line of the constellation of his disciples' disciples, increasing in wonderful glory like a full moon, an ocean to the unbegotten and undying paramâgama, was Abhinava S'rutamuni, head of the gaṇa.

In the tangled paths of the natural pouring forth of the discourse of (opponent) speakers, in the soft sweet words which give pleasure and assurance, in the sound of his newly composed poems, in mantra, tantra and yantra, in all esteemed learning or in the ocean of grammar, who was a sage like the muni S'rutamuni, the delighter in all learning ?

In grammar Pûjyapâda, in the complete science of rhetoric and logic Dêva, in the siddhânta of truth revealed by Jina Gautama or Koṇḍakunda, in spiritual philosophy Varddhamâna, in subjection of Manmatha and in subduing the fire of sorrow a rain-cloud,—thus celebrated like S'rutamuni who was there in the three worlds ?

Having acquired faith, purity and increase in the Jaina path ; with greatness in siddhi and wisdom, in the assemblies of wise astounding with his intelligence, sun to the new-blown lotuses the blessed, of wonderful character in overcoming the fear of family cares, free from sin,—this moon S'rutamuni munipa, do ye worship.

Then (there was) another Abhayachandra Sûri, whose younger brother was S'rutakîrtti Dêva, keeper to the full of all the commandments of Jinêndra.

Having studied the whole vêda, free from all distress of mind, having subdued all opponent speakers, delighting in all learning, filled with highest joy, of lofty and bright intelligence, praising the feet of Jinapa,—he had obtained protection for all.

The honourable one, his son Chârukîrtti, afterwards became a sannyâsi in the seat of the head of a gaṇa ; the three worlds being filled with his praise so that the peaceful moon has gradually waned to the present time; the commentary of whose extempore discourse plucked out the opponent speakers like the groups of wild elephants the sun-loving seat of Lakshmi (the lotus).

The beautiful śrî Chârukîrtti, a sovereign whose feet were worshipped by kings, put down the great speaker who was showing pride in the assembly of the king; rejoicing in his superior eloquence, having attained the utmost possible (to man), having freed himself from the ignorance which is the source of the visible and invisible creation, he exulted in unfettered knowledge of the universe.

When king Ballâla, more powerful than Bali, conqueror by means of his cavalry, was through severe illness as if among the dead, he restored him quickly to health; so also, he himself being fully aware of his condition, he carried Abhayasûri through his illness; Abhayasûri, an ocean mine of science without a shore:—(thus did) Siṃhaṇâryya.

The virtuous one, his disciple, to whom he had communicated the sûtra efficacious in destroying the evil of pain (or sin); his speech to listen to like drinking nectar, was Paṇḍita, destroyer of sin; the sûri who was a sun in unfolding the lotus of the obedient, his glory filling all quarters, the honourable, was by his own wish engaged in the increase of merit in the town of Beḷuguḷa.

18 Wherein Châmuṇḍa Râja by his faith and virtue had auspiciously set up Bhujabali, this Gummaṭa, incomprehensible to those who dwell in acts, on the hill in Sura-nagara, where mukti had been acquired. And in the same manner also, another[2], holy in conduct, his fame filling the three worlds, made on (this) Kailâsa honourable Jaina images, of forms glorious through the three times (past, present and future).

In the place adorned by Paṇḍita, to make that place more glorious, that honourable one, like a king of sun-like glory, (erected) splendid walls and stairs: and (still) wonderful, he (Paṇḍita) having seven times absolved from evil the ornament of the three worlds made glorious by the goddess of fortune, adorned him with the highest merit in the world.

Was it the anointing with milk, or was it his own spotless fame that made the chains of mountains (gl sten white) like S'aṅkara's mountain, the earth like a moonstone, the elephants at the points of the compass like Indra's elephant, this wise one;—the seven oceans like the ocean of milk, the clouds above like autumn clouds, Nâga lôka as if pervaded by Âdiśêsha, svarga as if the vase of nectar were broken?—we know not.

Like as the chief of the gods performed janmâbhishêka in Mêru, so did this sûri for the god in that mountain, thus displaying him to us and to all people; while the good path which for a long time had been closed. being filled with such as looked awry, he freed entirely from them, and like Puru of old again opened it, that pure one.

Ho! ho! Kâṇâda, go into some corner fit for the sleep of the wicked and stop there; Maimâṃsa, forsake your great desire; bores with your speeches, be off with you; unenlightened Bauddha, you are ignorant, away with you quickly; Sâṅkhya, approach him not in argument; for the honourable Abhayasûri smites the elephants the opponent speakers like a lion of eloquence.

Chârukîrtti and Îśvara (S'iva) were alike independent of any master, (alike) assumed wealth, bestowed eternal happiness and claimed omniscience; though the one was a Jinabhâk (follower of Jina) and the other was ajinabhâk (dressed in a skin); .... the one took the Hêma mountain for an arrow and the other dwelt permanently in the Hêma mountain.

When Dhûrjjaṭi (S'iva) wrapped thee in the flames of the eye in his forehead, S'ailajâ (Pârvatî) saved thy life of old, oh! Manmatha; but burnt up in the fire of the penance of the good muni, the all-knowing Chârukîrtti, and blown away by the high wind of his virtue, what now is thy fate?

As if to expiate the sin of union with Pitâmaha (grandfather, also a name of Brahmâ her husband), Sarasvatî had plunged into the Ganges of Chârukîrtti's eloquence.

[2] Apparently either Bharatamayya (see No. 115), or Basavi Seṭṭi (see No. 78): from the next verse probably the former.

His mouth the abode of Vâṇi, his heart full of mercy, his character pure, his body the sole dwelling of patience, his merit highly esteemed by all people, the group of his qualities such as to be worthy of the notice of the wise, long may he, filled with all goodness, prosper,—this Chârukîrtti vratîndra.

The ignorant and the wise, the poor and the rich, the lowly and the honourable, the evil and the good, the sorrowing and the happy, the proud and the virtuous, he caused to become sâmanta-bhadra (ever fortunate) . . . . . . may śrî Chârukîrtti prosper in the world, his fame like the beautiful moonlight.

Ho! ho! Chârvâka, quit your pride; give up your titles beforehand, Sâṅkhya; your splendid decorations are all rubbed off, Bhâṭṭa; Kaṇâda, entirely and speedily let alone the certain cause of grief to your honour: for Siṃhaṇâryya goes forth to overcome the men who oppose him in argument.

Worshippers of the feet of that Paṇḍita were the kings of that region, distinguished for virtue wisdom, character, and liberal gifts, the two—Hariyaṇa, beautiful as the moon, and Mâṇikya Dêva equal to Arjuna.

In order that his own merit,—the destroyer of the enemy sin, the bestower of highest happiness, difficult to obtain and an object of desire—which he had acquired by the supreme path, highly prized by the worthy, of a sannyâsi, might accrue to all people, he poured forth the streams of the nectar of his eloquence so that they all, forsaking their bodies and praising the feet of Jinêndra, attained to the state of the gods.

And in the thirteen hundred and twentieth S'aka year, Îśvara being current, on the 14th of Mâgha, Friday, under the asterism Svâti (Arcturus), Puru-Paṇḍita gently ascended to the seat of the gods.

Then there was Abhinava Paṇḍita Dêra Sûri, the whiteness of whose fame lit up the faces of the points of the compass; on which disciple by conferring the power of his own merit, Paṇḍitârya strove to lead him in the path of his own penance.

Why vainly strive, O jewel crown of the wanton populace, to prove the true Tathâgata faith to be false? escape quickly, for the proverb says 'the living shall see good,' and quit your love of dispute; for Paṇḍitârya, like a fire, reduces to ashes the trees the wisest opponents.

To those who ignorantly desire to remain attached to the body surrounded as with the waves of an ocean by the cares of family, like a raft on which they may cross over to safety; his feet worshipped by numbers of new disciples; an unsleeping sea of security; thus does Abhinava Paṇḍitârya shine.

He, from devotion to his guru, set up his tomb, together with those from other gaṇas and many house-holders, on an auspicious day and at an auspicious moment, with a sound of all the great drums which filled both the earth and the sky.

Such, according to his ability, in order to acquire merit, is the śâsana composed by Arhaddâsa. May it, in which are combined the group of sciences and the three acts, prevail in the earth as long as moon and stars, (as long as) the sun and Mêru.

(Date A.D. 1409.)

In the auspicious Karṇṇâṭa country is a chief town called Gaṅgavati: in it was Mâṇikya Dêva, devoted to the vows of giving and penance: Bâbâyi, an abode of all good qualities, was his wife. And to them was born a son named Mâyaṇṇa, adorned with the jewels of good qualities, the disciple of Chandrakîrtti.

That blessed one, a true head-jewel,—Be it well. Fortune.—

In the S'aka year 1331, the year Virôdhi, on the 5th of the dark fortnight of Chaitra, Thursday for the midday offerings of eight kinds to śrî Gummaṭa-nâtha, presented the dânaśâle paddy field of one khanḍuga under the Gaṅgasamudra tank of Beḷuguḷa ; having purchased it in the regular manner in the presence of the chief citizens of Beḷuguḷa, Gummaṭa Dêva, son of Hariya Gaṇḍa, Bommappa, son of Mâṇikya Dêva, and other gauḍas, and performing worship at the feet of the god, acquired unusual fame and merit.

(Date about A.D. 1182.)[3]

For the virtue of the lord Chandramauli, whose chief wife Âchala Dêvi, with eyes like the deer, besought it for the worship of the holy feet of Gummaṭa-nâtha of Beḷuguḷa, the generous king Vîra-Ballâḷa presented the country of Bekka, as a grant to continue as long as earth and ocean endure.

108

(Date A.D. 1433.—Size 3' 4" × 1' 5".)

Fortune. Victorious is the Jaina doctrine, in unconquered greatness, having subdued the other beaten doctrines, the sole doctrine bestowing the glorious fortune of salvation.

Of unlimited joy and highest knowledge, remover by his power of the fear of others, of a glory manifest to all, the Supreme Intelligence—may he fill my mind.

Shining with all jewels (or sciences), freed from bilge-water (or ignorant people), the various morals its cabins, painted white with the purity of the śyâtkâra (doctrine), filled with wells of mercy (is) the ship of the faith ; on which taking on board those who are overwhelmed in the ocean of family cares, they carry them over to the island of immortality, these Tîrthakaras—may they be in the middle of my heart.

Among them, lord of the three worlds, of wonderful increase, was śri Varddhamâna, the last tîrthanâtha, the brightness of whose form displayed to all around their former and future births.

To which last lord of the world of mind, famous as having assumed the degree of heir apparent, was śri Gautama the gaṇapati, the blessed, the most excellent, praised by the chief munis :—may he prevail.

In his line, which was famed for the purity of its clustre of jewels, arose in th[illegible] the yatindra Bhadrabâhu, like a full moon to the ocean of milk.

Bhadrabâhu, the foremost by his acquisition of all knowledge, (proclaimed) the doctrine of the siddhis, beautiful with its combination of sweet words ; famed for his character, dispeller of the delusions of those bound to the world, celebrated for the growth of his great penance, the highly renowned.

Which Bhadrabâhu, though the last among the munis who were S'ruta kêvalis here below, by his exposition of all the meaning of the śruti was the first among the learned.

His disciple was Chandragupta, a chief among the gods in the possession of all goodness, the greatness of whose penance caused his exalted fame to be spread into other worlds.

From the mine of whose race came forth yatis, a celebrated garland of faultless jewels ; among whom, as a central jewel, shone the munîndra Kuṇḍakunda, of powerful discipline.

Then arose Umâsvâti muni in that pure race, a discerner of all wisdom ; by which chief muni the collection of the elements of knowledge revealed by Jina was reduced to sûtras.

He, was he not the yôgi devoted to the protection of living creatures who assumed the wings of a kite ? whence from that time forth the wise call him âchâri, (adding it) after his name Griddhra-piñchchha.

[3] For confirmation of this date see No. 124.

From him sprang a light to the race of yôgis, Balâkapiñchchha, great in penance, the wind which but touched whose body caused poison to be converted to nectar.

Then arose Samantabhadra, a security for salvation, the author of the Jina-śâsana[4], the fall of the thunderbolt of whose eloquence split into pieces the mountains the opponent speakers.

Then śrî Pûjyapâda, the promoter of the kingdom of merit, his feet worshipped by the chief of the gods, the qualities of whose learning even now appear in the writings he put forth.

Having acquired all knowledge, he completed the performance of all the rites in company with many yôgis, and like Jina having broken the bow of Ananga, was well called Jinêndra-buddhi.

S'rî Pûjyapâda muni, unrivalled as a dispenser of medicine, may he prevail, his body purified by the Jina doctrine worthy to be obeyed; through the virtue of sprinkling with the water purified by his feet was not iron turned to gold?

After him, chief among the learned in science was Akalaṅka Sûri, by the rays of whose speech was enlightened the darkness of falsehood which had filled all knowledge.

When that great ṛishi had gone to the world of svarga to worship the chief of the lords of heaven, among the munis sprung from his line there arose in the earth the different saṅghas.

That great body of yôgis, forming four saṅghas which conformed to the rules, shone as if the holy Jinêndra had acquired four faces all equal in friendship.

In the respective Dêva, Nandi, Siṃha and Sêna saṅghas, in different countries, were divine yôgis, learned in all wisdom, who, either separately or unitedly conformed to all the ordinances; and among them celebrated was the Nandi saṅgha.

In the Nandi saṅgha, the Dêsi-gaṇa and the pure Pustuka-gachcha, may the lord Iṅguḷêśvara prevail, making the earth fortunate.

In it (also), devoted to protecting all creatures, having conquered the senses, having by growth in the true doctrine acquired great fame, was born the renowned S'rutakîrtti bhaṭṭâraka yati, the moon of whose bright eloquence dispersed all mental darkness.

Having made good men obedient to him, he left to them the load of his learning, and to the earth the load of his body; and that patient one, by means of penance, attained to svarga.

That Digambara having gone to the skies, not his character and qualities alone remained here in the earth but his fame also, acquired by his penance, which destroyed the shower of arrows from the bent bow of the cruel and proud Manmatha.

From him sprung śrî Chârukîrtti muni, of unequalled greatness, his fame illuminating the points of the compass; who was severe in penance, patient in mind, commanding in character, lean in body

By the creeper of whose penance the tree of sin was shaken, who caused the three essences to be given to the world, besides the science of logic and others; good in disposition, a moon in raising the tide of the ocean of the science of language.

At the feet of which great yôgi always seeing Lakshmî, Vishṇu's body became black with jealousy; if not, how otherwise did his body became dark?

From the contact of the air which had but touched his body were cured diseases; was it much (then) that by his treatment he removed the complaint from which king Ballâḷa was suffering?

That excellent muni, by the power of his wisdom having inquired into the different modes of penance and embraced them, left a body exposed to all manner of troubles and entered a glorious and divine form.

After that sage had set (or died) .... was Paṇḍita yati, who like a moon dispersing by his rays the darkness of falsehood which covered the world, was praised by the good.

[4] syâdvâda-Jina-śâsana.

.... protector of the learned, destroyer of evil professors, having subdued all the senses,—him do ye serve, O ye wise.

.... the greatness of his penance caused the Nagara Jinâlaya of Dhavaḷa-sarôvara. (i. e. Beḷgoḷa) to be without an equal.

Whose two feet groups of kings made the ornament of their heads, the nectar of whose eloquence the assembly of the learned drinking live for ever, by whose fame the ocean-girdled earth was purified, by whose learning the group of sciences in the earth was illuminated.

That unequalled great one, having performed severe penance, and having acquired merit free from all trouble, as if he had given his mind to the enjoyment of the fruit thereof, that yôgi ascended to svarga.

He having gone, Siddhânta yôgi arose in the world, by his eloquence unfolding the siddha-śâstra as the sun in a cloudless sky by his rays causes the groups of lotus to awake from sleep.

Which learned one, by his eloquence, filled with the essence of all wisdom, split through the arguments of evil speaking opponents like Indra split the mountains in the earth with his cloud-born lightnings.

Whom, though his lotus feet were ever tinted with the rays from the crowns of bending kings, no substance and no woman, no clothing and no youthful pride, no strength and no wealth could tempt.

Which wise one, plunging into the ocean of science, secured the entire jewels of all its essence, so that those who came after him could get only single ones and not the whole.

That learned muni, of great acumen, obtained many celebrated disciples, whom he taught in order to purify the world and diffuse merit in all parts.

Who, putting faith in their guru, imbibed from him all learning as a calf sucking milk from the cow of plenty, and growing strong with that nourishment became celebrated everywhere.

Among his disciples, noted for his learning, distinguished by many qualities, was the one named, S'rutamuni, (prominent) as mount Mandara with his jewelled crests above the (other) great mountains.

In descent, character, good qualities, wisdom, learning and form was he worthy, and having examined him he placed him in the rank of a sûri, considering him proficient.

And once on a time reflecting that of his own life but little remained, and thinking him to be able, he placed him over his own gaṇa, saying 'I will retire to do penance.'

The muni, an object of reverence, considering in his own mind, said as follows, calling to him (this) his son obedient to all the rules.

'This gaṇa which has descended in my line, do thou maintain its authority as I have done'—and thus saying, he delivered to him his gaṇa.

Grief at (the prospect of) separation from his guru made his face very thin, but with many words he comforted him: how can dust remain on the white lotus when blown by the gentle breath of woman.

And beloved of the learned, walking in the good ways, having overcome all evil sects, having subdued all faults, having conquered the power of Manmatha, a master of true learning, subservient to the fruits of merit, he went to the divine world.

He having gone, taking up the office of sûri, this great muni highly promoted his saṅgha by his qualities, his learning and his character, praising the lotus feet of his guru.

Doing what ought to be done, he protected his saṅgha, leaving what ought not to be done, this unequalled wise one; increasing blameless merit, he caused his guru's instructions to bear fruit.

This muni put an end to the greatest wordy disputes of the rough and proud evil sects by his pure words, resembling the successive waves of the ocean turned aside by the Mandara mountain.

'Say, who art thou, woman?' 'The fame of S'rutamuni'. 'What hast thou come for?' 'Brahman, I am seeking everywhere for a sage like my beloved.' 'Is there not Indra?' 'He destroyed the gôtra (otherwise, mountains)'. 'Is there not Dhanapati?' 'A Kinnara (otherwise, what sort of a man?)' 'S'êsha, where has he gone?' 'He is double-tongued (otherwise, a serpent).' 'Rudra?' He is a herdsman (otherwise, lord of gaṇas)?'

Ornaments to the mind of the speech goddess, like nectar from the flowers of the celestial mandara tree, rejoicing all people, his words pour ambrosia into the ears of poets.

Though samanta (everywhere) bhadra (fortunate) he is not Samantabhadra, though pûjya (worshipped) pâda (at his feet) he is not Pûjyapâda, though having mayûra (peacock's) piñchchha (feathers) he is not Mayûra-piñchchha: and still wonderful, though viruddha (stopped) by all he is not viruddha (offended.)

To this light of the race of munis, while greatly expounding the faith delivered by Jinêndra, a sickness was sent unseen, like a spy, by Kali to slay him.

As a bad man attaches himself to one of great goodness and in the end swallows him up, so, gradually entering his body, it caused him great trouble and could not be stopped.

Learn ye by practice the penance to overcome such evil.

May the tomb long endure of S'rutamuni, a visit to which is a sacrifice that suffices to carry its performers to heaven.

In the S'aka year reckoned as arrows, arrows, flames and moon (1355), the year Paridhâvi, the 9th of the bright fortnight of the second Âshâḍha, Monday, under the constellation Viśâkha, was it set up.

He to whom all actions are directed, removed above all opposition, highly exalted, free from ignorance, without an equal, free from desire, of a glory beyond expression or thought, having subdued the power of the world, the highest,—may his glory dwell in my mind.

With narrative and harmony combined, fit to engage the affection of all people, the words of the poet Maṅga Râja are like (the notes of) the lute in the hands of Sarasvati.

Mighty as the waters of the last deluge, when to conquer Vajvala Dêva, the younger brother of Pâtâla Malla, he raised his arm by order of Indra kshitîndra, in front of the lord, the king Jagadêkavîra, a victorious elephant at sight of whom all elephants flee, the forces broke and fled untouched like deer.

He, an elephant by whose tusks the rock the temples of the enemy's elephants were split as with a thunderbolt, marching in the van with the bravest, an elephant-goad to the evil beasts the hostile kings; he also, who was praised by his lord in the war with Nolamba Râja, saying—'By thee, what kings soever are there that will not fall as food to the black serpent my arrow?'

Of whom in the war with king Raṇa Siṅga he exclaimed—'So renowned, that though the milk ocean were the moat, the citadel the Trikûṭa mountain, the city Laṅka, the opposing king the enemy of the gods (Râvaṇa), yet would I not for a moment fear in the least to conquer them, by thy valour, O king Jagadêka-vîra.'

On whom the celestial nymphs invoke blessings on account of the royal rutting elephants translated to gods, saying—'To embrace the neck of this brave hero have we in many wars been consumed with thirst; now have we obtained the essence of joy from the water of the mouth of thy sword: may'st thou live to the end of the age, O victor over Raṇa-raṅga Siṅga'.

By whom, the design of Chaladaṅka Gaṅga, wishing to seize by force of arms the wealth of Gaṅga's empire, was rendered vain: who caused the cups made from the skulls of brave men, decorated with jewels, from which they were burning to drink, to brim over with the blood of heroes and thus filled with satisfaction the bands of Kôṇapas (or râkshasas).

INSCRIPTIONS IN THE TOWN.

(Date A.D. 1182.—Size 7′ 3″ × 3′ 10″.)

May the honourable supreme profound syâd vâda, a fruit-bearing token, the doctrine of the lord of the three worlds, the Jina doctrine, prevail.

[6] The continuation of the inscription is ridiculous and shows how low the Jains had degenerated.

Fortune to the Jinêndra doctrine, the destroyer of sin, a sun in dispersing the clouds the darkness of the false teachers.

Be it well. A birthplace of fortune, of a glory like the unequalled submarine fire, an earth surrounded by a wide ocean, the quarter in which rises the moon of unspotted fame, a place for the growth of varied (precious) things, filled with glory (or, living creatures), profound, ever praised, thus like the ocean shone the Hoysaḷa family.[7]

In it, a kaustubha of precious quality, like the celestial elephant in majestic power, like the moon in the clustre of rays (or learning), in giving as distinguished as the pârijâta, uniting all these qualities in one, was it not? that he was born—the terror of his enemies, king Vinayâditya.

His humility rejoicing the wise, his great valour terrifying the forces of the enemy, thus shone king Vinayâditya, displaying the meaning of his name, distinguished for his pure fame.

That Vinayâditya's wife, like the spell of the god of love, a dwelling place of good disposition and qualities, enlightened with all learning, was Keleyabarasi by name.

To that pair was born a son, as to S'achî and Indra was formerly born Jayanta, of a mind removed from sorrow, the king Ereyaṅga.

He to the Châlukya king was a right hand, a discus-weapon in splitting through the lofty mountains the groups of proud kings, a rain cloud to the crops those who chant praises, the earth glittering with his great glory resembled the white lotus, the celestial elephant, the cloud of autumn or the jasmine buds.

The wife of that lord of the earth, Ereyaṅga, ornament of kings, was a monument of beauty, abounding in virtuous qualities—Êchala Dêvi, are there any like her in devotion?

To those two, thus celebrated, were sons famous throughout the world by the names Ballâḷa, king Vishṇu and Udayâditya.

Of them the middle one, stretching out at once in the earth so as to unite the eastern and western oceans, by the sole exercise of the power of his own arm, became the chief—the only abode of greatness, a head-jewel of kings, sun to the Yâdava lotus, the king Vishṇu.

Kôyatûr, Talavanapura and Râyarâyapura, celebrated in the earth as the strongest of royal forts, faded away in the moving growing flames of Vishṇu's glory.

So many inaccessible forts of the enemy did he capture forcing a quarrel on them, so many kings did he subdue in battle with the showers of his arrows, so many who submitted did he out of kindness raise to high station, that to describe them by number would assuredly bewilder even Brahma.

As the goddess Lakshmî to the glorious Vishṇu whose crest is the king of kites, so did Lakshmâ Dêvi, with a face like the moon, shine as the chief wife to Vishṇu.

To them was born a son, like the god of love in distracting the minds of women, (though) from the beauty of his features they call him Atanu (the god of love, otherwise, the great), yet he does not in the least retaliate by shooting at crowds of women (like the god of love), but the brave he shoots at in battle and subdues—the unequalled king Narasiṃha.

Of his army what word (i. e. need to speak)? to him who came and had audience (he was) an ocean of nectar, (but) to him who from pride spoke high words—what shall I say?—the deluge which comes bursting its bounds in the destruction of the world, Yama, a fierce discus-weapon, the fire of the last day, a thunderbolt, a lion, the flaming central eye of S'iva,—this Narasiṃha.

Soft of foot, Êchala Dêvi, with beautiful teeth, giver of supreme happiness to king Narasiṃha, being well fitted for the rank of crowned great queen, shone in the world.

[7] All the epithets may be interpreted in two ways—one referring to the ocean, the other to the Hoysaḷa family.

As of old from their sport the flower-arrowed (god of love) was born to Vishṇu and to the beautiful Lakshmî his wife, so to king Narasiṃha and his wife Êchala Dêvî was born, virtuous in conduct, great in merit, destroyer of the race of powerful enemies, an arm of victory, the king Ballâḷa.

To hostile kings, like a lion to the elephants, a full moon to the group of lotuses, a violent mind dispersing the clouds, a thunderbolt to the mountains, a sun in destroying the darkness, a fire of the last day (to consume them)—uprose Vîra Ballâḷa Dêva.

Lâla lost his pleasure, Gurjjara was seized with a dangerous fever through excessive fight, Gauḷa was as if pierced with a spear, Pallava had his hands full of sprouts, Chôḷa dropped his clothes[8] —when he sounded his drum in the van of the battle, that fire of the last day to the ocean powerful hostile kings, Vîra Ballâḷa Dêva.

When with haste in the pride of his arm Oḍeyarasa stood ready to fight, king Ballâḷa marched forth, and surrounding and besieging him in Uchchangi, the peaks of which had been reduced to powder by the tusks of his great elephants, captured king Pâṇḍya, together with his beautiful women, the treasury of his country, his father and all his horses.

Laying siege to Uchchangi, for a long time considered impregnable by kings, the mine of great glory plundered and took its king Kâma Dêva, the famous Oḍeyarasa (or, the king Sanda Oḍeyar), his treasury and women, his troops of horses, he seized them all—the king Ballâḷa.

Be it well. Entitled to the five great drums, mahâ-maṇḍalêsvara, lord of the good city of Dvârâvatî, a submarine fire to the ocean Tulava, a forest fire to rival heirs, an elephant to the lotus the Pâṇḍya family, gaṇḍa bhêruṇḍa, hunter of the chiefs, plunderer of the Chôḷa camp, fierce in battle, a Kâma of the Kali age, feeder of the groups of bards, delighting in all gifts, obtainer of a boon from the goddess Vâsantikâ, sun in the sky of the Yâdava family, a head-jewel on the crowns of kings, eager in fight, champion over the Malapas, Sanivâra-siddi, Giri-durga-Malla—while distinguished with these and other titles, the auspicious Tribhuvana-Malla, capturer of Talakâḍu, Kongu, Nangali, Noḷambavâḍi, Banavâse, and Hanungal, the mighty-armed Vîra Ganga, the valiant Hoysaḷa Vîra-Ballâḷa-Dêva was ruling the empire of the south in peace and wisdom, punishing the evil and protecting the good—

The dweller at his lotus feet.

(Abstract):—His god Hara, his king Vîra Ballâḷa Dêva, his father S'ambhu Dêva, his mother Akkavve—was the lord Chandra-mauḷi. He was a Brahman learned in all sciences and became minister to Vîra Ballâḷa.

His wife was Âchiyakka, a true Gangâ dêvi (the celestial Ganges), whose descent was as follows:—In Mâsavâḍi nâḍ there was a perfect S'râvaka (? a Jaina), the lord S'iveya Nâyaka; his wife was Chandavve. They had a son Vija Bamma Dêva heggaḍe; his brother was Vâveya Nâyaka; whose sister was Kâlavve. Her sister, wife of Hemmâḍi Dêva, king of Mâsavâḍi, was Achala Dêvi. Her brother was Sôvana Nâyaka, whose wife was Bâchavve. They had a son, the dêsiya daṇḍanâyaka Bammeya Nâyaka, whose wife was Dôbavve, daughter of Malli Seṭṭi and Mâbhave Seṭṭikavve. Bammeya Nâyaka's younger brother was Mâra, whose younger sister was Achala Dêvi, whose younger sister was Chandavve, whose younger brother was Kâma.

As to S'iri and Vishṇu was born Kusumâstra, and to S'ambhu and Pârvati was born Shaḍvadana (Shaṇmukha), so to the lord Chandramauḷi and Âchiyakka was born Sôma.

[8] All the expressions are plays on the names.

In the Belguḷa tîrtha did she cause to be made a beautiful dwelling for the Jinapati śrî Pârśva Dêva,—Âchala Dêvi, firm in devotion to the lotus feet of Bâlachandra muni, the chief disciple of the celebrated Nayakîrtti yôgîndra.

That guru's family was of the śrî-Mûla-saṅgha, the Dêśi-gaṇa, the Pustuka-gachcha, and Koṇḍakundânvaya. He was the son of Chandra-siddhânta-dêva. His disciples were Bhânukîrtti munipa, Prabhâchandra Dêva, Mâghanandi muni, Padmanandi vratiśa, and Nêmichandra muni. Praise of Bâlachandra munipa.

As Gauri by performing penance won Chandramauḷi (S'iva), so in former births did Âchale, by which she won (the lord) Chandramauḷi.

In the S'aka year 1104, the year Plava, on the 3rd of the dark fortnight of Pushya, Friday, at the time of the sun's going north,—

The lord Chandramauḷi, begging it for the Pârśva Dêva temple which his wife Âchala Dêvi had made in the Belguḷa tîrtha, the generous king Vira Ballâḷa made a gift of Bammeyanahaḷḷi, for as long as earth and ocean endure.

And the gift which that king had made, Âchale, worshipping the feet of Bâlachandra-muni, presented for Jinapati as long as the four oceans endure.

The boundaries of that village thus presented with pouring of water (here follow the details).

And she (also) gave Bâmagaṭṭa in the Bekka veḷkere, having purchased it from Bâcha, younger brother of the accountant Kôśiyaṇṇa: its boundaries (here follow the details).

And all the Dêsigas, Nâḍigas and Nagartas gave up for the eight kinds of worship of the god the following dues :—for a load of grain 1 baḷḷa, for a load of areca-nut 1 quarter baḷḷa, for a load of pepper (or chillies) 1 hâga, for a load of turmeric 1 hâga, for a bundle of cotton 1 hâga, for a bundle of women's cloths 1 hâga visa, for a load of betel leaves 600.

(Imprecatory verses.) Great good fortune.

(Translation) :—The śâsana which Nayakîrtti dêva wrote for all the Nagartas of Gommaṭa-pura, in the presence of the senior treasurer Râma Dêva Nâyaka, minister of Sômêśvara Dêva, the son of the mighty emperor Vîra Ballâḷa Dêva :—

For (? each) house in Gommaṭa-pura, beginning with the year Akshaya, to continue as long as sun, moon and stars, the monied will pay 8 haṇa on their stock (or capital) and remain in peace.

Among the mills of the oil-mongers, whatever justice or injustice of the palace, (whatever) loss or expense may come, the âchâri of that place must himself pay and settle it ; there is no statement on account of families.

If, transgressing the regulations of this order, one or two among the citizens of this tîrtha, becoming leaders, give bad advice to the âchâri and, thinking together, make ? foul play and put it into the mind of the âchâri to ask for a reduction of the ? rate, they are traitors to the congregation and traitors to the king.

The guild of merchants will not cast lots, nor ? demolish the long established customary fees.

If, knowing this, the Nagartas disregard it, the Nagartas themselves are the destroyers of this charity : moreover the âchâri and wicked people are not its destroyers.

If one or two headmen, without the consent of the Nagartas, enter into the house of the âchâri or into the palace, they are traitors to the congregation. For free grants and remissions they will follow the old customs.

Whoso destroy this regulation are guilty of killing cows and Brahmans on the banks of the Ganges.

Whoso seizes a gift made by himself or by another will be born a worm in ordure for sixty thousand years.

Be it well. Possessed of every honour, the great fire of the mare-faced to the ocean of heretics, the original slave at the lotus-feet of śrî Raṅga Râja (or the king of S'rîraṅga[3]), donor of a path to the jewelled temple of the world of holy Vishṇu,—Râmânuja triumphs, the king of royal yatis.

In the S'aka year 1290, the year Kîlaka, the 1st of the bright fortnight of Bhâdrapada, Thursday, at the time when,—Be it well. The auspicious mahâ maṇḍalêśvara, the victor over hostile kings, the punisher of kings who break their word, the auspicious Vîra Bukka Râya was conducting the government of the world,—mutual strife having arisen between the Jainas and the bhaktas[4] (or faithful), the blessed

[1] A village to the south of S'ravaṇa Beḷgoḷa.

[2] This inscription is commonly known as Râmânujâchârya's s'âsana. An erroneous version of it, made for Colonel Mackenzie, was published in 1809 in Asiatic Researches, Vol. IX, p. 270. The situation of the inscription is there said to be "on a stone, upon the Hill of Belligola, in front of the Image." If this was correct, the stone must have been since removed to its present position, which is in the town and not on the hill.

[3] S'rîraṅgam near Trichinopoly. The king here referred to is the idol S'rî Raṅganâtha in the great temple there.

[4] From the tenor of the inscription this should mean the Vaishṇavas, and it has always been understood that it was their hostility to the Jains which was on this occasion put a stop to. But a S'rî Vaishṇava paṇḍit points out to me that the term bhaktas is never commonly applied to Vaishṇavas, but means S'ivabhaktas, which is a well-known term, in general use. In his view of the case, therefore, the object of the arrangement now made was to place the Jains under the protection of the S'rî Vaishṇavas against the attacks of the S'ivabhaktas. This is certainly plausible, but seems to be a forced interpretation; and such an arrangement would be more likely to excite a breach of the peace than prevent it.

people (i. e. the Jainas) of all the districts included within Ânegondi[5], Hosapattana, Penagonde[6] and Kallehadapattana, having made petition to that Bukka Râya of the injustice done by the bhaktas, the Mahârâya, under the hand[7] of the S'ri Vaishnavas of the eighteen districts[8], especially of Kôvil Tirumale, Perumâl-Kôvil and Tirunârâyanapuram[9], including all the âchâris, all the samayas[10], all the respectable men, those living on alms[1], the (temple) servants of the holy trident-mark[2], of the holy feet[3], and the drawers of water, the four (thrones)[4] and the eight tâtas[5], the instructors of the true faith[6], the Tirukula and Jâmbavakula[7],—declaring that between the Vaishnava darśana[8] and this Jaina darśana there was no difference whatever, the king, taking the hand of the Jainas and placing it in the hand of the Vaishnavas, (decreed as follows) :—

In this Jaina darśana, according to former custom, the five big drums[9] and the kalaśa (or vase) will (continue to) be used. If to the Jaina darśana any injury on the part of the bhaktas should arise, it will be protected (in the same manner) as if injury to the Vaishnavas had arisen.

[7] kaiyyallu; from this it would appear that a written agreement was taken from them.

[8] A term used in other inscriptions with reference to the S'rî Vaishnavas.

[9] Kôvil is S'rîranga or S'ringam; Tirumale is Tripati in Kadapa district; Perumâl-Kôvil is Kañchi or Conjeveram, Tirunârâyanapuram is Mêlukôte in Mysore, to the north of Seringapatam.

[10] The samaya were dâsaris or Vaishnava religious mendicants, invested with authority as censors of morals. No religious ceremony or marriage could be undertaken without gaining their consent by payment of fees, &c. Under the former Râjas the office was farmed out in all the large towns, and credited in the public accounts as samayâchâra. An important part of the profits arose either from the sale of women accused of incontinency, or from fines imposed on them for the same reason. The unfortunate women thus put up for sale were popularly known as Sarkâr wives. "The rules of the system" says Wilks, "varied according to the caste of the accused. Among Brahmans and Kômatis females were not sold but expelled from their caste and branded on the arm as prostitutes; they then paid to the ijârdâr (or contractor) an annual sum as long as they lived, and when they died all their property became his. Females of other Hindu castes were sold without any compunction by the ijârdâr, unless some relative stepped forward to satisfy his demand. These sales were not, as might be supposed, conducted by stealth, nor confined to places remote from general observation; for in the large town of Bangalore itself, under the very eyes of the European inhabitants, a large building was appropriated to the accommodation of these unfortunate women; and so late as the month of July 1833, a distinct proclamation of the Commissioners was necessary to enforce the abolition of this detestable traffic."

[3] Tiruvadi for tiruvadi.

[4] The word following nâl or four is not very clear, but it seems to refer to the occupants of four thrones, or simhâsanâdhipatis appointed by Râmânujâchâri, namely, Tirumalay, Kandâdi, Bhattâchâr and Nallân-chakravarti.

[5] Tâta, literally grandfather. Certain Vaishnava teachers of the priestly order are called tâtâchâri, and are representatives of eight principal ones, appointed by Râmânujâchâri, who were called the ashta-dig-gaja.

[7] The Tiru-kula and Jâmbava-kula are two tribes of Holeyas or outcastes, still so called. They are credited with having assisted Râmânujâchâri in recovering the image of Krishna, called Shelva-pulle Râya, at Mêlukôte, from Delhi, whither it had been carried off by the Muhammadans. Hence they have the privilege of entering the temple once a year to pay their devotions. The following is Buchanan's account of the image and of its rescue:—"Although the image represents Krishna, it is commonly called Chilla-pulla Râya, or the darling prince; for Chillapulla is a term of endearment which mothers give to their infants, somewhat like our word darling. The reason of such an uncommon appellation being given to a mighty warrior is said to be as follows. On Râmânuja's going to Mêlukôte, to perform his devotions at that celebrated shrine, he was informed that the place had been attacked by the Turc king of Delhi who had carried away the idol. The Brahman immediately set out for that capital; and on his arrival he found that the king had made a present of the image to his daughter; for it is said to be very handsome, and she asked for it as a plaything. All day the princess played with the image; at night the god assumed his own beautiful form, and enjoyed her bed; for Krishna is addicted to such kinds of adventures. This had continued for some time when Râmânuja arrived, and called on the image, repeating at the same time some powerful mantrams; on which the idol immediately placed itself on the Brahman's knee. Having clasped it in his arms, he called it his Chillapulla and they were both instantaneously conveyed to Mêlukôte. The princess, quite disconsolate for the loss of her image, mounted a horse and followed as fast as she was able. She no sooner came near the idol than she disappeared, and is supposed to have been taken into its immediate substance; which in this country is a common way of the gods disposing of their favourites. A monument was built for the princess; but as she was a Turc, it would have been improper to place this building within the walls of the holy place; it has therefore been erected at the foot of the hill, under the most abrupt part of the rock."

[8] From what follows it is evident that darśana is not used here in the sense of doctrine or religious system, but in the sense of religious procession to visit a god or shrine.

[9] The pañcha mahâ s'abda commonly included among the attributes of great chieftains.

In (the matter of) this custom, the S'rî Vaishṇavas will set up the decree in all the bastis throughout the kingdom. As long as sun and moon endure, the Vaishṇava samaya will continue to protect the Jaina darśana. The Vaishṇavas cannot (be allowed to) look upon the Jainas as in a single respect different.

The tâtas of holy Tirumale, by consent of the blessed people of the whole kingdom,—the Jainas throughout the whole kingdom having given according to their doors house by house one fanam a year (to provide) for the personal protection of the god[10] at the tirtha of Beḷuguḷa—will with the gold so raised appoint month by month twenty servants for the personal protection (or as a body-guard) of the god; and with the remainder of the gold will cleanse and purify the ruined Jinâlayas: and as long as sun and moon endure, allowing no failure in this custom, and giving (the money) year by year, will acquire fame and merit.

This rule now made whoso transgresses is a traitor to the king, a traitor to the assembly (saṅgha) and to the congregation (samudâya).[1] Be he devotee, or be he village headman, that destroys this work of merit, they incur the guilt of killing a cow or a Brahman on the bank of the Ganges. Whoso takes away land given by himself or by another is born a worm in ordure for sixty thousand years.

Subsequent addition at the top.

. . . . dvi Seṭṭi of Kalleha and Busuvi Seṭṭi having made application to Bukka Râya, the tâtas of Tirumale came and had the . . . . . . repaired. And both parties uniting bestowed on Busuvi Seṭṭi the title of Siṅgha-nâyka.

The first part corresponds word for word with No. 124 (omitting the 2nd verse) down to "the flaming central eye of S'iva—this Narasimha." Then continues—To the flames of the wild-fire the rising pride of hostile kings, a cloud of the last deluge; to the lamp hostile kings, a blinding dust-storm; to the serpents hostile kings, a kite; to the groups of lotuses hostile kings, an elephant; to the mountains hostile kings, a discus weapon; to the elephants hostile kings, a lion—was Nṛisiṃha.

Be it well. Entitled to the five great drums, mahâ maṇḍalêśvara, lord of the chief city Dvârâvatî, a submarine fire to the ocean the Tulava forces, a wild-fire to rival heirs, an elephant to the lotus the Pâṇḍya family, gaṇḍa-bhêruṇḍa, hunter of the chiefs, plunderer of the Chôḷa camp (or capital), fierce in war, a Kâma of the Kali age, satisfier of the desires of all the eulogists, rejoicing in all gifts, obtainer of a boon from the goddess Vâsantikâ, sun in the sky of the Yâdava family, head-jewel on the crowns of chiefs, eager for war, champion over the Malapas,—while, distinguished with these and other titles, the auspicious Tribhuvana Malla, capturer of Talakâḍu, Koṅgu, Naṅgali, Noḷambavâḍi, Banavâse and Hânuṅgal, the mighty-armed Vîra Gaṅga the valiant Hoysaḷa Nârasiṃha Dêva, punishing the evil and protecting the good in the region of the South, was ruling the kingdom in peace and wisdom.

of king Vishṇu ; and after him, Hulla, the minister of king Nṛisiṃha Dêva. His guru was the jagad-guru Kukkuṭâsana Maladhâri dêva.

The great Jina temple at Baṅkâpura, built by ? the Uppaṭṭayta[2] , which was completely in ruins, he caused to be rebuilt anew.

Moreover in the same place—The Jinâlaya erected by Kaliviṭa[3] , so called because formerly he was given to robbery (kalitana) and adultery (viṭatva), which was completely ruined, he rebuilt, raising it as high as Kailâsa.

And in the great tîrtha of Kopana he made permanent grants of land and money for the saṅgha of 24 Jina munis.

And in that celebrated original tîrtha Kellaṅgere[4] , formerly erected by the Gaṅgas, of which by lapse of time only the name remained, he caused to be made a splendid abode for Jina, from the ground to the kalaśa, so as to stand to the end of time. And in Kellaṅgere he (also) made five large bastis and five beautiful ponds.

Hulla chamûpa's good qualities it is impossible to describe, for who can say how much water there is in the ocean ?

He also built an abode (or temple) for the 24 tîrthakaras in this chief tîrtha of Beḷguḷa. And he built a large Jina temple, which, like Gommaṭa, was an ornament to Gommaṭapura. Together with its cloisters, a dancing hall, a Jina house of stone on either side, a palace with royal gates adorned with all manner of carving, and an abode for the 24 tirthakaras.

Praises of Nayakîrtti siddhânta dêva, disciple of Guṇachandra siddhânta dêva, ornament of the śri-Mûla-saṅgha, Pustuka-gachcha, and Koṇḍakundânvaya.

On his coming from a tour of victory in all quarters, king Narasiṃha seeing him, presented with great joy for the Jinas Gommaṭa and Pârśvanâtha, and for this abode of the 24 images, the village of Savanêra, to continue without fear to the end of the world.

And appointed the mahâ maṇḍalâchârya Nayakîrtti siddhânta chakravartti as the âchâri thereof.

King Nârasiṃha, approving of this Jaina mansion which the ocean of good qualities Hulla daṇḍâ-dhipa had erected, on his begging for it, presented the village of Savanêra, to endure as long as ocean, sun, moon and the globe of the earth continue. (Boundaries of the village.)

The money obtained from this place will be used for repairing the âchâri's and other dwellings and the basadis, for the worship and decoration of the god, and for gifts of food to the people visiting the basadi and to the assembly of ṛishis. (Imprecatory verse.)

May Supârśva Dêva bless the minister Hulla Râja and his wife Padmâvatî with health, long life, glory and prosperity. (Praises of Padmalâ Dêvî. Praises of Bhânukirtti vratîndra.)

The sênâpati Hullapa made over the village of Savanêra, with pouring of water, to Bhânukîrtti yatipati, son of Nayakîrtti munîśvara.

(Abstract) :—Praise of the Jina śâsana.

Be it well to the Hoysaḷa family, sprung from Yadu. In it was born Vinayâditya : whose wife was Keliya Dêvi, formed by Brahma of all the beautiful things in the three worlds. Their son was Ereyaṅga : his praises.

Who is able to describe the sports of the valour of the arm of king Ereyaṅga : in a moment he burnt Dhârâ, the city of the ruler of Mâḷava ; he speedily struck fear into the camp (or city) of Chôḷa, who was scratching his arm in anxiety for war[5] ; he laid waste Chakragoṭṭa, and broke the king of Kaliṅga.

His wife was Êchala ; her praises. She bore to the king (a son) Vishṇu ; his praise.

Koyatûr[6] was cut in pieces, Koṅga Râyarâyapura[7] was burnt, the door of the Ghâṭs was closed, the city of Kañchi was made to tremble—by that king Vishṇu.

Moreover—With the tramp of his mighty army he trod to dust the fortress of the king of Virâṭa[8] , he made Vanavâsi a true forest abode (vanavâsa)—the king Vishṇu—and shook the great Vallûr.

Moreover—With the dust of his army of foot-soldiers he covered up the river Malaprahâriṇi[9] , and made his sword blunt with the blood of kings slain by him—king Vishṇu.

Moreover—To king Narasiṃha-varmma[10] like an axe to a tree or Paraśu-Râma to Sahasrabhuja, this wonderful king Vishṇu became the destroyer a hundred times of the Kshatriyas.

Râhu to (eclipse) the sun the great bravery of Adiyama[1]; a discus-weapon in smiting through the great mountain Veṅgiri; the wealth of Talavana-pura[2] he also seized, along with the victory over his enemy— that Vishṇu.

Moreover—The ocean of the army sent (against him) by the Emperor (Chakri) under Jagad-Dêva, the king of Mâḷava, and others, he drank up (like Agastya) in his might, taking them up in his hand, powerful as Death: and then with his sword he subdued the earth from the east to the west as far as the Kṛishṇa-vêṇî—Vishṇu—by the power of whose arms the Vindhya mountains were reduced to powder.

Moreover—A mighty lion to the king Iruṅgôḷa; an axe in cutting down the group of trees the Kadamba kings; so great fame did he gain by his actions and valour that this king Vishṇu's qualities cannot be compassed by words.

His wife was Lakshmî Dêvi: and to them was born Narasiṃha.

Barbbara, quit your pride; Chôḷa, make up your money into heaps; Chêra, seek for safety; Gauḍa, represent your case from a distance:—thus do the heralds at the court of the great king Narasiṃha continually proclaim, with shouts louder than thunder.

Further praises of Narasiṃha, who had the second name of Bhujabala Vîra Gaṅga, the valiant Hoysaḷa, who protects the four orders as the sea preserves its bounds. His wife was Êchala Dêvi.

By his (Narasiṃha's) own treasurer (bhaṇḍâri),—when, having destroyed all the race of enemies, he was returning from a tour of victory like the sun rising over the mountain of the east glittering with gems; having done obeisance at the two feet of the southern Kukkuṭêśvara Jina—was this treasury established for the promotion of the kingdom.

By his sarvvâdhikâri, who in management of affairs was superior to Yôgandha Râya, in knowledge of politics superior to Bṛihaspati; by the son of Lôkâmbikâ, the son of Jakki Râya, their eld st—a tree of plenty for the nourishment of the world:—

By the worshipper of the feet of Maladhâri svâmi, a sun in the sky of the Vâji-vaṃśa, a moon to the ocean in gifts to all the Jina temples in the Gaṅga country, &c., &c:—

By Huḷḷapa. [illegible] jewelled crown of ministers, was erected an abode for the twenty-four Jinêndras, looking that it should like the Malaya mountain produce sandal trees of lasting merit.

And to him, who on account of his having the qualities of a perfect head-jewel, bore the second name of Bhavya-chûḍâmaṇi, was further given—

To provide for offerings for the enjoyment of the holy munis of the Bhavya-chûḍâmaṇi Jina basti, for its repair, for the eight kinds of worship of the Jinêndra therein, of Pârśva-svâmi, of his lord Kukkutêśa, the lord of the three worlds—and in order to contract a marriage with the maiden the lady merit, and confirm it with a sealed document:—

The S'aka year 1081 having passed, in the year Pramâdi, in the bright fortnight of the month Pushya, Friday, the 14th, the time of the sun's going north; placing it under the Mûla-saṅgha, Dési-gaṇa and Pustaka-gachcha:—

Narasiṃha, as a Himâdri, caused to flow from the deep cavern of his uplifted kalaśa (otherwise peak) a Ganges stream, which meandering over the hand of Huḷḷa, ran to the middle of the lake the feet of his own twenty-four Jinas.

The king gave S'ravanêra. Its boundaries.

Be it well. In the year 1556 of the S'âlivâhana śaka, the year Bhâva, the 13th of the bright fortnight of Âshâḍha, Saturday, at the Brahma yôga—

The auspicious great king of kings, supreme lord of kings, a spear to the heads of hostile kings, a cage of adamant to those who claim his protection, a brother to the wives of others, marked with the signs of valour and virtuous renunciation, lord of the earth, establisher of the golden kalaśa, imperial lord of the six dharmmas,—the lord of the city of Mahisûr, Châma Râja Voḍeyar Ayya—

The priests, on account of their various troubles, having mortgaged to the merchant-householders the endowments made for the worship of Gummaṭa-nâtha svâmi of Beḷguḷa of the gods,—and the mortgage-holders having enjoyed possession of the same for a long time—

Châma Râja Voḍeyar Ayya, having inquired (into the matter), sent for the merchant-householders who held the mortgages and were in enjoyment of the property, and said "The loans which you have made to the priests we will pay and discharge."

On which the merchant-householders spoke the following words—"The loans which we have made to the priests, in order that merit may accrue to our fathers and mothers, we will make a gift of, with pouring of water."

All having spoken thus,—to the priests, at the hands of the merchant-householders, in the presence of Gummaṭa-nâtha svâmi, the god and the guru being witnesses, saying "as long as sun and moon endure do ye perform the worship of the god and be in peace"—was this dharmma-śâsana given as a release (from the debt).

In future whoso of the priests of Beḷguḷa shall mortgage the endowments, or whoso shall grant a mortgage thereon, is excommunicated from religion, and has no claim to place and property.

Should any, transgressing even this (warning), either give or receive in mortgage, the kings who shall rule this kingdom will have the rights of this god maintained according to the former custom.

To kings who, not knowing to do this, disregard it, will accrue the sin of slaying a thousand cows and Brahmans in Vâraṇâsi.

Such was the dharmma-śâsana which was written and given. Great prosperity. Fortune.

Be it well. While the capturer of Taḷakâḍu, the mighty Vira-Gaṅga Poysaḷa Dêva and the Piriya-Daṇḍanâyaka's kingdom was increasing on every side.

Having seen Daseyahaḷḷi on the right of śrî Gommaṭêśvara Dêva, Mâchi Seṭṭi, son of Râvabbe, the wife of Beṭṭi Seṭṭi, son of Chaladaṅka Râva Hedejaya Gavare Seṭṭi, with pleasure .... and the sons of .... Seṭṭi........ ...... these—for a load carried on the head.............

(Abstract) :—Praise of the Jina śâsana.

While the refuge of all the world, favourite of earth and fortune, mahârâjâdhirâja, paramêśvara, parama-bhaṭṭâraka, tilaka of the Satyâśraya kula, ornament of the Châḷukyas, śrîmat Tribhuvana-Malla Dêva's royal kingdom was increasing, to endure as long as sun, moon and stars :—

The king Vinayâditya was the sun in the sky of the Poysaḷa race, famed as walking the path of Manu.

[4] The Dewan Pûrnaiah.

[5] Dilli is Delhi ; Hêmâdri is Maleyûr in the Mysore district. Sudhâ is Sôde in North Kanara ; Saṅgîta, ura, said to be Hâḍuvalli in the same direction, or perhaps Yênur in South Kanara ; Svêtapura is Biḷgi, and Kshêma-vêṇu is Mûdu Bidari, both in South Kanara.

His son,—Ereyanga Poysala, having defeated all the hostile kings, ruled the kingdom in peace. That king Eraga's son, was king Ballâla.

His younger brother:—Bringing into subjection the Konga Seven and the Male Seven, he extended his possessions as far as Lôkigundi[6] —the king Vishnu-varddhana.

While, entitled to the five great drums, the mahâ mandalêśvara, lord of the good city of Dvârâvati, sun in the sky of the Yâdava race, a jewel of perfection, champion over the Malapas, having captured Talakâdu, Kongu, Nangali, Koyatûr, Tereyûr, Uchchangi, Taleyûr, Pombuchcha, these and many other hill fortresses, was protecting the Gangavâdi Ninety-six Thousand and ruling the kingdom in peace:—

The dweller at his lotus feet:—Nâga-varmma was a promoter of the Jina dharmma; his son was Mâramayya; and his son was Êchi Râja, of the Kaundinya gôtra, whose wife was Pôchikabbe. To them were born Bamma chamûpa and Ganga dandâdhipa.

(Praise of Ganga Râja's liberality.)

As he had re-captured Talekâd, so he took Konga, put to flight ......, by the strength of his arms split in pieces Bengiri, made the abode of Yama a home for Narasinga[7], and standing erect, brought the Ganga mandala under the orders of king Vishnu.

His elder brother,—Bamma, had for wife Bâganabbe, whose guru was Bhânukirtti-dêva. She bore a son Êcha dandâdhiśa.

He caused to be made Jinêndra temples in Kopana and other tîrthas, and in Belgola one with richly sculptured walls that drew the hearts of all who beheld it.[8]

After living for some time in happiness, rejoicing in bestowing gifts, and in promoting the Jina dharmma, he quitted his body in the manner of a sannyâsi and became a dweller in the world of gods.

Meanwhile, putting to flight hostile kings, driving out the Kongas, and bringing foreign countries into subjection to his lord, Boppa dandâdhipa, the eldest son of the brave Ganga, increased in greatness.

Boppa Dêva dandanâyaka (titles given in full), on the death of his elder brother[9] Êchi Râja dandanâyaka, had a tomb set up for him; and for the basadi which he had made, for repairs of the building and distribution of food, presented in Gangasamudra 10 khanduga of paddy land, a flower garden, a small tank east of the basadi, and the dry lands of the Bekka tank, with pouring of water, making them over to Mâdhavachandra-dêva, disciple of Subhachandra-siddhânta-dêva, of the śri-Mûla-sangha, Dêsiga-gana and Pustaka-gachcha.

(Imprecatory verse).

Praises of Êchi Râja's wife Êchikabbe. She, a lay-disciple of Subhachandra-siddhânta-dêva, with her mother-in-law Bâganabbe, set up the śâsanam, and having performed a great worship and bestowed large gifts, became ....

6 In Dhârwâd district.

7 Probably the Narasinga-varmma of Nos. 90 and 188.

9,	32,	For "be blinded" read "be taught blinded." The story of the blinding of Kunâla is thus related in the Rishimaṇḍala-prakaraṇa as given by Dr. Bhandarkar (Report on Sans. Mss. for 1883—4, p. 135). "Aśôkaśri's son was Kunâla, who was living at Ujjayini when he was 8 years old. Seeing him old enough for study, Aśôkaśri wrote to him Kuṇâlô adhiyatâṃ. His step-mother, who wanted the kingdom for her son, put unobserved an anusvâra over the letter a with collyrium, and thus changed adhiyatâṃ to aṃdhiyatâṃ. Kunâla obeyed what he thought were his father's orders and put out his own eyes."!
